...but maybe, if we read carefully enough, we could instead assume, based on your words, that none of us has any idea - maybe there are no evil forces at all laughing. And perhaps our government hasn't been square with us. Wouldn't be the first time, nor, I'd wager, the last.

I think it's rather weird to support a President on every position he represents, whether we agree with that position or not. He isn't God, for God's sake...just a fallible human, like you and me. This, without even getting into the question of his generalized competency for the job. Frankly, if he's wrong, he's WRONG and we have an obligation to try to correct his path. We can argue about whether he is wrong until doomsday, but eventually we must take the lead.

We condemn other peoples of history of marching lock-step with their leaders down dubious paths, whether they be Fascist, Communist, self-styled two-bit dictators or whatever. Should we not be more circumspact when it comes to our own leaders so that we can at least try to keep the worst parts of history from repeating themselves?

That's all for me - the weekend is here. Have a good one.

Look up word "vandalism"

Look up word "Disrespect"

Learn difference

you are suggesting vandalism, what was done was disrespect

Not pleased with it but it is likely protected speech

Well stated, Brad!

Read General Smedley Butler's book (circa 1940) and you will see just how right that last statement of yours really is...

Also, if you read "Confessions of an Economic Hit Man" by John Perkins (recently on the Best Seller lists for months), his answer to yachtboy's question about "Why Iraq" is:

1) A great strategic location in the Middle East; easy access to the Arabian Sea and many Middle Eastern countries of interest. (No doubt why we are building 3 or 4 permanent bases there).

2) Oil reserves some say are as great as those in Saudi Arabia.

3) Between the Tigris and Euphrates rivers, the largest amount of fresh water in the Middle East.

Many have asked why we have no exit policy for Iraq. Uh, with all the economic and geopolitical reasons given above, I don't think our gummint wants to exit.

I guess "we the people" had a chance to decide if the above strategy was worth the maiming and death of our youth and countless innocent civilians. Looks like 51% went along with the plan...

P.S. As Perkins points out in "Confessions", maybe, just maybe, the Islamist world isn't mad at us because of our "life style", but rather that they are tired of us jerking them around, our tinkering in their politics and having to dance to our tune. (Again, before you turn your flame throwers on, give "Confessions of an Economic Hit Man" a quick read). Or better yet, have W loan you his Bible and read about "walking a mile in the other man's shoes". Imagine yourself for a moment as the citizen of another country. For decades the CIA has been tinkering with your politics, bribing officials, arranging assassinations and fixing elections. After decades of this, mightn't you finally get a little pissed off?

Just because somebody in government erects a "security" fence doesn't mean it's legally off limits to the public. The government has a long

It just shows you how easily a nation can crumble when faced with adversity.
How did we ever get through two world wars and a civil war?

I'm in Brooklyn and I was actually going say that Galai Zahal is usually stronger than that, but it has been a while since I've listened to it. Maybe it's wasn't previously as strong as I recall. The memory does play 'tricks' sometimes.

Anyway, there's also a pretty decent signal from RNZI on 15720 tonight, and Iran is booming in on 9495.

Also sounds like a pirate might be tuning up on 6925, but maybe it's just noise.

Does this include trade? :-)

There are several gas pipelines running from Alberta have gas moving along at almost 100mph, 24-7..

NAFTA hearings, too numerous to list, have determined that America needs to give back 4 Billion in illegally

MOST logging companies in the US and Canada reforest.. this is not the case in S. and Central American countries where the forests are being harvested and replaced with cities.

which is why we Americans should do More of our own logging. Indeed Logging here and replanting in varieities that grow fast and soak up
CO2 we might soak more CO2 as we build our houses, esp as we build ou r

It's illegal, and it's called "desecration of a venerated object". Google the phrase. Laws vary from state to state, of course, but my guess is that if you find a state without such a statute, it would be an exception to the rule. I'm betting they all have similar codes.

For another thing, it's malicious mischief that's sure to cause emotional harm to the living relatives; as well as incurring the wrath of the criminal justice system, I'll bet that's actionable in civil court. I also have to wonder if some plots are considered private property according to local statutes. They're paid for, and they're inherited by the descendants of the lot owner in some cases. There's another violation of law. And of course, don't we all know someone who was cited by a cop for public urination? And how about disturbing the peace if someone saw him do it? Those sites are visited by followers of the deceased; seeing someone pissing on the grave of your favorite president is bound to stir up some trouble. (I admit, that one's a bit iffy.) ;)

That's not even mentioning the fact that the putz ran away from the security detail. That ought to tell you something right there. Several somethings, in fact.

Keep your eyes on the ongoing Iranian nuke non-negotiations for your answer on what would have occurred with Iraq had the U.N. been allowed to dictate terms.

That is why there is the House and Senate. By god, you are aware of them, right?

The difference is that he was elected into office. Whether or not you personally believe he was elected is irrelevant unless you are a prospective dictator. Are you?.

On what basis are you to judge his competency?

Please show us the facts, not rhetoric, on exactly what points he is wrong.
I expect you to show verifiable and relevant facts from your vast international intelligence sources. You imply that your "intelligence" is superior.
Are you g-g-g-g-od?

You obviously have no clue what it is like to live under Fascism or Communism.
But that is certainly not surprising considering the pathetic state of our education system.
An education system that has become Socialist and conveniently omits the history of these hineous regimes. That is exactly what Fascist and Communist regimes do in their "education' camps.

So in a sense, you are correct. This country is turning into a Fascist Communist state. Unfortunately for you, your barking up the wrong tree. As the CSNY said: "Teach your children well."

I suggest you stop reading the Left-Wing propaganda blogs and start a library of balanced reading material consisting of books from well respected authors. In at least a few years of intensive reading you will have enough knowledge to at least coherently argue the President's competency.

I'm so sorry we sucked all that oil and business away from the Communists.

I hope that just once naive Americans would have a taste of what it would be like if our enemies had control of a vital strategic U.S. resource. Sorry but the 70's oil embargo was just not severe enough. Besides, it was such a long time ago that the current crop of college boys haven't a clue.

The rules to enter the U.S. are crystal clear and are available on the web in several languages.
Yes David, the U.S. does indeed treat all foreigners attempting to enter the country as Soviets.

Good question!

(insert standard "I am not a lawyer" disclaimer HERE)

Several ways:

Trespassing - Whether it's public or private property,
a person's mere presence can be a crime

Improper Behavior - I don't know the legal terms, but in almost any situation there's an expressed or implied contract of behavior as a condition of admission. For example, if you go into a supermarket and rearrange the shelves against the owner's wishes, you can be prosecuted, even if you don't damage anything at all.
And that's minor compared to showing disrespect to a gravesite.

Then there are all sorts of special rules about gravesites, current and former presidents, their families, etc.

It's not protected speech/expression at all. Might even come under the heading of "hate speech".

Now if a person were to speak about wanting to do the things pictured, that would probably be protected speech. Or if they constructed a replica of the gravesites and carried on the way they did, they might be protected.

Just IMO. The guy's a real dummy, if for no other reason than that he showed his face.

And while I have very little (if any) regard for either of those former presidents, does that guy think anyone will change their mind about them because of his antics?

A grove of softwood conifers is not nearly as efficient for storing CO2 as an old growth, mixed forest.

''There are four components of carbon storage in a forest ecosystem.
These are trees, plants growing on the forest floor (understory material), detritus such as leaf litter and other decaying matter on the forest floor, and forest soils. Carbon is sequestered in the process of plant growth as carbon is captured in plant cell formation and oxygen is released. As the forest biomass experiences growth, the carbon held captive in the forest stock increases. Simultaneously, plants grow on the forest floor and add to this carbon store. Over time, branches, leaves and other materials fall to the forest floor and may store carbon until they decompose. Additionally, forest soils may sequester some of the decomposing plant litter through root/soil interactions.''

Sorry all you Fascistas. Looks like you need to intend to damage something for ''desecration'' to be a crime:

S 145.22 Cemetery desecration in the second degree.
A person is guilty of cemetery desecration in the second degree when with intent to damage property of another person, and having no right to do so nor any reasonable ground to believe that he has such right, he damages any real or personal property maintained as a cemetery plot, grave, burial place or other place of interment of human remains.
Cemetery desecration in the second degree is a class A misdemeanor.

S 145.23 Cemetery desecration in the first degree.
A person is guilty of cemetery desecration in the first degree when with intent to damage property of another person, and having no right
do so nor any reasonable ground to believe that he has such right, he:
(a) damages any real or personal property maintained as a cemetery plot, grave, burial place or other place of interment of human remains in an amount exceeding two hundred fifty dollars; or
(b) commits the crime of cemetery desecration in the second degree
defined in section 145.22 of this article and has been previously convicted of the crime of cemetery desecration in the second degree within the preceding five years.
Cemetery desecration in the first degree is a class E felony.

Mantra? Don't need no steenkin' mantra. Just the facts, Jack.

I'm surprised this horse ain't been beaten to death yet.

First:

Nothing against Casey or our troops there. They are indeed heroes. This is not about them and their bravery but the lies of their "leadership".

Second:

There ain't no WMDs.

They went to Syria...they went to Turkey... the Russians moved them...the Martians took them to the Planet Melmac...yadda, yadda, yadda. We've had not one, not two but THREE inspectors there and ALL of them said--are you ready?-- "NO WMDs".

We had our troops there looking for over TWO YEARS and they said--are you ready?-- "NO WMDs". If Bush could pull them out of his hat, any proof, any kind of proof at all, don't you think he would have by now?

Around Christmas time of 2004, even Bush and company admitted there were no WMDs. Even they are not beating that horse any more; why are you?

There was NO Al Queda connection.

There was NO 9/11 connection.

There was NO yellowcake ore.

Therefore, the circle is complete--it is indeed about a mother that lost her child to a pack of lies.

P.S.

Even though its been proven time and again that there are no WMDs, just for the sake of discussion, let's say that Iraq did have them.

But then, so what? Iraq is (or at least was) a sovereign nation. They can have WMDs if they want, like any other sovereign nation (and please, don't think that I like or support the thought). England has WMDs; the Pakis have WMDs; the Indians have WMDs; our business partners/Wal-Mart buddies (the Chinese) have WMDs and several other countries have "the bomb" and our kids aren't getting maimed/mutilated/killed for those WMDs.

So one more time, repeat after me...

THERE--AIN'T--NO--WMDs

The Iraq "war" is based on a PACK--OF--LIES.

The mother with the dead kid is right.

Communist Canad'uh Deports Immigrant To Her Death

Falun Gong practitioner Ms. Xiaoping Hu was deported to China on August 5, despite protests from thousands of Canadians, NGOs and Members of Parliament.

"Our government has not lived up to its responsibility. .Anyone who faces a risk of human rights abuses in China should be protected from that fate, not cavalierly sent back to harm.", wrote Mr. Alex Neve, secretary general of Amnesty International of Canada, in his statement regarding the deportation.

Falun Gong supporters gathered in front of the offices of the Minister of Public Safety Anne McLellan and Minister of Immigration Joe Volpe on August 9 to express their despair and indignation over what they consider a "tragic deportation of their fellow practitioner," according to a Falun Dafa Association of Canada (FDAC) press statement. They were also dismayed that it took the government three days to make their decision known.

There is strong concern that Ms. Hu may suffer a similar fate to Canadian art professor Kunlun Zhang. Despite being a Canadian citizen, Mr. Zhang's adherence to Falun Gong resulted in Chinese authorities sentencing him to three years in a forced labour camp while he was visiting China in 2000. He was rescued back to Canada in 2001, but not before being severely tortured with an electric baton. He was also forced to denounce his beliefs, and then to thank his torturers on camera, leaving him with a feeling "worse than death."

There are other strong precedents for fearing for Ms. Hu's safety. In a similar case last March, Mr. Jiang Renzheng and his family were sent back to China from Germany because the German refugee board did not consider them to be at risk. One month after arriving in China, Mr. Jiang was taken from his in-laws' home and sentenced to three years of forced labour, leaving his wife and two young children behind.

"We are at a sad loss to comprehend our government's actions today", said Xun Li, president of the FDAC, "We ask our Canadian government to take responsibility for monitoring and ensuring Ms. Hu's safety in China."

Prior to her arrival in Canada, Ms. Hu had already been detained in a brainwashing centre in China, and like Mr. Zhang, was forced into renouncing her beliefs. It is clear that she is already well known to Chinese authorities. Also, like Mr. Zhang, she joined more than 200,000 people who have written in to the Clearwisdom.net website to rescind such "conversions" extracted under pressure.

"The determination by the Martin government that a Falun Gong practitioner returned to China is not at risk is precisely analogous to a statement in 1938 that a Jew sent back to Nazi Germany would not be at risk," said Attorney Clive Ansley, a Vancouver Island-based expert on Chinese legal issues.

For Ms. Hu there is another factor that makes her return to China dangerous. While in Canada, she publicly declared her withdrawal from the Chinese Communist Party. According to Hao Fengjun, the former officer of the Gestapo-like "610 Office" who defected to Australia in June, the CCP is tracking down and persecuting anyone who openly quits the party.

Technically yes, absolutely! But countries and airlines have agreements regarding overflights in other countries.

I am sure the passenger list MUST be provided to the U.S. authorities for

Oh no, you are one who thinks an ex-president is more entitled to rights, protections or laws than any other citizen?

The Egyptians used to think their rulers were Gods, you are one step closer to that assumption... a very false one... no matter how well they preserved those mummies--not a one has ever come back to life. Why would a president be any more important than any other public servant employed by the people?

I tell you, if they dug up regans' corpse, and were able to reanimate it, it would have so many peoples lips glued to its bottom--it couldn't even walk!

What is a scary thing, some of these people think they have the sense to comment on policy and laws!

Besides, I don't think regan even got wet... making the kid clean the cement with a toothbrush and bleach would be a fitting punishment...

Let's face it, burning a dummy in effigy would have been very fitting (the dummy part especially!) Not only was regan a b-grade actor, he couldn't even act the part of president well enough to fool a large number of people--in many ways it still was a b-grade movie.

Urinating on the grave is not the best method to make the statement that regan was an idiot, and a large segment of americans idiots for letting the man finish his presidency without impeachment.

In California we still are attempting to cope with all the mentally ill he threw out of asylums and onto the streets (looks like some made it here to usenet!) His attacks on the flight controllers union still is having a devastating effect on wage earners... the list goes on and on...

The urinating was on the grass by Nixon's grave.

Reagan set the wheels in motion to destroy the United States. We

Brian,

There may be a grain of truth in what you say, but only because I really don't understand the exact mechanism of how the inspections were conducted. If the WMDs were buried in a remote hole in the middle of nowhere in the desert, sure, Saddam wasn't going to tell them where to look. I think your example above is quite simplistic and that yes, you do have an intuitive grasp of the obvious.

But I imagine they had to be constructed somewhere with fairly sophisticated equipment and had to be built with certain materials. Did the inspectors look for factories, orders for and shipments of certain materials? Sorry, I don't know the methodology of the three inspectors, but the fact remains that at the end of the day, virtually nothing was found.

In any event, I believe you are taking my statements out of context and just looking at one tree rather than the whole forest.

* We searched for TWO YEARS after Saddam was gone and still didn't find anything.

* There was no yellowcake.

* Even W himself admitted there were no WMDs.

So I'm not sure why you are defending a position even W has given up as a dead horse.

You're absolutely right---someone is gullible, but I don't think it's me...

So you do like to be pissed on!

It has nothing to do with the man. It has everything to do with pissing on anyone's grave. You seem to condone it. You and David are from the same mould. Maybe you guys could just piss on each other.
I'll bet it would be your first bath in months.

If these alleged weapons were buried they weren't a threat to the USA or Iraq's neighbors and therefore did not justify a silly ''Shock and Awe'' blitzkrieg.

Rumsfeldt, et al, are a bunch of pervs who can only get a stiffie when

I owned a Satellit 500 and loved it even though there was no selectable sideband sync detector. When the Satellit 700 came out, I got one, sent it back, and got a second one. I found the Satellit 500 to be BETTER than the 700, even though the 700 had a selectable sideband sync detector that, by the way, was flawed, but still worked somewhat. My 500 had much sharper bandwidth filters and much better sound. The wide filter on the 500 was a bit wider than the 700, resulting in much more treble sound, but still narrow enough to use most of the time. The narrow bandwidth on the 500 was MUCH SHARPER than on the 700, yet still produced reasonable sound without excess distortion. It really cut out most adjacent station interference. The narrow bandwidth on the 700 was not narrow enough, and therefore, you needed to use the sync detector. Problem is, the sync detector on the 700 is flawed, and howled unless you turned the bass control all the way off so the sound was nothing but treble sounding.

The biggest mistake I made was to sell my 500. It was great. The 700 didn't stay around very long before I got rid of it.

I own a big Grundig AM/FM/Shortwave wooden cabinet floor model radio that has a built in Phonograph in the top of the radio.It says so right there on the front speaker (pot metal sign thingy,Grundig) Grundig.A couple of months ago,I looked at the two pamplets inside of an envelope thingy that came with the radio,owners manual and an instruction manual thingy.No where does the owners manual and the instruction say Grundig,instead,they say,Telefunken.The date (as best as I could tell that is printed inside of one of the manuals/pamplets thingy) of manufacture of the radio was 1957.I bought the radio for $14.00 (fourteen dollars) about nine years ago at a Goodwill store that used to be on Palmyra Street (winos and drunks and freaks kept breaking into that downtown Jackson Goodwill store so much,Goodwill had to shut the store down,I am serious!) here in Jackson,Mississippi.(www.devilfinder.com Cool Buildings Of Jackson) Not long after that at the same Goodwill store,I bought a big wooden cabinet Telefunken AM/FM/ table model radio for $4.00. (four dollars) That radio also has an envelope thingy with an owners manual/pamplet inside of the rear panel of the radio.I couldn't find a date,but I believe the radio dates back to the 1960's,perhaps late 1950's.Needless to say,my old radios are not for sale or trade.So,why does my floor model Grundig radio have Telefunken owners manual and instruction manual/pamplets inside of the radio,did it used to be Telefunken/Grundig or Grundig/Telefunken,whatever? Oviously,they are the proper and correct manuals/pamplets for the radio,according to the pictures.

yeah, yeah, I have that real failing, not very concerned about urine on my grave after I am done with this world. If I ever make it back here (slim chance) it will be by reincarnation--the way that works--you get a new body... this old body will need to be used to feed the trees and other creatures of this planet--it is the natural way of things... what becomes of this body when my use has expired is just not a concern of mine, you would think most would have better things to worry about.

I guess if you are confined to an institution making paintings, weaving rugs and making bead necklaces your world is so small one can be concerned over such, I can't.

The only Grundig I own and have owned before is my Telefunken AM/FM/Shortwave/Phonograph wooden cabinet floor model radio that is masquerading as a Grundig radio,I think.It is sitting on my hardwood floor near the corner by one of the front windows in my living room.I have never owned any other Grundig radios before (nowdays,the name Grundig means absolutely nothing to me at all,those modern day Grundigs,that is) this one and in my opinion,when Grundig went to China,they screwed up.Panasonic had some Panaonic radios made in Germany.

You have a total lack of understanding. It's not the person. It's not the urine. It's the actual act of doing that intentionally to someone's grave. It amounts to you walking up to a person and saying "fuck you" as you flip them off. It's also disrespectful to all of the deceased's living relatives. I figured that at least you would understand. I knew that David did not have a clue and he never will.
he just does not get it.

If you look at the ''Sold Archives'' you'll see the 650 going for $600 more than the 700.

The 650 is a piece of art. It has a motorized tracking preselector and a 15 Watt audio power amp.

I have had people get "in my face", "flip me off" and sling vulgarities at me, haven't we all? I can't kid you, it is upsetting at times, when I was younger and more ignorant, I thought physical force might stop it, then I realized that would never work and gave it up. Further down the road, I learned that it is actually nothing to be concerned about, their opinions and actions are not a refection on myself, however, if I grant them control of my actions--I end up looking an idiot. Hey, let behave poorly, then the rest of the world can know them for what they are...

If you ever find someone relieving themselves on my headstone, once I have left here, give 'em a toothbrush, bleach and have 'em scrub it on down--I'll be watching and get a good laugh out of it and the young man will learn an important lesson... Please pardon the brief commercial announcement.

The good folks at Kiwa are selling a Kiwa loop on my behalf on eBay.
This unit was purchase new in 1998 or so and almost never used (due to local high RF environment). Kiwa has bench-tested and tweaked this unit and has it posted at this URL:

http://cgi.ebay.com/ws/eBayISAPI.dll?ViewItem&item=5797647446

If you know anyone who's interested in one of these relatively rare units, this would be a perfect opportunity to buy one.

How did you know I was spontaneously spawned?

The whole point of Homey doing this and publishing the pictures was to make you upset. You have behaved in a magnificent manner.

I pee'd on the Picasso statue in front of the Chicago City Hall once.
I had to go, and it seemed as good a spot as any at 4 AM in the snow.

The price difference when used is interesting, although I guess the 650 was, for one reason or another, quite a bit more expensive when new as well. The 650 doesn't look as big as the 800...is that correct? In general, how is the build quality of the 650? I've heard from several people that it has amazing sound.

My favorite was the TR-6001 (Satellit 210), closely followed by the Satellit 3400. These were the last of their radios that used the turret bandswitch on the SW bands.
The 3400 improved upon earlier designs by using dual-gate MOSFETS for the RF amplifier and the 1st mixer on the SW ranges. In addition to this, a 2MHz crystal filter was used at the 1st I.F. on the SW ranges.
Another thing that was used was a Variometer that tracked along with the main tuning capacitor on the LW/MW/SW1 ranges to provide additional RF selectivity. Most of the coils are wound with Litz wire, which gives the coils a very high Q.
Polypropolyne capacitors were used in the audio stages, giving this radio quite a good sound.
When I opened up the Satellit 700, it looks like they got away from this type of design, instead, using some sort of Philips? radio chip. Not a bad thing.....the AOR7030 radios have been using a Philips TDA1572 as their 2nd I.F. subsystem since the beginning.

I am fed up with your Great Game bullshit. You see everything as a Big Contest between America and China. Us good, them bad. Everything and everybody can be sacrificed so that Us can win. Uzbekistan? Iraq? Who cares? As long as we control the resources those countries contain and not China, the people who actually LIVE there can go to hell, for they are expendable pawns in the Game. A nuke in New York? So what, as long as we invade Iran because of it, and grab their oil so that China can't. New Yorkers and Iranians are pawns in the Game too, and they might as well be cardboard cutouts, because infinite numbers of them can be burned in the furnace of imperial ambition. You are not only psychotic, you are EVIL. You have implied that regime change in China is worth any price, even a nuclear war, even as you savage CCP nomenklatura for saying the same thing about America. This sort of thing led to the ruin of many countries during the Cold War, and almost led to a nuclear holocaust. All in the name of the Game, all so that one side could stand on the rubble of the world and say that they won. I don't want that to happen again.

Ok, now let's answer the question. We need to fight them on their own turf. You can't fight them militarily and win, as Iraq has proved. You can't go around invading countries, cause either they move next door (as in Afghanistan, they moved to Pakistan) or they run circles around our bureaucratic military (Iraq). We need better propaganda. We need to fire Pattiz and return the VOA to its Cold War self, except in Arabic and Middle Eastern languages instead of Russian. We need a Radio Free Islam. We need an effective satellite news service, not Al Houri (very lame and obvious) but something that looks and sounds reasonable to the average Arab, sort of a black clandestine Al Jazeera. We need to convince the average Saudi that American democracy is better than Arab totalitarianism. If we lose the House of Saud or Hosni Mubarak in the process, so what, we just ally ourselves with the new leaders. We need Radio Free Islam to broadcast sermons by liberal imams that use the Quran to say that suicide bombing is wrong and that liberal democracy and freedom for both men and women is right. We need RFI to broadcast prayers for peace and freedom, to compete with the Saudi shortwave service. If I can figure this out, why can't Bush? Bush seems to be snakebit in everything he does-it's either ineffective or backfires. He's so cocooned in his hermetically sealed world of privilege and power, and the CIA is so entrenched in bureaucracy, that they can't concieve of how to really win this war except to turn America into a New Rome that will crush everybody, domestic and foreign, who opposes them. That simply won't work. Rome eventually was overrun by barbarians, and the New Rome doesn't have much of a chance to get off the ground.

Ms.Xiaoping would probally/likely get the crap beat out of here before she got deported if from here in Jackson,Mississippi.(well,most likely,not really because that would cause such a big stink with the govts,but y'all get me driff) Over there at the Tysons chicken plant in Pelahatchie,Mississippi (about twenty miles East of Jackson) it is good sport for some of those guys over there to sometimes jump them illegal aliens.The illegal aliens over there know if they go to the law about it,they will get deported.

True enough, but he made CA his home. It's where he made his mark in showbiz and politics.

IIRC, Nixon was a California native.

Even that's too much. CFs are crap. After some of the advertised "long life" ones blew, I started writing the install and fail dates on the white plastic bases. On average, they last anywhere from a tenth to a quarter of the advertised number of hours. As soon as the last of the most recent four-pack fails, I'll send the lot back under the guarantee. I'd spend the refund on incandescents, but they'll probably just send another pack of the same shit.

The unfortunate truth is, those life estimates (though factual for what they are) are based upon installing a lamp in a test jig, and leaving it to burn until it burns out. The machine has a light sensor and timer and records the amount of time the lamp burns.

In the real world, however, we turn our lights on and off, and every time we turn them on, the current inrush significantly decreases the life expectancy of the lamp. If we simply left them on, they'd last pretty much as long as claimed. Look at some of those old incandescents that have been used in inaccessible places without switches, some of which have lasted for decades.

I once dreamed I built a new shed in my back yard.The way I did it was to plant some trees in a four rows close together to serve as the post/studs of my shed and somehow or other (in my dream) I attatched plywood to the trees to serve as the walls.I dont remember what I did for a roof.In my dream though,it turned out to be a neat looking shed.

Grasshoppers don't need shotguns. The robins barely make a dent in

If robins bothered grasshoppers, grasshoppers would foster a gene which makes them taste bad to birds.

2308. Permafrost [OT]

Interesting article

http://www.newyorker.com/fact/content/?050425fa_fact3

Any piece of ground that has remained frozen for at least two years is, by definition, permafrost. In some places, like eastern Siberia, permafrost runs nearly a mile deep; in Alaska, it varies from a couple of hundred feet to a couple of thousand feet deep.

Fairbanks, which is just below the Arctic Circle, is situated in a region of discontinuous permafrost, meaning that the city is freckled with regions of frozen ground. One of the first stops on Romanovsky's tour was a hole that had opened up in a patch of permafrost not far from his house. It was about six feet wide and five feet deep. Nearby were the outlines of other, even bigger holes, which, Romanovsky told me, had been filled with gravel by the local public-works department.

The holes, known as thermokarsts, had appeared suddenly when the permafrost gave way, like a rotting floorboard. (The technical term for thawed permafrost is talik, from a Russian word meaning "not frozen.") Across the road, Romanovsky pointed out a long trench running into the woods. The trench, he explained, had been formed when a wedge of underground ice had melted. The spruce trees that had been growing next to it, or perhaps on top of it, were now listing at odd angles, as if in a gale. Locally, such trees are called "drunken." A few of the spruces had fallen over. "These are very drunk," Romanovsky said.

In Alaska, the ground is riddled with ice wedges that were created during the last glaciation, when the cold earth cracked and the cracks filled with water. The wedges, which can be dozens or even hundreds of feet deep, tended to form in networks, so that when they melt they leave behind connecting diamond- or hexagonal-shaped depressions.

A few blocks beyond the drunken forest, we came to a house where the front yard showed clear signs of ice-wedge melt-off. The owner, trying to make the best of things, had turned the yard into a miniature-golf course.

Around the corner, Romanovsky pointed out a house-no longer occupied-that had basically split in two; the main part was leaning to the right and the garage toward the left.
The house had been built in the sixties or early seventies; it had survived until almost a decade ago, when the permafrost under it started to degrade.
Romanovsky's mother-in-law used to own two houses on the same block. He had urged her to sell them both. He pointed out one, now under new ownership; its roof had developed an ominous-looking ripple.
(When Romanovsky went to buy his own house, he looked only in permafrost-free areas.)

"Ten years ago, nobody cared about permafrost," he told me. "Now everybody wants to know."
Measurements that Romanovsky and his colleagues at the University of Alaska have made around Fairbanks show that the temperature of the permafrost has risen to the point where, in many places, it is now less than one degree below freezing. In places where permafrost has been disturbed, by roads or houses or lawns, much of it is already thawing.

Romanovsky has also been monitoring the permafrost on the North Slope and has found that there, too, are regions where the permafrost is very nearly thirty-two degrees Fahrenheit. While the age of permafrost is difficult to determine, Romanovsky estimates that most of it in Alaska probably dates back to the beginning of the last glacial cycle.
This means that if it thaws it will be doing so for the first time in more than a hundred and twenty thousand years.

"It's really a very interesting time,
" he said.

One of the risks of rising temperatures is that this storage process can start to run in reverse. Under the right conditions, organic material that has been frozen for millennia will break down, giving off carbon dioxide

or methane, which is an even more powerful greenhouse gas. In parts of the Arctic, this is already happening. Researchers in Sweden, for example, have been measuring the methane output of a bog known as the Stordalen mire, near the town of Abisko, for almost thirty-five years. As the permafrost in the area has warmed, methane releases have increased, in some spots by up to sixty per cent. Thawing permafrost could make the active layer more hospitable to plants, which are a sink for carbon. Even this, though, probably wouldn't offset the release of greenhouse gases. No one knows exactly how much carbon is stored in the world's permafrost, but estimates run as high as four hundred and fifty billion metric tons.

Nope they picked up about 750 jobs with the brac thing. I don't pay too much attention since I retired though. I think it was a Navy wing and a Marine Squadron. I think that they are up to about 50K folks now.

Actually, I don't have any...but I'm looking for some. I saw one today at a flea market for $20. It appeared to my casual glance to be in pretty good shape. The seller told me that the only problem with it was the power cord; it was missing when he acquired the radio, and so the one on it now is a half-assed temporary sort of fix. I should have bought it -- but not being a collector, having a suspicious nature, and knowing pretty much zero about radio tubes and the devices they sit in all added up to me passing on it and spending my money elsewhere. Of course, now I expect all sorts of verbal abuse and I probably deserve it. Anyway, I'd like to hear what the veterans in these parts think of that radio as far as performance, etc. goes. Is it worth having, as a casual SW listener? I imagine that a collector of boat anchors (albeit small ones) might want it, but would I? I've got a modern portable, a Grundig S350 that I never tote Would the S-120 have done things that the Grundig won't? Besides getting me into the illustrious ranks of the non-toters, that is. Thanks in advance.

They really aren't boatanchors anyway. It's a single conversion hybrid. Might have been worth 20 bucks to rob it for parts but I doubt it. You should have offered 5.

It doesn't matter who said anything. Anybody with a brain and some knowledge of Sadam's history can easily deduce his intentions. And using your reasoning , if any politician you favor were in the position and he had WMDs. You would have been all for it. You people just hate Bush and to hell with doing the right thing.

1. Iran is well equipped and a morally motivated nation. It has a long history of being a superpower during the pre-Islamic era and geo-politically well linked with the neighbouring power groups. Simple run over like Iraq and Afghanistan by US is therefore not possible.
2. Any offensive against Iran would amount to destabilising Pakistan, Russia and China in this region. Russia has openly announced in June 2005 that she would continue her support for the development of Iran nuclear programme. However, Pakistan is insisting upon Iran to continue negotiations with EU to resolve the issue peacefully in accordance with IAEA statute.
3. So far neither China nor India has expressed any reaction on Iranï¿½s nuclear programme.
US consider Iran and Syria, both Muslim countries, as tyrannical states. In February 2005 US Secretary of State Ms Condoleezza Rice warned Syria to stop its support to anti-Israel militants. US foreign policy especially after re-election of Bush has been observed very aggressive against the Muslim States, which are considered strong in their area of influence or can pose threat to the Jewish state. Regarding relations with Pakistan so far US has not recognised Pakistan as a nuclear state and even expresses apprehensions of nuclear weapons falling in the hands of fundamentalists and extremists. Dr A Q Khan has been accused of passing nuclear technology to ï¿½rogueï¿½ states. US is strengthening Indian offensive capability by sanctioning supply of F-18 fighters and latest missile defence system Patriot Advanced Capability ï¿½ (PAC-3). During Indian Defence Minister Pranab Mukherjeeï¿½s visit to US on 28 June 2005 his counterpart Donald Rumsfeld signed 10-years Defence Pact. The agreement includes strengthening of defence capabilities of India especially in weapon production, cooperation on missile defence and of transfer of nuclear technology for peaceful purposes.
The above analysis vividly indicates US aggressive intentions on some pretext against Iran. US at present is covertly aligning her allies against Iran and looking for the opportunity to initiate the offensive. Most probable hypothesis is that US would make Iranï¿½s nuclear development programme the pretext for launching offensive.

Under such an eventuality Russia would guard Iranï¿½s interest to pre-empt US intrusion towards CAS and Russia. Any offensive action of US on Iran would amount to annexation of Gwadar Port and Karachi Port for making a ï¿½bridge-headï¿½. She would make safe access for India to provide logistic support to the US forces. In this regard she would neutralise Pakistan military capabilities through electronic jamming and containing its troops through limited offensive on Eastern and Western borders and to block and keep China away from the battlefield. Both US and India know that any intrusion in Pakistan would invoke Chinaï¿½s bitter reaction against them. All these reactions would result into a world war.

In brief the big powers would make Iran, Afghanistan, Pakistan and India as the battleground. In this scenario both India and Israel would launch pre-emptive strike on Pakistanï¿½s nuclear strongholds and defence installations. As declared by Pakistan that any attempt on its nuclear installation would amount to strong reaction against that country. This reaction, under all possibility, would initiate nuclear war. Both Russia and China would also react to guard their strategic interests in Iran and Pakistan respectively. Initiation of nuclear weapons would amount to mass destruction and elimination of most of the global civilisation. Vast areas littered with human bodies would serve as feast for the Gog Magog. Revelation of Gog and Magog is not a fiction but a reality as revealed in the Holy Quran ï¿½Until the Gog and Magog (people) are let through (their barrier) and they swiftly swarm from every hill.ï¿½ (21:96). Only Allah knows when and from where this revelation would materialise.

You are probably right on the price range. I see quite a few on Ebay

His refusal to do so says more about his attitude and upbringing than any of his thoughtless and hurtful postings in rec.radio.shortwave. He seems to be very proud of the fact that he can buy expensive radios using the refunded deposit money from his empty beer containers and has frequently posted the fact. It appears he is well on his way to purchasing his next radio. Anyone caring about his well-being should mention the good work of Alcoholics Anonymous to him.

Dug her ass right up! She was too damn ugly to have sex with before she died. The old bag o bones fell apart in my hands! She didn't complain about much either other than the lousy sex she got from those foursomes with you, Mike and her husband.

love dem bones....dem bones....dem bones

Skeleton rides 50 cents a pop! If you can stand the smell....I wonder is she stunk that bad in life?

She is very fresh but not that fresh!

hehe...I love dem bony women....rotten to the core.....

Please accept my apology for abusing her. I'm sorry that I did not toss her back into the black depths that she came from. Next time,I will be sure to take care of that. I promise that I will refill the hole with the dirt that came out too. In addition, I will re sod the plot at no additional charge. Let me also apologize for the milky substance in her left eye socket, that was an unavoidable accident. please feel free to include this post in your sig file!

You might as weel keep it up there...I love the ole boney bitch!

Dem Bones! Dem Bones! Dem Bones! I loved playing dem Bones!
Dem Bones! Dem Bones! Dem Bones!
I loved playing dem Bones! I ran my fingers uo and down dem bones and she began to come alive!
I played dem bones like they never been played and she smiled for me all the day.

Pork and bones....

I did a www.devilfinder.com this morning for,Biography Stephen E. Ambrose (because I own some books by him) one of the websites,a guy says,New Orleans,,, that old bag of bones of a City.I have been to New Orleans many,many,many times before ever since I was a kid,I know New Orleans as well as I know Jackson,I have a cousin who lives in Gretna (if any of y'all are familiar with the New Orleans area) and I had never heard or read before of New Orleans being refered to as an old bag of bones of a City.

Intro Spoken
Give me an "F! ..."F"! give me a "U"! ..."U"!
Give me a "C"! ..."C" Give me a "K"! ..."K"!
WHATS THAT SPELL? ..."FUCK!" (x5)

Well come on all of you big strong men, Uncle Sam needs your help again, he got himself in a terrible jam, way down yonder in Vietnam, put down your books and pick up a gun, we're gunna have a whole lotta fun.

CHORUS
and its 1,2,3 what are we fightin for?
don't ask me i don't give a dam, the next stop is Vietnam, and its 5,6,7 open up the pearly gates. Well there aint no time to wonder why...WHOPEE we're all gunna die.

now come on wall street don't be slow, why man this's war a-go-go, there's plenty good money to be made, supplyin' the army with the tools of the trade, just hope and pray that when they drop the bomb, they drop it on the Vietcong.

CHORUS

now come on generals lets move fast, your big chance is here at last.
nite you go out and get those reds cuz the only good commie is one thats dead, you know that peace can only be won, when you blow em all to kingdom come.
CHORUS

(spoken)- listen people i dont know you expect to ever stop the war if you cant sing any better than that... theres about 300,000 of you fuc|ers out there.. i want you to start singing..

CHORUS

now come on mothers throughout the land, pack your boys off to vietnam, come on fathers don't hesitate, send your sons off before its too late, be the first one on your block, to have your boy come home in a box

His refusal to do so says more about his attitude and upbringing than any of his thoughtless and hurtful postings in rec.radio.shortwave. He seems to be very proud of the fact that he can buy expensive radios using the refunded deposit money from his empty beer containers and has frequently posted the fact. [snip]

I have a SW-500, which is the same radio as the S-120, in different colors. I'm not particularly fond of that radio. These radios are reputed to perform similiarly to the S-38s, but I like my S-38s better. My SW-500 is a bit more noisy and a bit less sensitive than my S-38s. The SW-500 has a little more tuning drag and backlash than the S-38s, although either tunes quite a bit better than nearly any of the inexpensive solid state radios.

Like any radio, it's a good radio as long as you don't try to force it into doing something it doesn't do well. The selectivity is wide, and it can't split a powerhouse broadcaster from a DX catch 20 kHz away. However, it works just fine if you want to hear that powerhouse broadcaster. Listening to SSB is an excercise in frustration on these radios. It's possible to demodulate bits of SSB once in a while, but it's not worth the trouble. There's plenty of images, especially on the top two bands, which is typical of single conversion radios in which the antenna stage is connected right to the converter. Needless to say, single conversion radios with a tuned RF amp, such as the S-40, have far fewer images.

On the plus side, the S-120 is a general coverage receiver, 540 kHz to 30 MHz, which tunes nicely, especially once you get used to the bandspread. The audio is OK. It's good for listening to local broadcasts, SW broadcasters beamed to your area, or some of the clear channel stations at night.

But this radio is a lousy DX radio. It's no good for listening to hams. It doesn't have much sensitivity, selectivity or image rejection. The tuning is smooth enough, but the dial indications are imprecise.

You should stay off the computer when you're drunk. Remember how you embarrassed yourself the last time? There IS help available for alcoholism. Try it, you just may return to being a human being again.

Tourists? There aren't any. They all went to visit a country where they aren't fingerprinted and interrogated on arrival. Holidays are meant to be enjoyable.

This .sig file will continue until Mister Fort posts a sincere apology to all cancer victims and their families. His refusal to do so says more about his attitude and upbringing than any of his thoughtless and hurtful postings in rec.radio.shortwave. He seems to be very proud of the fact that he can buy expensive radios using the refunded deposit money from his empty beer containers and has frequently posted the fact. It appears he is well on his way to purchasing his next radio. Anyone caring about his well-being should mention the good work of Alcoholics Anonymous to him.

I was looking a propagation site last night before I turned in. It does seem pretty unlikely to hear Nepal at that time on the East Coast. I couldn't find info about any stations scheduled for that frequency at that time, but a station could have changed its broadcast schedule recently....or maybe it was a pirate.

One interesting thing about Nepal is their time. The top of the the hour for them is at quarter after in our time. They are offset from GMT by 5 hours and 45 minutes.

Kind of like India being offset by a half hour.

Seeeee,at the big old Goodwill store that used to be on Palmyra Street in beautifull downtown Jacksom (www.wapt.com Downtown Skycam,if that downtown Skycam is working?.I haven checked it in a month of Sundays) they used to bring out big cardboard boxes all day long (the thick cardboard boxes measure about four feet square and about five feet tall and us customers used to run like heck getting to those boxes of junk,it was lots of fun digging around in those big junk boxes,I miss them good old days,I used to get there when the store opened and stay there untill about three or four o'clock in the afternoon) of junk on pallets all day long and I have found many old radios in those junk boxes before.I found my Hallicrafters radio one day in one of those big junk boxes and many other old radios too.What was I suppose to do,just leave it sitting there? I paid four dollars for the radio.Maybe the radio can't compare to a new super duper Drake or Ten-Tec or whatever radio nowdays,but the price was right.

Almost defiantly not them. I'm not going to say impossible, but very improbable given the time of your post. Even if they used a lot of juice, it would still be improbable on that frequency at that time. 5005 would have been sucked up in daylight conditions. About five months ago, I posted a question to see if anyone was sure how much juice they were using. As pointed out in this thread, they have a 100 kilowatt transmitter, but it is not known if they crank it all the way up. I've tried a few times to hear them and the best I've ever gotten was a het. Who knows if it was them or not.

Best time to hear them is mornings (at least in eastern USA) in say December or January.

Western USA even has a good shot at their English broadcast at 1415-1430 then.

I don't claim to have a brain, but most experts (not politicians) seem to believe that whatever weapons Sadam had, and was trying to get, he wanted for use against Iran and possibly Israel. It's really a stretch to think that he wanted to start a nuclear war with the US. And the US Army General leading our efforts in Afghanistan (I don't remember his name), indeed a lot of our military leadership, thought is was a mistake to begin another war in Iraq.

We did have a noose around Sadam and Iraq before the war. We could had tightened that noose without invading the country and putting our guys on the ground. And the support for that invasion was drummed up by false claims from our political leaders.

Support for the war now, and the way W is handling it is at an all time low. (And that's a different issue than support for our troops, no matter what the right-wing assholes on am radio say).

I think history will show that our invasion was a very costly blunder.

And I don't hate Bush.

You are right,Brenda Ann.Everytime we turn a light bulb on and off,it does shorten the lifespan of the lightulb.I still like and use the old style lightbulbs.There is a lightbulb somewhere in Dallas,Texas that has been burning for about one hundred years.They just dont make them like that anymore.I assume that old lightbulb is still on,anyway.A search on the internet might might turn up something about that old timer.

It's been hot as heck in NYC for the last couple of days. Yesterday, to escape the heat, I spent much of the afternoon in Prospect Park, where's there's usually a nice breeze and cooler temperatures. On a whim I brought along 100 ft of wire and my HF-150. I laid the wire out in a 'snake' configuration, right on the ground, and was pretty impressed with the results. I was in a quiet spot there in the Park. Even so, when people describe this as a low noise antenna, they aren't kidding. Using a couple of tree limbs, I raised the wire up about 7-8 ft. The increase in noise was noticeable, and the s/n ratio was a little worse.

I realize that the classic snake antenna uses coax, not wire. However, ordinary old insulated wire sure seemed to work well for me yesterday.

I've read around on the web about these antennas and their low noise characteristics, but I'd be interested to hear about any experiments the readers of this group have done. I'm especially curious about how the presence of metal objects in the immediate vicinity of a snake antenna would affect its performance. For example, suppose you took 200ft of insulated wire and 'stiched' it through the bottow row of 'links' on a very long chain link fence. I can't imagine a stealthier antenna than this, but would the fence muck things up?

Funny you should think in terms of fear, most who do so are usually afraid little children or an kook attempting to intimidate others, or supporting those who do, either just as disgusting.

You mistake my intolerance of bullies and kooks tossing around threats--with fear--I make no such mistake... I simply find threatening mental cases intolerable... that punk intimidates no one...

However, I don't believe that ISP is going to like ignoring him making threats. If those threats are made know to the ISP (by a number of complaints), and they do nothing, they can be sued big-time in the event that kook harms anyone or another property, they DO have an obligation by law.

Capacitive coupling to the metal fence would increase both desired signal and noise. With noise going up faster then the desired signals. I tried this many years ago when we lived in a no antenna apartment.

I works with a wood plank fence.

I said you live in a fantasy construct.

Whether I believe in ghosts and cloud beings is irrelevant. The fact that most people do makes them real, in a sense. (So much for ''reality'', a vastly over-rated concept).

In the Judeo/Christian/Moslem thought-bubble there is a phenomenom known as the Antichrist, which has parameters. Bush conforms to said parameters.

Just because religion is bullshit, doesn't make it harmless.

Unless you can see all of that chain link fence,you never know what else might be hooked up to it.I agree with experimenting with different things and see what the results are.

John,
That is where you have a total lack of understanding. There is a big difference between myself and a bully. I'm trying to bully no one.
Bullys pick on people just to pick on them. I have no intention of harming anyone. I simply stated that if I caught him pissing on one of my relative's graves I would take the law into my own hands. I would do the same to you or anyone else that I caught doing it. Let me rephrase it for you.

IF I CAUGHT ANYONE PISSING ON A RELATIVE'S GRAVE THEY WOULD NOT HAVE TO WORRY ABOUT THE POLICE

That is a long way from a threat. Is it simple enough for you? Does your childish mind understand?

Now, go tighten some more lug nuts and leave decent folk alone wiil ya?

Back last fall, I ran a snake antenna (60-80 feet of 24 ga. insulated wire) through the bushes back into the woods behind my house. (This goes to the high impedance, 500 ohm, input of my R-1000). The idea was a total stealth antenna, down in the ground cover.

That seemed ok for a while. Then I decided to go walkabout with my Grundig FR-200 at the same time as I was listening with my R-1000 on wireless headphones to Radio Australia on 17795 at 4 PM local time.
When your $40 radio picks up better off the whip than a tabletop with 80 feet of wire, you know you've got antenna problems. Like damp ground and snake antennas and anything above 6 MHz being mutually incompatible.

Tossing the same wire 20 feet up into the trees, and 17 MHz went from below S1, down in the mud, to a reasonable S4.

Similar results this spring. (I was getting a bunch of interference from the house remodel next door. My guess is that construction guys must have done something to the phone wiring on a DSL line or broke a ground connection on digital TV cable. Sounded like broadband data comm crap all over). I ran about 80-100 feet about 3 feet off the ground in the opposite direction from the first antenna. The interference was much reduced, but it was much poorer than the other antenna above 9 MHz.

Dampness in the ground and vegetation may be a factor. Here in Seattle, you can count on that for about 9 months of the year.

I expect some of your desired energy will be inductively coupled to Ground through the fence posts spaced every 10 feet. I further expect an insulated wire on the ground, not near any other metallic objects will work better.

I have an instinct...

If what you say is true, no harm has been done, if not, only good can come.

I suppose that is why no one would take one suggestion that someone is "out-of-line" too seriously, it there are more voices added one should investigate... all I did was show what one of their users was using their service for, they may well approve, who knows?

I must say, nancy leaping up with his dead corpse and packing it all over the nation like some object of worship was one of the most disgusting things I have ever witnessed in a civilized country established "... of the people, by the people and for the people.."

Regan was actually a fool which a bunch of "hollywood worshipers" managed to place in office. With out a doubt, he should never have been president, suffering alzheimers as he did. Looking back on his interactions with the press and his speechs to the public it is now easy to see. I just wrote him off as a "dummy", but was no less confused at how such a poor actor (pun intended) could have ever gained office...

One who sells one's abilities, talent, or name for an unworthy purpose.

Sheehan's father told the press in April 2004 that his son had RE-ENLISTED the previous August [2003!], planned to make a CAREER in the military, and "LOVED the Army because it gave him a chance to SERVE his country."

The media have ignored two important facts. First, Casey Sheehan initially signed up in May 2000 and voluntarily re-enlisted in the service in August 2003, knowing he would likely be called into active duty in Iraq. Secondly, as a mechanic in the 1st battalion, 82nd Field Artillery Regiment, Casey did not have to go into the battle that claimed his life. When some of his fellow soldiers encountered resistance, he and others in his unit chose to go into combat to save his friends. Cindy Sheehan herself recounted it this way:

"[T]he sergeant said, "Sheehan, you don't have to go," because my son was a mechanic. And Casey said, "Where my chief goes, I go."

Where this young man went, tragically, was to an early grave. But his death was an act of patriotism and human compassion, one which should tinge her understandable maternal grief with deep pride.

Instead, Cindy Sheehan threw herself into shrill, anti-Bush and anti-American activism. Shortly after his death, she founded Gold Star Families for Peace, an "antiwar" group whose first stated purpose is "To bring an end to the occupation of Iraq." She presently has a blogspot on MichaelMoore.com and spouts extremist rhetoric alongside many of the Hate America Left's most potent bomb-throwers.

CINDY SHEEHAN's COMPLETE BIO:
Click on the numerous references in her bio to affiliated groups and its founders and you will find numerous associations with Communist groups - I.E. The Shadow Party, The Network http://www.discoverthenetwork.org/individualProfile.asp?indid=2031

CINDY SHEEHAN founded Gold Star Families for [Communist] Peace (GSF[C]P)
http://www.discoverthenetwork.org/groupProfile.asp?grpid=7075

(GSF[C]P) was established in late 2004 after her son's death;
its principal founder was Cindy Sheehan [a former Roman Catholic youth minister].

Another prominent member of GSF[C]P is Lila Lipscomb of Flint, Michigan, who was featured in Michael Moore's film Fahrenheit 911 [The first and ONLY foreign, so called "documentary" film to EVER be released in Communist China: http://english.people.com.cn/200407/01/eng20040701_148176.html].

In the film Lila Lipscomb is shown encouraging her son, Michael Pederson, to join the Army for its career opportunities, but he ends up being killed only two weeks after the war in Iraq began. Says Lipscomb: "I consider being in that movie such a blessing because it has given me the opportunity to have an audience." [Yes, a Chinese Communist Party audience, indeed.]

GSFP is vigorously opposed to the current War in Iraq [as is Communist China], and also condemned U.S. efforts to liberate Afghanistan and overthrow the Taliban regime [as did Communist China since it had signed a business deal with the Taliban in Afghanistan just hours before the 9/11 WTC attack].

Read the book that the Neo-Comm anti-war groups do not want you to read: http://www.dragoninthedark.com/

Already, Sheehan is prostituting herself via Michael Moore's web site where, incidentally, you still can't find Casey Sheehan's name. When asked by a radio interviewer what her son would think of her actions if he were alive and if she would be this vehemently opposed to the war if her son were still alive, she replied that she hadn't given these questions a lot of thought -- exactly the lack of deliberate, rational, intelligent thought you would expect from a political prostitute. You'd think that given her vehement opposition to the war, she'd have given these basic questions a little thought, but apparently not. She not so long ago supported George Bush and had kind words for him. Now, she'd prefer he burn in hell. And the straw that broke the camel's back is when we began to see the political prostitute Cindy Sheehan turning up in TV commercials bought and paid for by the anti-war pimps at the Gold Star Families for Peace.

The anti-war pimps, Michael Moore, Code Pink, the Gold Star Families et. al. can't win a fair fight. There's no need to go over the legitimate, unanswered questions that I and other rational pundits have posed to them over an over again. They are incapable of coming up with rational answers -- only more irrational leftist peacenik chants like "no, blood for oil" and "Bush lied, people died" or "why did Bush kill my son". Now they have the perfect person to deliver these screeds: Political Prostitute Cindy Sheehan. Expect anti-war pimps to be adding more hookers to their stable in the near future.

The problem is that the political prostitution of the War on Terror isn't the end of it. These people don't think ANY cause is worth defending. They don't think any American lives should be lost for any reason. And the truth of this statement is contained in the fact that they refuse to say exactly what cause they think is worthy enough to defend with American blood. Cindy Sheehan herself can't see through the exhilaration of her newfound status as the political prostitute of the anti-war movement to figure this question out. If these folks had been around to pimp their anti-war cause back in World War II, we'd all be speaking German right now and a whole lot more Jews would have died. Can you imagine a 1940s political prostitute saying "I love my country, but how many more or our loved ones have to die in this senseless war". Fortunately back then, we wouldn't have stood for this blatant political prostitution or the national march right now would be the goose step.

But this isn't the 40s. It's 2005 and the threats we face are every bit as real as they were in the 40s, if not more so. The anti-war pimps and prostitutes have already made it clear that Iraq and the threat it presents isn't worthy of defending with American lives. What about, North Korea? China? Iran, which has been sending aid and comfort to the terrorists in Iraq? The president recently said all options are on the table regarding Iran meaning we could use force, if needed. Is this acceptable to the anti-war pimps or will they simply find another political prostitute/gigolo to trot him/her out to attempt to sway public opinion against the defense of our freedom?

Experience has proven that the politics of political prostitution works. In our busy world today, with the average American having the attention span of a gnat, the combination of a barrage of anti-freedom propaganda from the leftist media and the sad face of the anti-war pimp's political prostitute Cindy Sheehan is the perfect one-two punch to send support for the defense of freedom spiraling downward. But our freedom is too precious to fall prey to the political prostitution of a war protest.

JUDGE FOR YOURSELF: Cindy Sheehan's newspaper interview in 2004

What follows is the original June 2004 article published by The Vacaville Reporter, Vacaville, California

NOTE: David Henson, author of the original story said, "I stand by my full report as an accurate reflection of the Sheehans at the time of the interview. I wouldn't want to speculate about Ms. Sheehan's point of view. My article accurately reflected her position at the time."

Bush, Sheehans share moments
By David Henson/Staff Writer

Since learning in April that their son, Army Spc. Casey Sheehan, had been killed in Iraq, life has been everything but normal for the Sheehan family of Vacaville.

Casey's parents, Cindy and Patrick, as well as their three children, have attended event after event honoring the soldier both locally and abroad, received countless letters of support and fielded questions from reporters across the country.

"That's the way our whole lives have been since April 4," Patrick said. "It's been surreal."

But none of that prepared the family for the message left on their answering machine last week, inviting them to have a face-to-face meeting with President George W. Bush at Fort Lewis near Seattle.

Surreal soon seemed like an understatement, as the Sheehans - one of 17 families who met Thursday with Bush - were whisked in a matter of days to the Army post and given the VIP treatment from the military. But as their meeting with the president approached, the family was faced with a dilemma as to what to say when faced with Casey's commander-in-chief.

"We haven't been happy with the way the war has been handled," Cindy said. "The president has changed his reasons for being over there every time a reason is proven false or an objective reached."

The 10 minutes of face time with the president could have given the family a chance to vent their frustrations or ask Bush some of the difficult questions they have been asking themselves, such as whether Casey's sacrifice would make the world a safer place.

But in the end, the family decided against such talk, deferring to how they believed Casey would have wanted them to act. In addition, Pat noted that Bush wasn't stumping for votes or trying to gain a political edge for the upcoming election.

"We have a lot of respect for the office of the president, and I have a new respect for him because he was sincere and he didn't have to take the time to meet with us," Pat said.

Sincerity was something Cindy had hoped to find in the meeting. Shortly after Casey died, Bush sent the family a form letter expressing his condolences, and Cindy said she felt it was an impersonal gesture.

"I now know he's sincere about wanting freedom for the Iraqis," Cindy said after their meeting. "I know he's sorry and feels some pain for our loss. And I know he's a man of faith."

The meeting didn't last long, but in their time with Bush, Cindy spoke about Casey and asked the president to make her son's sacrifice count for something. They also spoke of their faith.

While meeting with Bush, as well as Sen. John McCain, R-Arizona, was an honor, it was almost a tangent benefit of the trip. The Sheehans said they enjoyed meeting the other families of fallen soldiers, sharing stories, contact information, grief and support.

For some, grief was still visceral and raw, while for others it had melted into the background of their lives, the pain as common as breathing. Cindy said she saw her reflection in the troubled eyes of each.

"It's hard to lose a son," she said. "But we (all) lost a son in the Iraqi war."

The trip had one benefit that none of the Sheehans expected.

For a moment, life returned to the way it was before Casey died. They laughed, joked and bickered playfully as they briefly toured Seattle.

For the first time in 11 weeks, they felt whole again.

"That was the gift the president gave us, the gift of happiness, of being together," Cindy said.

The family of American soldier Casey Sheehan, who was killed in Iraq on April 4, 2004, has broken its silence and spoken out against his mother Cindy Sheehan's anti-war vigil against George Bush held outside the president's Crawford, Texas ranch.

The following email was received by the DRUDGE REPORT from Casey's aunt and godmother:

Our family has been so distressed by the recent activities of Cindy we are breaking our silence and we have collectively written a statement for release. Feel free to distribute it as you wish. Thanks • Cherie

In response to questions regarding the Cindy Sheehan/Crawford Texas issue: Sheehan Family Statement:

The Sheehan Family lost our beloved Casey in the Iraq War and we have been silently, respectfully grieving. We do not agree with the political motivations and publicity tactics of Cindy Sheehan. She now appears to be promoting her own personal agenda and notoriety at the expense of her son's good name and reputation. The rest of the Sheehan Family supports the troops, our country, and our President, silently, with prayer and respect.

Sincerely,

Casey Sheehan's grandparents, aunts, uncles and numerous cousins.

Why do you continue to regurgitate Communist Party propaganda?
Your repeating retoric is exactly the same as N.Korea - over and over again and again.
No facts, no evidence whatsoever. Just pure unadulturated bullshit.

You eat conscience and shit Communist ideology.

Hindsight is a wonderful propaganda tool isn't it Dr. David?

NOBODY knew with absolute certainty what was under hineous Sadamn's control. Considering his consistent historical behavior it was certainly prudent to error on the safe side.

You can attempt to skew this logic for your Neo-Comm propaganda purposes all you want.
The facts remain that Sadamn did indeed have associations with al-Quida, supported them, and had a deep relationship with Communist China and the Communist Party. There are literally millions of Iraqi documents that detail these associations. Your Neo-Comm network will never publicize those facts for you to ponder the error in your propaganda campaign

But you are too blind and ignorant to make the logical connections. You are an ideal Neo-Comm "idiot".

That was my first radio that I received when I was in elementary

WWII wasn't a senseless war though. We were attacked by a country that was already at war with another country that had invaded, occupied and kille many. Are you seriously equating the Iraqi's to the Japs or Germany of the 40's? Are you seriously equaating this war to WWII? If you are then you are seriously delusional.

The fact is that many, many people think this war was wrong. Sheehan just happens to be a vocal focal point that represents the large population.

Main coupling to the chain link fence with be by capacitive coupling (inductive coupling, I suspect, would be negligible.

The chain link fence will have a "natural resonant frequency" of its own, and favor some freq or range of freqs, and those freqs harmonics. This could have a beneficial and/or counter effect on antenna depending on band operation. This antennas impedance would be difficult to guess and/or determine, one might try running the antenna though various ratio baluns (or a multi-tapped rf transformer) to see if signal can be improved.

Any electrical interference the fence runs close to will increase noise level. At my location there is a chain link fence which encircles tens of acres... it boosts my LW TREMENDOUSLY! I have a weird "gamma match" arrangement I have experimented with and tap the chain link fence with. I have not experienced "noise" of any type but imagine it can occur under circumstances favorable to its generation, and under proper conditions which encourage it...

For the ~9 mhz range, just running an alligator clip to the fence, though a 9:1 balun seems to work well for me... if you like toying with such things, can be fun.

Hook it up and experiment, there is someway you can use what exists to your advantage! Probably get ideas off the web, if you and I and more have thought about this, probably many more have played with it...

WWII was a different time with different weapons in a conventional war.
Your lack of understanding of present day threats is to your detriment.
The day of crouching and waiting for a domestic attack is suicidal and any President in todays world which takes no action is liable and potentially treasonist.

The facts are clear. We invaded a country that had no weapons to attack us with, no air force, no WMD and yet were supposed to believe they are an imminent threat. Bullshit, plain and clear. Send your kids to go get killed. Bush isn't sending his. As in the stock market, watch what the insiders do.

Cuhulin - It is "Reveal" vice 'Real'
[But they do make things look real.]
ABOUT - GE Reveal Light Bulbs
http://www.gelighting.com/na/home_lighting/products/reveal_main.htm
Basically a old fashion 'standard' Incandescent Light Bulb with the Rare-Earth Element "Neodymium" mixed into the Bulb's Glass Evelope. This gives Bulb's Glass a distinctive Blue Color when it is off.

The Rated Life of any Light Bulb be they the older Incandescent Bulb or a newer Compact Fluoresent Bulb is usually greatly reduced by the Number of On-and-Off Cycles that they are subject to in One Day Day-after-Day.
This Daily On-and-Off Cycling generally greatly reduced the Life of any Light Bulb.
Location and Use is the Prime Factor in every Light Bulb's Life... and Early Death !

If you want a low noise antenna use a loop type that is sensitive only

- - - Correction - - -
On the GE Lighting WebSite
http://www.gelighting.com/na/
GE States the Daily Life Cycling is :
* Based on 4 Hours of Consumer Use-per-Day. http://www.gelighting.com/na/home_lighting/products/general_purpose/regular.htm
Revised : "Life of a 'Test' Light Bulb" Analogy
GE's claim Life Cycle Testing Standard is Four (4) Hours a Day
One-On and One-Off Per 24 Hour Period in Theory. This may be Accelerate by only letting the Bulb 'cool down' for only 48 Minutes and then repeating the Cycle. This would then result in Five "Daily Use" Cycles in One Day with a 6000 Hour MTBF Life Cycle Test taking about 300 Days (About 10 Months).

The world is full of despotic "leaders". But who put us in charge anyway? And if we were in charge, why did we conveniently ignore Pol Pot, Rawanda (both situations waaaay worse than Saddam could ever hope to be)and numerous other leaders that committed crimes against humanity?

Saddam was Hitler, Noriega was Hitler, the war lord in Somalia was Hitler, everywhere we wanted to poke our nose into, the political leader was "Hitler"; there must have been ten "Hitlers" that we've gone after in the last 10 or 15 years (Republican and Democratic administrations alike)--they demonize/Hitlerize everybody in any country we want to butt in to--the demon du jour.

Bottom line--sending our kids to be maimed/killed for lies I still don't consider as "doing the right thing". If you do, you are certainly entitled to your opinion.

You just keep on maintaining your high level of gullibility...the gummint is banking on it!

He did not threaten the United States.

Inspectors on the ground were finding nothing.

Bush was determined to invade Iraq, before he was elected.

''Two years before 9/11, candidate Bush was already talking privately about attacking Iraq, according to his former ghost writer Houston: Two years before the September 11 attacks, presidential candidate George W. Bush was already talking privately about the political benefits of attacking Iraq, according to his former ghost writer, who held many conversations with then-Texas Governor Bush in preparation for a planned autobiography.

ï¿½He was thinking about invading Iraq in 1999,ï¿½ said author and journalist Mickey Herskowitz. ï¿½It was on his mind. He said to me: ï¿½One of the keys to being seen as a great leader is to be seen as a commander-in-chief.ï¿½ And he said, ï¿½My father had all this political capital built up when he drove the Iraqis out of Kuwait and he wasted it.ï¿½ He said, ï¿½If I have a chance to invadeï¿½.if I had that much capital, Iï¿½m not going to waste it. Iï¿½m going to get everything passed that I want to get passed and Iï¿½m going to have a successful presidency.ï¿½

Herskowitz said that Bush expressed frustration at a lifetime as an underachiever in the shadow of an accomplished father. In aggressive military action, he saw the opportunity to emerge from his fatherï¿½s shadow. The moment, Herskowitz said, came in the wake of the September 11 attacks. ï¿½Suddenly, heï¿½s at 91 percent in the polls, and heï¿½d barely crawled out of the bunker.ï¿½ ''

This is not a mini-Beverage. A Beverage needs to be near but off the ground.

The snake antenna uses a coax with the outer shorted to inner at the far end from the radio.

A wire on the ground is just a wire on the ground and as you found out will pick up signals. depending on what you need it to do it can be a good antenna.

I occasionally take a portable (Sony 7600G) to the park and listen to Australia on 21,740 during the day. I elevate a wire in the trees to get better reception and this is on a hill over looking the pacific ocean.

S-120 is a decent, but not exemplary, entry level set. Functionally indentical to SW-500, it's a nice looking radio, with adequate sensitivity for the super power stations and local MW, and adequate selectivity to receive a television channel. It will pass a square wave.

On the crowded bands at night, S-120 will give let you hear all the stations that are out there. Many of them at once. The good news is, if you get a station on one of the high bands all alone, the audio fidelity through a 4 inch speaker can actually be quite good. Things do tend to rattle, though, so you're going to want to keep the screws tight.

IIRC, it's an AC/DC set, so make sure you're polarized correctly. Or your morning coffee won't be the only thing waking your happy ass up.

There's always a low level hum on these sets. You'll learn to ignore it. It's not dominant. And after awhile hardly noticeable.

All the caps will need to be replaced, if they haven't been. And this can actually make a quantum improvement in performance over the architect's specifications.

If you're looking for a serious radio, this ain't it.

If you're looking for a decent radio to decorate a shelf and occasionally listen to a ball game (before it all moves to subscription services) this is a nice place to start.

I've had two of them. And have enjoyed them both.

In all honesty, I would love to see ALL THREE GROUPS you mentioned in the above paragraphs BLOWN TO BITS in a conventional or nuclear exchange between Israel and the Arab States which neighbor it.

The WORLD as a whole has grown FAR TOO TIRED of this ongoing 2000+ year old war between the Jews and the Arab Islamics.
A great majority of the planet's population would indeed be VERY HAPPY if we were to turn on the news and one day hear that BOTH Israel and 90% of the Arab Islamic States which surround it were turned into a slag heap of radioactive glass and burnt smoking embers !

Yes, I say let the Jews and the Islamics KILL EACH OTHER OFF !

The world will be a FAR BETTER PLACE without Jews and Arabs and their kooky religions and imbred populations. The sooner BOTH of them are EXTERMINATED, the better...and best of all they'll do it to THEMSELVES given the chance!

You aren't the only one. I am not familar with Knight speakers, I admit, but it appears to be a conventional communications radio speaker, and $500 strikes me as beyond ridiculous. I also noticed he has a reserve on it, and sells everything he has "as-is, no returns, no refunds, no exchanges".

Hmmm.

Is it discontinued or what? If so maybe i should wait for their

You wouldn't happen to use "SeeingEyeDog" to get Cuhulin's attention would you?

David also appears to be correct: "Chaos creates an excellent environment for plunder, arms sales, and lots and lots of drugs". If you are too blind to see that then I recommend that you take a look at any hot spot on the globe and you are guaranteed to see plunder, arms sales and drugs.

As a "guide dog" you are useless but I am sure Cuhulin could find some use for you!

Uh-huh... I recall an incident years ago when a real Sharp individual (I won't mention his name :-) down in Florida ostensibly heard Tristan da Cunha on 3290 kHz, running 40 watts, over a total daylight path.

He sent the station a report and somehow they QSL'd it... after that the individual was pretty much ostracized, at least in the hobby press.

It's pretty much impossible to accomplish the impossible.

Sir. Stuff is so totally out of control now, any rational discussion is laughable. You should be making peace with those around you and hoarding ammo.

I think I have a Canadian coin or two around here somewhere.Sometimes they do show up when a store clerk is making change.I have a little bit of Vietnamese money (a bill and a few coins and a few Hong Kong coins) that I had on me when I left Vietnam in 1964 for the land of the round eyes and the big PX.

Hello Group

I have been wondering if it might be an advantage to remotely tune this active antenna using a varactor? The remote unit uses a 40673 dual gate mosfet followed by a 2N5109 npn vhf/uhf transistor which feeds a 30 turn bifilar wound 4:1 balun. Then rg58 to the control unit. The whip is 58"/1473mm in length. Any thoughts on this? Thank you.

Most I ever paid for a radio speaker is an old antique (I own two old antique radio speakers) that I paid $45.00 for at the Flowers Flea Market about ten years ago,it is a round metal case radio speaker and the other one is a Zenith woodn frame octogon shape radio speaker that has something like a vase of flowers on the cloth grill,I paid $35.00 for it.I can't think of any radio speaker in the World I would pay $500.00 for.

What did an elementary kid know then! I was just elated to hear something beyond the local AM station. I still remember the thrill when my first QSL card arrived from a foreign station! No matter how "cheap" it was, it was my passport to another world. Even then, my Mother had to save for awhile to get it for me for Christmas, think she got it from Wards or Sears.

I've never received a signal from the other side of the planet that far down on the band during daylight conditions. A few times I received FM stations that you'd never expect to hear given the distance, but never any long distance 60 meter signals in daylight. It would be interesting to know how often that can/does happen.

The whole point of an active antenna like that one is that it is high-impedance (and thus a match to the FET) across its entire bandpass.

It is the best radio in its price class and best of all it works.

Also join the Sony SW7600 yahoo groups for excellent feedback.

http://www.aussieseek.com

There's that unhealthy WAR and RELIGION thingy again. But seeing you have bought it up -

Yes, there are a number of religions in Australia, but lets focus on just two.

One has been the backbone of this country, a religion which has served us well and one that has provided the laws, the culture and orderliness we enjoy and the path we have followed.

The other has been introduced in substantial numbers only recently and we can already see how this religion and the strength of its ever-increasing numbers through immigration, are impacting on society.

Why would anyone from one of the above religions (and you know which one) make any sacrifices whatsoever, fight or lay down their lives to save a country or it's inhabitants when they themselves want to ultimately conquer it?

Moreover, they have no respect for the articles of war preferring instead to hide behind the obscurity of a rag, so, tell me, why would they join an army constrained by the Geneva Conventions on the subject.

Oh, I forgot, it is a peaceful religion.

Don't worry DAD w can always give you a crucifix and a broom handle for your ARMY to fight with.

Conscientious objection is one thing, religious zealoutry is quite another

I bought mine from www.aesham.com about 4 months ago.

Good radio, I also own the DE-1103, and I have had a YB-400PE before. If you're short on money, get the DE-1103, otherwise get the 7600GR.

Some notes, the 7600GR is an excellent broadcast listening radio, and good for utilities and hams if you know the frequency. However, it has no tuning knob.

Yes I know it is a wideband antenna, but I found a reference to doing this at http://www.qsl.net/wa1ion/mini-dxpeditions.pdf#search='mfj%201024%20varactor' so I know it is possible. I was looking for more information but have not found any. I tried to subscribe to a group mentioned in the article but was not successful.
My 1024 works ok but I would like to obtain more selectivity. It may be an advantage in certain situations.

Get that through your thick skull.

NOBODY knew with certainty what Sadamn had in his arsenal. Including YOU!
He has used WMD before. The prudent action to take was to err on the safe side.

Hindsight is a wonderful propaganda tool. And it works both ways.
Suppose we did nothing and he did manage to obtain and use WMD on Kuwait, Saudi Arabia, Iran or more likely Israel? How many Americans would you support to die for oil in that Neo-Comm designed disaster???

NONE, because by that time you will be wearing a Mao suit and waving a red flag.

> Send your kids to go get > killed. Bush isn't sending his. As in the stock market, watch what the

I can do better than that. I sent my parents, grand-parents, aunts, uncles and nephews to get killed by the Communists.
You figure it out.

That is exactly what we agreed to do for the Europeans. We agreed to let the Europeans handle it their way this time.
And the E.U. also agreed that if that failed they would support us for the consequences. But now they are reneging on that agreement. And THAT is going to cause some serious problems in relations between the U.S. and France and Germany down the road.

When this Iranian situation goes to the U.N. security council this Sept. and the votes must be cast you will then see who are with us and who is against us. I guarantee you Communist China will veto. If France and Germany fall into China's camp with even so much as an abstension then the E.U. can forget about ANY support from the U.S. in any future economic and security issues.

The split between Europe (except Britain) and the U.S. will thus be complete. AND THAT has been the Communist plan from day one.

Congratulations Komrade, your son is coming home for Thanksgiving. And as you will then see that this isn't simply a matter of alegations of WMD. It is who has influence over the largest deposit of oil reserves in the world. Communist China or the U.S. and Western allies. I guarantee you if the U.S. wasn't there breathing down their backs we would be negotiating in Beijing for our U.N. "allocation" of petro... meanwhile, as the petro spigot is slowly turned counterclockwise... you will be riding a bicycle to go to work with your red scarf waving in the bitter wind. It will make the 1970's oil embargo look like fad diet.

This situation in the M.E. is a replay of the U.S.S.R. and the West during the Cold War - we are now in Cold War II with Communist China which threatens to get hot very soon.

War isn't "loving diatribes". And a warrior can always defect or decline to re-up.
The military is for fighting wars. It is not a place to waste time so you can figure out what you want to do with your life.
It is a very serious decision. It is a soldiers decision that only he himself can make - period.

Sheehan is a fraud, she is seeking the limelight based on her son's death. She doesn't expect the President to meet with her again. She is simply grandstanding and is being used by the likes of pig moore and the liberal looney left. Now that she has gained some notoriety the fool thinks she has some power. Now she thinks she is the expert on foreign policy and is making all kinds of demands. Like anyone but the looney left is listening to her.

You can dial numbers on either, just on the DE-1103 it is more awkward to do so (since the keypad isn't in a standard layout).

On the DE-1103 you can use the tuning knob.

On the ICF-SW7600GR you can use the up/down frequency buttons (steps of 10 or 1).

Hans Blix did.

First off, when was the last time he used them? 10 years ago? Secondly, he used them on his own people. He was interested in keeping a rebellion down, not to launch a scud missile loaded with them on the US. If anyone should have been afraid it was Israel or Iran. And neither one of them invaded Iraq.

Wait, I thought we were the ones in imminent danger so we had to strike.
Now it's these other countries. Hmmmm

Once again, nobody else in the region saw him as a threat and acted on it.

You know what will cause us to wear a Mao suit? When the Chinese dump our currency thus making it worthless. And dumping their holdings of US treasury notes. Stupid Americans keep buying Chinese crap at WalMart and sending our currency to them. All in the name of saving a few bucks and worrying about the next quarterly report. Don't worry about bombs doing us in, it's our trade deficits that will do it. But keep buying and keep sending jobs overseas.

Yes. People have done this to design a tunable antenna so you can do a Google search on it. The antenna element of the right type is inductive and the varactor diode capacitance across it can be used to resonate it at some frequency.

Sheehan sees this protest as a major career move for her. She will stay

SED, as a relay station -- is only equalled by : Wertachtal, Allois+Issodun,

What, Aboriginal?

>The other has been introduced in substantial numbers only recently

Ah, Christianity.

Are there any Aboriginal radio stations on shortwave? That really would be a fine DX catch, to hear an English language discussion by Aboriginal peoples about their culture on their own radio station.

I note from Google that there are some AM and FM stations, but no SW stations actually run by Aboriginal communities ( http://www.cbonline.org.au). From here in the UK I somehow doubt that I'd get those, even with the largest sporadic-E ever recorded.

Radio Australia does a programme about Aboriginal culture, but it would be nice to hear those kinds of programmes from a station rooted in the culture itself.

http://www.abc.net.au/ra/guide/103.htm

It's rather disappointing that there's only one hour of native culture programming per week. Australia's Aboriginal societies are truly unique to the continent, and more programming from those societies would make Radio Australia stand out from the overcrowded muddle of existing international news stations.

I sure wouldn't pay $500 for a speaker. Speakers at the Salvation Army thrift store are much less. Orphaned stereo speakers usually go for around $3.00. Some of the old boatanchor radios need 70.7 V transformers, but Parts Express sells them for a good price.

However, I'll bet the seller isn't the only one who'd say:

"This all began with my goal to find all of the radios I dreamed about as a kid."

I"m sure there's a lot of fifty to seventy something guys who'd say the same thing. So, I can understand why some guy, retired from a well paying technical job, might pay that much. $500 is way too much for a speaker, but it's cheap enough to fufill a dream.

eBay is a perfectly fine place to buy used radios, if you buy from a reputable seller AND use PayPal so that you have protection. Many people on this board have entire collections purchased off eBay.

The Aboriginal tv station Imparja broadcasts terrestrially and via satellite. Some other programming is also carried on HF from ABC stations in Katharine and Tennant Creek. That's about it.

Audit: Iraq fraud drained $1 billion

By Hannah Allam

Knight Ridder Newspapers

BAGHDAD, Iraq - Iraqi investigators have uncovered widespread fraud and waste in more than $1 billion worth of weapons deals arranged by middlemen who reneged or took huge kickbacks on contracts to arm Iraq's fledgling military, according to a confidential report and interviews with U.S. and Iraqi officials.

The Iraqi Board of Supreme Audit, in a report reviewed by Knight Ridder, describes transactions suggesting that senior U.S.-appointed Iraqi officials in the Defense Ministry used three intermediary companies to hide the kickbacks they received from contracts involving unnecessary, overpriced or outdated equipment.

Knight Ridder reported last month that $300 million in defense funds had been lost. But the report indicates that the audit board uncovered a much larger scandal, with losses likely to exceed $500 million, that's roiling the ministry as it struggles to build up its armed forces.

The episode deprives Iraq's military of essential gear that could help prepare the way for U.S. forces to withdraw. It also raises questions about the new government's ability to provide an effective defense against an entrenched insurgency and win broad acceptance among Iraqis.

The audit board's investigators looked at 89 contracts of the past year and discovered a pattern of deception and sloppiness that squandered more than half the Defense Ministry's annual budget aimed at standing up a self-sufficient force, according to a copy of the 33-page report.

Its revelations offer the most comprehensive look to date at corruption that allegedly thrived for eight months or longer even with about 20 American civilian advisers working alongside Iraqi defense chiefs, including those now under investigation. The report does not suggest that U.S. advisers were involved in any corruption.

"If one dinar is misspent, I ache for it, so just imagine how it feels for such huge sums," Iraqi Prime Minister Ibrahim al-Jaafari said in an interview Wednesday. "We need it to build the country and, even if we reach the level to where we don't need it, we aren't about to give our money over to corruption."

The U.S. Embassy in Baghdad, which oversees civilian advisers to the Iraqi Ministry of Defense, didn't consent to on-the-record interviews about the investigation. In response to a request for comment, it issued a statement that said embassy officials were aware of the allegations and that, even before they became public, "we were advising the Iraqis about our concerns relating to MoD decisions on procurement and the possibility of corruption."

Iraqi Defense Minister Saadoun al-Dulaimi confirmed most of audit board report's findings in an interview last Sunday, saying that at least $500 million in Iraqi money essentially has disappeared. He's removed nine senior officials so far - he fired the ministry's procurement chief and placed his own deputy minister, Bruska Shaways, on leave - and said he was working through a list of other employees who faced dismissal and possible criminal charges.

"This is not only the Defense Ministry's problem. It affects the image of the new Iraq," al-Dulaimi said. "If we really spent that money in the right way, maybe it would have given us more capabilities to face terrorists."

The Board of Supreme Audit, led by former Human Rights Minister Abdel Baset al-Turki, examined defense contracts that had been signed starting with the transfer of sovereignty June 28, 2004, through Feb. 28, 2005. The investigation's results, supported by bank statements, receipts and internal Defense Ministry memos, were delivered to al-Jaafari's office May 16.

Among the findings:

-Multimillion-dollar contracts were awarded to favored weapons suppliers without a bidding process and without the required approval from the prime minister's office. Investigators wrote that the chief procurer went "beyond his authority" in purchasing equipment.

-Senior Iraqi officials kept little or no record of major purchases, sometimes noting lucrative deals in "undated and unnumbered" memos. Nearly all purchases contained a clause - unusual in international contracting of this magnitude - that required the contract's full value to be paid up front in cash.

-Instead of buying directly from a foreign company or government, Iraqi arms procurers hired third-party companies to negotiate the contracts. When Iraqi leaders later complained about unfulfilled contracts, they discovered they had no recourse to demand a refund because the payments were made to Iraqi middlemen who vanished after receiving the millions. "The undertakings make no obligation ... toward the Iraqi Ministry of Defense," according to the report.

-The sole beneficiary on 43 of the 89 contracts was a former currency-exchange operator, Nair Mohamed al-Jumaili, whose name doesn't even appear on the contracts. At least $759 million in Iraqi money was deposited into his personal account at a bank in Baghdad, according to the report. Internal records incorrectly "indicated that the Ministry of Defense signed contracts with Poland, Arab countries, the United States and Europe, but we discovered that all contracts were signed and executed with Iraqi suppliers," the report said.

The contracts under scrutiny total $1.27 billion, nearly equal to the estimated $1.3 billion allocated for the Defense Ministry's budget this year. The money came solely from Iraqi coffers, not from the training budget of the U.S. military or from NATO and foreign donations to Iraq's military.

"There's no rebuilding, no weapons, nothing," said retired Iraqi Lt. Gen. Abdul Aziz al-Yaseri, who worked in the Defense Ministry at the height of the alleged corruption. "There are no real contracts, even. They just signed papers and took the money."

Lt. Gen. David H. Petraeus, who oversees the U.S. military's training of Iraqi troops, conducts weekly briefings with the defense minister. Other Iraqi defense officials seldom are spotted without American civilian advisers nearby. The close relationship has raised questions as to how $500 million or more could vanish without U.S. intervention to stop the suspicious contracts that flowed for at least eight months.

"Ask them. I have the same question," al-Dulaimi said. "I blame those who posted them (the officials under investigation). And, by the way, the CPA posted them."

He was referring to the Coalition Provisional Authority, the occupation-era administration that American Ambassador L. Paul Bremer oversaw. Al-Dulaimi, other Iraqi politicians and some U.S. military officials blamed the CPA for forcing the Defense Ministry to hire previously unknown Iraqi officials, especially former exiles, without consulting Iraqi leaders.

Petraeus' spokesmen and U.S. Embassy officials said they raised concerns about corruption rumors but were constrained from doing more to prevent the alleged wrongdoing because a sovereign Iraqi government was in place. However, Iraqi politicians, eager to deflect blame ahead of the coming election season, said Americans introduced a culture that allowed room for corruption and that the Americans could have done more to protect the Iraqi public's money.

"Before me, there was another prime minister. His name was Bremer," Ayad Allawi, who served as interim premier when the corruption investigation began sometime last year, told Knight Ridder. "He ran this country, he had this ministry and a lot of the corruption started then. ... There was no auditing. Airplanes were flying in and the money was handed out in suitcases."

Former Defense Minister Hazem Shaalan has told U.S. and Iraqi officials that Bremer personally requested that Ziad Cattan - the alleged ringleader of the corruption and the ministry's former procurement chief - stay in his job after sovereignty was transferred last summer.

Bremer said this week, through his former CPA spokesman Dan Senor, that he didn't know Cattan. "At least to his knowledge, he'd never met him," Senor said.

Cattan, a dual Polish-Iraqi national, was fired in May and a warrant was issued for his arrest in connection with "the abuse of an employer's funds." He fled Baghdad and hasn't returned to answer the charges.

Col. John Martin, Petraeus' deputy for political-military affairs, said the general as well as high-ranking American and British defense advisers warned Allawi's defense chiefs of "their concerns about the lack of transparency in MoD procurement, the uncoordinated manner in which MoD procurement was proceeding and the possibility for - and rumors of - corruption."

"They also repeatedly warned the MOD that Dr. Ziad Cattan, in addition to procuring items Iraq did need, was also reportedly purchasing items the country did not need and could not afford to purchase, operate or sustain," Martin said. "At the end of the day, however, this was Iraqi money being spent by Iraqi officials of a sovereign country's ministry."

Even as hints of a corruption scandal emerged last spring, Cattan told others in the ministry that U.S. Defense Secretary Donald H. Rumsfeld personally had assured his job and no Iraqi had the power to remove him, al Dulaimi said. Instead of fleeing the investigation closing in on him, Cattan lobbied for even more authority. He wanted to become defense minister, a seat reserved for a Sunni Arab by al Jaafari's Shiite-dominated government, which was elected last January.

Cattan, a Sunni, contacted the Iraqi National Dialogue Committee, the main Sunni faction negotiating with al-Jaafari on Cabinet appointments, and offered members $10 million cash to nominate him as their candidate for the post, said Mohammed al-Daini and two other committee members who heard Cattan's proposal. The group refused, and al-Jaafari handed the post to al-Dulaimi, a British-educated sociologist who isn't implicated in the scandal.

In several e-mail messages last month, Cattan gave Knight Ridder photos and documents purporting to show his close working relationship with U.S. officials and his repeated requests for their help in streamlining the contracting process. He denied wrongdoing, but acknowledged that some Western officials who are accustomed to peacetime standards might take exception to the aggressive weapons procurement he conducted to quickly arm an Iraqi force against the insurgency.

"We support this when conditions are quiet and normal, but we cannot disregard or overlook the bloody actuality and stick to the ... procedures imposed on us," Cattan wrote to his superiors in a memo dated May 29, around the time of his dismissal. "We cannot stay handcuffed."

When the extent of the alleged corruption leaked to the U.S. Embassy, senior diplomats were "hopping mad," said an official with the U.S.-led Iraq Reconstruction Management Office who has personal knowledge of the Defense Ministry's transactions. He spoke on condition of anonymity Wednesday because he could face dismissal for discussing the matter without authorization.

"The entire embassy was upside down over this," he said. "I swear to God the advisers didn't know everything going on over there. Where did they get their information? From the Iraqis. I can give you one budget that says this country is flourishing and another that tells you this country is going to s---. The Iraqis told us only what they wanted us to hear."

While many of the contracts did result in useful, if overpriced, equipment for Iraq's 80,000 new troops, contracts involving shoddily refurbished helicopters from Poland, crates of loose ammunition from Pakistan and a fleet of leak-prone armored personnel carriers were among purchases that now are deemed unnecessary or unusable.

With the money paid in advance and no mechanism for a refund, al-Dulaimi said, the Defense Ministry is negotiating with weapons dealers to substitute the equipment for more useful items such as guns, radio communications and other vital supplies.

"It's chaos," al-Dulaimi said, visibly exasperated. "It's a result of all the chaos brought to Iraq."

You're right about the capacitors. Paper caps and electrolytics deteiorate and by now are about as useful as a 45 year old set of car tires. The radio might still work to some extent but it's likely to soon fail and it might take out a tube or an IF transformer or even set itself on fire. I'd also check the carbon comp resistors with an ohmmeter, replace the selenium rectifier with a silicon diode and replace the fuse. It might sound difficult, but actually it's not so hard.

They do work much better with good caps!

As far as safety goes, these radios can be converted to a three wire cord. The radio is rewired so the power switch breaks the hot wire rather than the neutral, the neutral is connected to the common power bus and the chassis/case is grounded. Again, it's not so hard. That's what I did with my SW-500.

S-120s have been around for about as long as THAT S.O.B. And it seems they both will be going on forever.

I rest my case. And when a government isn't square, you question it Iraq seeks our demise? OOO-Kay....then you may support him. I don't take your assertions as the gospel, however, and thus I question and challenge. "Iraq and the extremist Muslims" don't necessarily go together, by the way - another assumption of convenience.

You side-stepped the question. It still stands, although you can ignore it if your wish.

In any case - your definition of "scum" and mine may vary (in this case it does, a little bit, although mostly it is the same), and -

If our leaders do not wisely choose their scum to purge, then we are wasting our own time, our own people and our own money.

Isn't the DEGEN 1102 any better than the 1103 model? All Sony's I found up to know where steeply priced so if that model (1102) is more user friendly than its younger brother and has the same capabilities then I would go with it.

By the way, what's wrong with the Grundig YB400?

Eventually, I also found a Sangean 909 (if memory serves) that seems to be good, but's a battery-eater.

P.S.

Nobody is going to sell his Sony ICF-SW7600G /R? :p

Have you ever been to their store? I used to drive up about twice a year from just south of Dayton, till I moved to Florida late in 1987. They sold damaged equipment by the pound in a small room in the front corner of their old location. Sometimes you could find several of an item and spend a little time to repair the best unit. They had a lot of obsolete parts at great prices, too. I just found two of their old catalogs the other day: 1982 & 1986.

They had the R-390 receivers for $450 and a Hammurlund SP-600-JT for $285 in 1982. If you were into BCB DX, they had the R-101/ARN-6 for $39.50.

They had the R-390 receivers for $335 and a Hammurlund SP-600-JT were gone in 1986. If you were into BCB DX, they had the R-101/ARN-6 for $65.00.

Good! You passed your civics class. And, as I am in theory allowed to tell my reps what to do, I may tell them to oppose the President or support the President, depending on my opinion.

>The difference is that he was elected into office. Whether or not you

My my - you are certainly reading alot more into my statements than I ever wrote into them. Tell me more! I am so fascinating...;-)

By the way, I seriously doubt that anyone who looks closely at the last two elections in the US is sure of who was elected - the evidence of either side winning is sketchy at best.

>> This, without even getting into the question of his generalized competency for the >> job.

> On what basis are you to judge his competency?

I am the United States, bucko, along with 300,000,000 other citizens.
In the Constitution of the US, I and my countrymen and women have the ultimate supreme power to decide whether he is competent and whether he deserves to be the President. I don't know what country you come from, but here in America we the people ARE the basis for judging the competency of our leaders.

What I am not in control of, however, is whether the rest of my countrymen pay enough attention or think critically enough to make an informed decision, or whether they just knee-jerk react to the demegoguery of the seemingly endless parade of fools that purport to be the leaders of this planet. Most of the characters on this newsgroup seem to indicate the latter.

>> Frankly, if he's wrong, he's WRONG and we have an obligation to

First off, I don't owe you ANYTHING - it's your job to figure out these things on your own.

Second, I have yet to see a fact come from the White House that they can verify - mostly it's been a smokescreen of thick oily haze. They are ones who owe us. Extraordinary claims, which they have made to justify their war, deserve extraordinary evidence. So far, no good.

And sure as hell, logic is not our president's friend.

>I expect you to show verifiable and relevant facts from your vast > international intelligence sources. You imply that your "intelligence" is

You expect? And who are you, Mr.SeeingEyeDog?

I imply nothing. I say that the government has gone to no substantive lengths to show that their Iraq war is justified, and I am still waiting.

>Are you g-g-g-g-od?

Are you stupid? Jeez, what a nut.

>You obviously have no clue what it is like to live under Fascism or Communism.

And you do? Do tell...

You blithering idiot - you have no idea, NO IDEA, based on my posts, what my knowledge base is. I stand by my original statement - when a leader leads a nation down a pathway upon which history casts doubt, it is the duty of the rank and file to question and challenge that leader to do the right thing and, if necessary, cast him aside in favor of one who will do what is right. It doesn't matter whether it is Fascism or Communism or Idi Aminism or Howdy-Doody-ism.

Contrary to what you seem to infer from these posts, I do not imply anything like overthrow. I am a solid Constitutionalist, including all the rights - ALL of them - that the Conservatives in the US like to support or denounce, depending on their mood. I can wait unitl it's time to throw the bum out legally.

>But that is certainly not surprising considering the pathetic state of our education system.

So how do you come by your expert knowledge?

>An education system that has become Socialist and conveniently omits the history of these hineous regimes. That is exactly what Fascist and

Communist regimes do in their "education' camps. <

That's not what I learned in school - My history teachers were rabid on showing the reckless venom of Stalinism and Fascism, and the value of our still best Constitutional government. Don't fool yourself, Bunky, those guys still represent, for me, the greatest villainy of all time. Jefferson and Franklin are still my heroes. Apparently not yours, though...sounds like you'd like to see King Georgy-Doody keep on going for awhile

You seem to have not gotten this type of education. Where were you brought up, Bright Boy?

>So in a sense, you are correct. This country is turning into a Fascist Communist state.<

Screwball.

Name a couple. Must be balanced now - not just Republican retards (like Snakewoman - you know who).

How about that stalwart of liberalism, who had opposed the Iraq war at every turn and has provided excellent rational for doing so -Pat Buchanan? Or wil you conveniently exclude him?

Exactly who in hell are you talking about?

That's not what I read in the paper this weekend. Bush is starting to admit that they have bitten off more than they can chew. I am amazed that he has the humility to say so, but anyway...

Looks like Bushy is starting to admit defeat (while trying to save as much face as he can).

See Bush's statements over the weekend.

What have we lost? Iraq's oil? Who cares? We can, and should, still go after the terrorists where they lie - which is by all appearances NOT Iraq.

administration seems to have the desire to see it through. We aren't leaving until the new Iraqi govt can stand on it's own. That would be a <sigh> This is probably true. There are only two ways to get rid of Islam enmity - (1) make honest friends with them, or (2) murder them all. Otherwise, we spend eternity fighting with 1,000,000,000 Muslims who believe us to be the devil incarnate.

I don't think Bush really knows what he wants for America. but I am sure he knows what he wants for his millionaire buddies. To him, and to most pseudo-conservatives, that is the bottom line - business prospers at any cost...except its own.

I think he is a short-sighted mental midget who values family first, money second and everything else a distant last. I don't think he is power-hungry, but I think that while he has it, he is willing to use it in whatever way he can to achieve these values. I am no seer, but I predict history will ultimately see him this way.

Austrasia.Lets me get over to one of my other webtv thingys and email Mary and her hubby in the Sydney,Austrasia area and see how they are doing.He owns his own construction business and one day he slipped off a ladder and rotated one of his shoulder cuffs.She said he didn't want to get medical help.That woman in Texarkana,Texas (she works at a nurseing home in Texarkana,Texas) said his shoulder cuff will lock up and he can't do a thing with it.I believe she (Subrina in Texarkana,Texas) is

9/11, why are we in Iraq?"

Because the weapons may now be in syria or a surrounding country?

Because it is suspicious iran now has very identical equipment to which we went into iran searching for?

Because americas' enemies are found there?

Because if we don't leave iraq correctly another dictator who ends up slaughtering his own people may well rise to power?

David - Huh ?
With an Active Broadband Receive "Only' Antenna (NFJ-1024) using a Coax Cable to the Radio; a Tuner (Variable Match) would do little good. With such a Broadband Active Antenna a Pre-Selector (Narrowing the Band Width) prior to the Receiver could provide some additional Front-End Filtering {Peaking the RF Signal} "IF" your Receiver had an inadequate RF Front-End.

No. 1 I dont fit the profile, No. 2 if they ever do pull me out of a line I can provide them with a birth certificate, showing when and where I was born, I can show them my SS security card from the early 60s, No. 3 I can tell them to check with the DOD where when I was in the military I had a top secret security clearance.
That should take maybe 30-60 minutes before they tell me to run along and play. I.E. " I " have nothing to hide.
Knowing some middle eastern types (I worked along side Iranians while in the military) like I do. I can only imagine the hissy fit this guy threw when he got tapped on the shoulder,,, which no doubt started to dig his own grave with his mouth. They can and are some of the most arrogant bastards Ive ever seen. They think all westerners are beneath them. So to answer your question,, I will comply with what they want, as well as tell/show them the above info.

have NEVER been in the business of providing jobs. They have been in business to make a profit to keep their stockholders happy. Which gets harder to do as time goes on from competition. Back in the 50s and 60s their simply wasnt much competition because overseas countries hadnt really industrialized much yet. Starting with the 70s things chaged, 3rd world countries started industrializing and making the same products

Economics 102:

If US corporations do not hire US workers, and continue to move those jobs overseas, eventually they will lose all those profits they had hoped to gain. This because those workers who either no longer have jobs at all, or have jobs at Burger King or 7-11, can no longer afford to buy the products of said corporations. Add to this that the rest of the world will not be able to afford them, either, since the wages they pay their overseas workers are not sufficient to support the market.

MZ,
Building a "SNAKE" Antenna [Hidden / Stealth] (End-Fed-Dipole) [Day-in-the-Park / Camping / Emergency Antenna]
Take 50 to 100 Feet of TV 'type' Coax Cable.
Hold it in Half - Tip-to-Tip. (Find the Mid-Point)
Remove about an Inch of the Outer Insulation Cover and Shielding at the Fold in the Coax Cable. Do not damage the Inner Insulation and Center Conductor. Tape this Area around the exposed Inner Insulation and Cover it well.
Take one End of the Coax Cable (Remove the "F" Connector) and Join together the Inner Center Conductor and the Outer Shielding.
This is now the "Far-End" of the Antenna.
Lay-out the Coax Cable On-the-Ground (In-the-Grass).
Connect the end of the Coax Cable with the "F" Connector via an Adapter to your Radio.
Now you have built your self a "SNAKE" Antenna (End Fed Dipole) to use with your Radios.
NOTE -This same End-Fed-Dipole Antenna when Camping can be Elevated at the Center from a Tree Limb; Strung-Up Vertically; or Hung-Up-and-Out as a Sloper.

Will it have any effect, good or bad, if the feed end of a 60 foot sloper antenna is lower than the opposite end. In order to get 60 feet of length, I need to raise the antenna elements as they go away from the house. I do not have enough space in the back yard to do it differently. Should I look at using a 40 foot sloper instead? Thanks for any information!

I'm sure it will still work one way or the other, however, if it's not installed the way it was meant to be installed it may not work as well as intended.

You do realize, don't you, that it sounds equally asinine whether one is painting all Republicans with a fascist paint brush or painting all Democrats with a communist one.

The fact is, we need both ends of the spectrum to exist in order for society to stay somewhere in the middle. We really don't WANT our country to be all the way either way.

Your first sentence is absolutely correct.

The second, I fear, is not. We may need both ends of the spectrum, plus the spectrum itself, to maintain our balance, but this forum is evidence that there are at least a sizable minority who want it all one way. Democracy be damned.

Then-Attorney General John Ashcroft testified at the 9/11 Commission's grandstanding hearings that one of its own commissioners, former high-ranking Clinton Justice Department appointee Jamie S. Gorelick, had been the prime architect of one of the problems for which the commissioners regularly denounced the Bush administration: the wall between intelligence agencies. Her infamous 1995 "wall" memo produced much of the harmful lack of intelligence coordination that the Commission then used to criticize the Bush administration.

...the intelligence wall Deputy Attorney General Gorelick put in place smothered ongoing investigations into Chinese contributions to Bill Clinton's presidential campaigns. Specifically the Department of Defense and the CIA were prohibited from exchanging relevant information with the FBI.
Not all were happy at the time with Gorelick's action. Gutsy New York City-based U.S. Attorney Mary Jo White was appalled by the Gorelick directive, sending two of her own memoranda back to Janet Reno and Gorelick protesting, "The most effective way to combat terrorism is with as few labels and walls as possible so that wherever permissible, the right and left hands are communicating." Her recommendations were ignored. According to the New York Post, White was so incensed by their actions that she wrote a second, scathing memorandum warning that the "wall" hindered law enforcement efforts to combat terrorism. "It will cost lives," she reportedly warned. This second memo is still kept secret.
This inaction seemed to fall into line with the Clinton administration's general disregard for terrorism. Although the discredited former National Security Council staffer Richard Clarke presented President Clinton as an anti-terrorism warrior, former intelligence officer Ralph Peters tells a much different story. "Admitting that [terrorist] threats were real.threatened to destroy the belief system the Clintonites had carried into office," Peters detailed. In regards to the entire terrorist network, methodology, and ideology, the Clintons were "a textbook case of denial." It was bad enough, as the "Able Danger" reports indicate, that the Clintons were willfully ignorant of the threat but their criminal negligence was compounded by a sleazy attempt to pass the buck on the Bush administration. Bill Clinton never made any serious retaliation for any of these provocations, nor the 1993 World Trade Center bombing, emboldening these terrorists, assuring through his "intelligence wall" that 9/11 terrorists could not be properly identified and apprehended, and passing the blame for the inevitable outcome of his policies to the nascent Bush administration.

If there was, in fact, covert direction from the top of the Commission to key members of its staff to cloak any link between Saddam and the September 11 attacks, to obfuscate evidence tying the Iraqi regime to al-Qaeda and Mohammed Atta, and to paint the most positive possible picture of the Clintons as implacable terror-warriors, then "Able Danger" had to be ignored and covered up. It fits the pattern of revisionist historical interpretations that seems to be the only authentic legacy from the Clinton years.

By acknowledging the Iraq/al-Qaeda ties, not only to terrorism in general but to the September 11 attack, the war becomes completely justifiable as exactly what the Bush administration claimed it was: a defensive, if preemptive, war to protect the United States from a regime with cordial ties to anti-American terrorists. This outcome is so repugnant to the hard Left that it will justify even the most extraordinary suppression of evidence or promulgation of an outright lie in order to achieve its ends.

This is a critically important story that demands public attention. It will not be seriously investigated by many reporters, because the mainstream (read: leftist) media is not interested in exposing how its favorite president in decades enabled terrorists to pull off the worse act of domestic terrorism in U.S. history.

The following is a transcript of comments made by Cindy Sheehan at a pro-Lynne Stewart rally held on Wednesday, April 27, 2005 at San Francisco State University. Among the sponsors of the event were the National Lawyers Guild, Campaign to End the Death Penalty, the INTERNATIONAL SOCIALIST ORGANIZATION, and the Campus Antiwar Network.

Cindy Sheehan - "I was raised in a country by a public school system that taught us that America was good, that America was just. America has been killing people, like my sister over here says, since we first stepped on this continent, we have been responsible for death and destruction. I passed on that bullshit to my son and my son enlisted. I m going all over the country telling moms: This country is not worth dying for."

It's interesting to note the parallels in the former Yugoslavia invasion and the Iraq invasion.

One had absolutely no national interest to the USA, the other had vital interest.

One had rumors of genocide, the other had rumors of weapons of mass destruction.

One had Haliburton as a no-bid contractor with lots of cost overruns, the other had Haliburton as a no-bid contractor with lots of cost overruns.

One allowed the country to fragment into four or more independant states, the other is trying to hold together several diverse states.

One invasion of no national interest was applauded by the the left, the other of vital interest.... is condemned.

The one with no vital interest had wide support across many countries. The one with the vital interest (oil) had a couple of countries (of meaning) supporting it.

A coment about the land fromerly making the nation of Yugoslavia

2 of the nations Serbia and Montenegro had been independant state when jioned into Yugoslavia, Croatia, had been egeaged in effort to achieve its fredom from the KaKa as the Hapsburg empire was known when Yugoslavia, was formed Macedonain had been part of the Turskish empire til it was thrown into the mix So Yugoslavie born aprox 1919 of peices of 4 prewar nations died in the 1980's by spining it various parts, back apart again

What's so bizarre? Bin Laden was "our man" in Afghanistan, much as the now "criminal" Noriega was "our man" in Panama and Saddam was "our man" in Iraq (see the 1983 picture of a smiling Rummy with his arm around Saddam).

Hey, yesterday's "our man" is today's demon/Hitler...

It still boils down to keeping the stockholders happy and investing. If you lose that battle, there is no company to worry about. This is what happened to the steel industry in the mid- late 70's. The US companies were prdominatley using old antiquated non efficient bessomer type kilns from the 30s and the Japanese built brand new computer controlled electric foundries that could melt 20-30 tons of steel in 30 minutes. US investors lost confidence and moved there money elesewhere and the results are history.
Which scenerio is worse??

According to Eton, there were 300 to 400 shipped out.
The Sharper Image got over 100 of them. This is a first run batch. They also stated that Universal got a 100 too. But when I told them the actual number was 15 they said "oh". So who really knows. What I do know is that I have had 2 of them already, serial numbers 00174 and 00180, which seems to be working just fine right now. I also got the 70.00 replacement plan for it after the first one failed.
The guy at Eton also said its gonna be a few weeks before they get anymore from India, and that they are being shipped directly to the stores. Also try the JC Penny Catalog Shop, they are supposed to have a few according to Eton. Hope this helps, I got lucky living in a major market. Thats where they are all being shipped.

This .sig file will continue until Mister Fort posts a sincere apology to all cancer victims and their families. His refusal to do so says more about his attitude and upbringing than any of his thoughtless and hurtful postings in rec.radio.shortwave. He seems to be very proud of the fact that he can buy expensive radios using the refunded deposit money from his empty beer containers and has frequently posted the fact. It appears he is well on his way to purchasing his next radio. Anyone caring about his well-being should mention the good work of Alcoholics Anonymous to him.

How's the price of gas?
Hear a big flushing sound as jobs disappear?
Ever wonder why 9 of the 13 hijackers were Saudi's and yet Bin Laden's relatives were allowed a flight out after 9-11 when the air space was shut down?
Ever think how much Bush might have invested in common with the Saudi's?

OMG, this is way too much.

Don't you love the unbalanced budget? Much better than a balanced budget with Clinton. What Clinton did in the Oval Office was nothing compared to G. W. B. and company.

You are most likely right about bush. I big money, corporate superpowers and those otherwise keeping pockets full are the real bosses. They play us for dummies.

What in your personal life got better under clinton? What in your personal life got better under bush?

Do you really think I hold hope in any man they stick in there? It is the people who have to stand up to the plate and control their employees. Would help by grabbing a couple, investigating what is obvious and toss them into prison if they are committing crimes against american citizens. I think many are thinking on how to do this, frankly, I feel kind of powerless.

About the best I can do is acknowledge there is something rotten going on... and a general knowledge that "something-ain't-right" just isn't good enough... be a help if we could just make the news start doing their job again... telling the truth...

I have a few incandescents (swiched and in daily use0) which last far longer than the POS CF bulbs.So it's disingenuous 9using my kindest language) to blare "Outlsts conventionl bulbs 10 - 1" if there are hidden conditions for that performance. And there's no savings if I have to run a quarter of the energy four times longer than needed (I really don't have a need to run my garage lights all day and night) in order to come up with the specified life.

A short whip will not be inductive at frequencies below 150 MHz or so. At HF they are entirely capacitive probes.

Next time you try a wire on the ground use the radios 50 ohm input if it has one. It might work better than the high impedance input. The wire up in the trees will probably work better on the high Z input.

Many things come into play that determine how an antenna will work. You always have to work within the constraints of the situation in which you live. Best bet is to give it a try and if it works out well then you are set. If not then you will have to try something else.

With a single element antenna ground is important since it is the other half of it so install at least one ground rod where the antenna starts out near the ground. Here I'm assuming you are going to use coax from the radio to where the antenna begins.

No it isn't. The body politic can't be in both places at once. If the middle is in normal condition, it WON't be sticking it's head or feet in places they don't belong. Extremism in either direction leads to dictatorship.

It has to, as the 'other' side are all idiots and traitors to the 'real' spirit of the country and must be put out of the governing circle. Name calling and hatred usually precede the violence and the death camps.

I'm sure they would be tolerant of much MORE picturesque descriptions of the bestialist scum rapist. He's even admitted to NOT having raped any women before the Vietnamese national he got back in the sixties. Her kid was in the next room.

I love this group. We have a militia freak with an underdeveloped vocabulary with thousands of rounds of ammo put away for a rainy day, a drunken necrophiliac ex US Master Sargeant and a retired nitwit with a history of rape and self admitted fantasies of Dog sex.

Hollywood couldn't do better.

The disassembly photos are totally unreadable as I found out today. I had to replace a capacitor that just happened to have its solder side beneath the dial assembly. Got the job done luckily without having to remove the assembly.
Won't try that disassembly without a good readable copy.

Panasonic radios.Well,I own a Panasonic RF-2600 radio I bought brand spanking new,new as a new born baby's a.. at a local Jackson,Mississippi (I live in Jackson) Service Merchandise store wayyyyyyy up north on the I-55 frontage road in Jackson.(later on,there was a new Service Merchandise store on Highway 80,about half a mile from me) A few years later,it quit working,it wouldn't do zip,not even light up or anything,it was just as if it wasen't even plugged in the wall outlet,stone cold dead! I never have used any of the jacks on the radio before,but I noticed if I push around on the earphone jack,it would turn on for a minute or two or a half a second,take your pick.I own many other Pansonic radios I have bought over the years from thrift stores.Here is my personal opinion of Panasonic,Mostly JUNK! Would I reccomend buying a Panasonic anything? H..L NO!

Head down to Mendelson's in Dayton if you have the time. Leave early, and you can spend the whole day, if its still as full as it used to be.
I used to find a lot of good parts and equipment there, when I lived about an hour south of their store. I would go there about once a month to see what was new, or to pick up stuff I needed for my electronics business.

A quick rundown: A bi-polar mental patient has been stalking me online for about three years. The link had phone numbers where you could arrange to drop off computers or parts for my project. One of the numbers was for my church. He called them and was screaming threats at them, and scared the daylights out of the woman who answered the phone. The link won't be listed again till the Sheriff's office finishes with the case against him. He is in Oregon, and after he made the call he got on one of the radio newsgroups to brag about what he'd done. That is one reason I haven't been around much lately, I've been trying to clean up the mess he caused, and keep up with the computers and parts as they are donated.

If anyone is interested in the project they can e-mail me and I'll send them the link to the website.

My only use for Google's mapping software is for satellite photos of properties people want to buy. I get the other information from the county property appraiser's platt maps. I set it up for my church to get the information they need to help low income people qualify for a home loan.

Google Earth experts needed -- URL for BALAD AIR BASE + BALAD RELAY STATION
(SED -- Salal El Deel)
(AKA "Camp Anaconda")

The 2 infrastructure locations are next to each other.

I am not interested in the Balad Airbase, but its proximity to SED -- so as to prove that SED can be safely reactivated.

SED, as a relay station -- is only equalled by : Wertachtal, Allois+Issodun, Delano, Novosibirsk.

==========
Why is this observation now important?
==========

Balad has 16 x 500 kw SW transmitters and an indeterminate number of transmission antennas.
It may have been designed to target Iran, as well as the rest of the Arab-Islamic world.

Iraq has at least 20 x 500 kw transmitters.
Its transmission capacity to Iran cannot be determined at this time, as the schematics of Balad remain secretly hidden in Switzerland. Balad was a
'turnkey' subcontract to ABB, now Tomson-CSF newly named Thales.

Balad has a rotatable SW antenna, suitable for global coverage.

If they don't agree with what their doing they should quit and it's awfully snobby and presumptuous on your part to think they don't know any better. Are you Libs saying our troops are stupid? And how are Moms responsible anyway? Are you trying to make Moms feel guilty? What an ass hole.

I think more kids should die for Bush and their mothers should be happy about it. I mean Bush was pretty damn happy when he met the dead kid's mothers last year. You gotta love a guy that laughs at death.

Jeff, if you want a good camping radio, I'd strongly suggest the Radio Shack DX-375. Looking on eBay right now I'm seeing them going for under $20. I've got one at home, love it. The only down side is no tuning knob for tuning around, you have to use the buttons, but other than that it's slick. In fact, I took it with me to Radio Shack one time when I was shopping around for something with a few more bells and whistles.
The guy in the store and I brought out some of their portables they had at the time and did some tuning around, and the 375 picked up stuff that the fancier radios didn't even hear at all!

One of the things I do with files like this is to open them up in a virtual computer. I use VirtualPC and have a virtual system set up with the basics -- Windows XP, Office 2003 -- and run things in there before I run them on the main system. I've yet to find anything dangerous, because most stuff gets nabbed by the anti-virus and anti-spyware software, but it's a good precaution.

I don't think Shortwave is dying at all, neither is ham radio. There are still a lot of places on this old planet where the Internet is still not readily available, so for news and entertainment the shortwave receiver is still pretty much the only method of delivery. Same goes for some places where the government is restrictive in what it will let the people see in their regular media, or even on the Internet -- China is actively filtering access to the Web within that country, for example.

There may be less discussion about it here on the 'Net but that's not a very accurate indicator of the medium worldwide. The people who depend on shortwave are the same people who either don't have access to the Internet or who are restricted in what they can get to on the 'Net by their government, hence they don't get into the discussions on RRS here....

(Stamp collecting may be in a bit of a decline, but that's a subject for a different news group.)

Same for some other countries with totalitarian regimes -- Cuba comes to mind first. There's also the matter of simple geographic isolation, such as places in Africa or Central Asia. Shortwave gets the message through when other more technological means are simply not available, or are limited.

Here's one example: I work for Wycliffe Associates (see www.wycliffeassociates.org), an organization which mobilizes volunteers to assist the people in Wycliffe Bible Translators in getting things done, so that the translators can concentrate on translating and not worry about building buildings and such. Many of our overseas locations have some limited Internet capability, but VERY limited in bandwidth -- most dial-up users here in the States get faster throughput, in fact. Due to that limitation, the Internet connection there is pretty much dedicated to necessary uses only. Surfing the Web for news and such falls pretty low on the priority list. Due to geographic isolation, it's pretty hard to have the New York Times delivered ;-) so what else is left but shortwave?

Same goes for getting news via the Web, or with the new RSS feeds. I'm

As a stamp collector, I'll tell you what I know. The number of collectors is somewhat in decline, and the average age is rising. Very similar to ham radio, in fact. However, that's looking at hobby collectors. There are other "collectors" who are looking at philately more as an investment, and those are in fact increasing. So it depends on your point of view as to the validity of the claim that stamp collecting is in decline.

I believe HCJB is doing something along the same lines, with

There are LOTS of them on the Yahoo! Groups site. See http://groups.yahoo.com and search for "shortwave" -- you'll get lots of hits. You can also look directly in the category at:

http://dir.groups.yahoo.com/dir/1603396379

(points to Hobbies & Crafts > Hobbies > Amateur and Ham Radio > Shortwave)

There are also groups dedicated to specific types of monitoring (pirate radio, numbers stations, etc.) and to specific broadcasters. You'll also find groups dedicated to manufacturers (Yaesu, ICOM, etc.) and to specific radios (Sony ICF-SW100, Yaesu FRG-100, etc.).

Plenty of stuff to keep you busy...! ;-)

Extract the ZIP file and double-click on the Shortwave_Log.msi file to install Shortwave Log. That works for updates as well as first-time installations. That's all there is to it.

This is true, although perhaps obvious.. Now you have the problem of a nonlinear device at the antenna input. If he lives in an urban area, it is an invite to horrible IM and crossmod problems. Usually not considered good engineeering practice.

A better solution might be to forget tuning the whip input and use a high IP3 amplifier as in the Amrad project, or use a simple stepper motor to turn an air variable cap.

Our Revolution was started because of predatory pricing by multinational corporations, in cahoots with the government, forcing local entenpreneurs out of business.

The government's tax structure should benefit domestic companies and punish those who use slave labor in Third World countries.

I've owned all three, and the only one I chose to keep is the DE1103. It's much more sensitive straight out of the box than the other two, and even though it has an odd layout, you get used to it pretty quickly.

Give the 1103 a dedicated analog volume knob and it becomes my favorite radio. Right now, it's a close third behind the PL-350 and the Sony-ICF7601.

Nothing like presidential consistency. George Bush has racked up at least 1800, and thats only the deaths that occurred inside Iraq. And anyway Bush was too busy playing golf to heed the warnings arising out of the foiled plot to bomb LA to abandon his extended leave and tackle the problem prior to 9/11. But then why would he 9/11 provided him with the perfect pretext to attack Iraq.

Looking at a review of the 1103. I've inserted 7600-relevant comments starting with ME:

The Basics
The radio measures 6.5"(w) x 4" (h) x 1" (d) and weighs approximately 1 lb. with 4 AA cells loaded. Size wise, it is somewhat smaller than the Sony 7600g but larger than the Degen DE1102.

Frequency Coverage
AM/MW 520 - 1710 kHz
LW 100 - 519 kHz
FM 76 - 108 MHz
SW 1711 - 29999 kHz

ME: same as 7600G

While the DE1103 has ten shortwave band segments identified, the coverage is indeed continuous. The radio is capable of receiving single sideband on LW, MW and SW.

Tuning
The DE1103 can be tuned several ways:

(1) Direct frequency entry. Using this method, you enter the frequency from the "keypad" (a single horizontal row of buttons, 0 .... 9) and then hit the Bands+/AM button unless you are on FM, where you use the Band-/FM button.

ME: 7600G, similar. except it has a more traditional keypad.

(2) Automatic scanning. This can be accomplished by holding the Band+ or Band- button down for a few seconds. The radio will scan until a strong station is found. It will pause for 3 seconds and then continue.
In auto-scan mode, the tuning increments are 1 kHz for MW/LW, 5 kHz for SW and 100 kHz on FM.

ME: 7600G, basically the same, except it tunes in 1khz increments in SW, which really helps if you are looking for utility stations and, in come cases, pirates. (also tunes FM in .05 mhz)

One way that the 1103 cannot be tuned is from up/down buttons. These are not provided in this radio.

ME: 7600G does have up and down buttons. No tuning knob per se though.

Help, I'm trapped in a band segment! The 1103 has "carved" out ten shortwave band segments. One example would be the 41 meter band from 6500-7500 kHz. An annoying feature of the radio, is that once you are in a band segment, you can't manually tune out of it. Example - you are tuning in the upper range of the 41 meter band...as you use the knob and move past 7500, you are returned to the low end of that band segment at 6500. The only way to get to 7501 is to punch in 7-5-0-1 and hit the Band+/AM button (or get there with a memory pre-set button). Not very convenient. It operates this way in auto-scan, which I can understand.

ME: 7600G will tune continuously from the lower to upper limit of SW if you want.

Performance
A couple of general notes. The wide-narrow filter on the DE1103 is very effective. It does a really good job of whacking back adjacent channel interference. Listeners will be impressed with both selectivity and sensitivity.

ME: The 7600G has one AM filter, kinda between "wide" and "narrow". I think it's a tad narrow. Two filters would be better.

AM/MW
The DE1103 is a good performer on MW. Selectivity seems to be the strong point of the radio on MW. It did a pretty good job of reducing the sidebands of my local MW pest station. Sensitivity on MW was average to above average. You can really see the effectiveness of the narrow filter on MW.

ME: 7600G is ok for MW but not spectacular, though it pairs nicely with a passive loop like the select-a-tenna.

FM
Performance on FM is above average. Stereo reception is possible by using headphones. It does a pretty good job of detecting weak stations. The DE1103 allows you to switch between mono and stereo.

ME: 7600G is pretty good for FM, not as good as the ATS-909 or the 2010. The 7600 lacks a mono switch, which i think is indispensable when listening to weak FM.

SW
The DE1103 performs very well on shortwave. I can copy the major shortwave broadcasters easily. As mentioned earlier, the narrow filter setting is quite effective. To test its ability to copy weak signals, I gave it a good workout in the amateur 80, 40 and 20 meter bands. Both sideband and cw signals were easily copied. The 1 kHz tuning increment and the fine tuning (BFO) control works well to copy sideband. Often times, shortwave portables fall short higher in frequency. I checked up in the CB 11 meter band and got good copy up there.

ME: 7600G- SSB copy is very good. Like the 1103 it has a BFO wheel. I like that a lot.

LW
There isn't much to listen to in my part of the world, but I was able to copy a few beacons here.

ME: 7600G, basically the same. The expected local aeronautical beacons come in just fine.

Audio
The 3" speaker provides enough audio when the 1103 pulls in a station that is strong enough to hear. As you would expect, better audio is obtained by listening through headphones.

ME: 7600G, probably better. There is suprisingly good bass for a speaker this small, but the high end in AM mode is a little lacking. FM sounds great.

Left Side
>From Top to Bottom:
External antenna jack for SW/MW Local/DX switch
headphone jack DC power jack

ME: 7600G has an external jack for SW/MW antennas. Together with the Sony AN-LP1, it digs out a lot of signals (for an inside antenna).

Right Side

>From Top to Bottom:
Tuning knob (which has many uses on the 1103)
Narrow-Wide filter (News-Music on FM)
Fine tuning (BFO) for sideband Line Out jack
The light on/off switch is located next to the line out jack.

ME: Looks like the 1103 has a similar SSB facility as the 7600G.
the 7600G can select betw USB and SSB. Not sure if the 1103 can.

Ergonomics
Here is the radio's weakness. Let's start with the whole display concept of the 1103. This is a digital radio with a simulated analog dial in the 12 marked band segments (FM, MW and the 10 SW segments). As you tune across a band segment, the digital display tells you what precise frequency you are on. A digital pointer "sweeps" across the fake analog dial and approximates your position there. The pointer does not move continuously however. Example, you have to tune 30 kHz on MW before the pointer moves. So, the pointer points to 670 as you tune to that frequency. It stays there until you reach 700 when it jumps up.
The marker jumps with every 25 kHz of tuning on shortwave. The analog simulation seems entirely unnecessary to me. It is like having a wristwatch with the traditional hour/minute hands and then a digital display to go along with it. Why? This analog simulation takes up a lot of space on the 1103, is usually not accurate and you will need to grab the bifocals to read the teeny numbers on the simulated dial.

ME: Sounds like an older Sony design that also flopped. It seems ridiculous to me. Simply displaying the freq and meter band number ought to be plenty.

Volume Control
Where is the volume control, where is the knob? Degen has turned the most basic of operations into an engineering exercise. To adjust the volume, you push a volume button and then turn the tuning knob. Now that is not intuitive. I believe this was a poor design decision. To add insult to injury, once you have set your volume setting, you have to wait a few seconds for the volume icon to stop blinking. If you try to tune before it stops, all you do is readjust the volume level!

ME: Okay, this feature would DRIVE ME CRAZY!! Excuse the shouting.

Keypad
I do not care for the single row of number buttons. We have all gotten used to the basic keypad or something very close. Unfortunately, so much space was used on the 1103 for the analog simulation, that there is no space for a standard keypad.

ME: I have to agree with the reviewer. The 7600G has a more standard keypad layout.

Backlight
The backlight is quite effective in dark conditions. With the backlight on, all the buttons and display light up when you use any button or the main tuning dial. The downside to this, is that you have to make some kind of change (by pressing a button or moving the tuning knob) to get the lights to come on.

ME: In my opinion, this is where a lot of radios fail in the ergonomics department. Why don't more radios use LEDs instead of this backlit LCD business? The LED is readable day or night. okay, okay, I'm backing away from the soapbox..

Radio ON and OFF Display
With the radio on, the display shows the frequency, sleep (if selected), memory position and a relative strength meter. The strength meter shows 9 "bars" - however, it is really just a four position setting as it moves between 2-4-6-9 bars shown. With the radio off, the clock time shows along with any alarms set.

ME: seems like the the 7600's meter is more accurate than this.
The 7600G has to be turned off to view the clock, as well. It also has sleep, alarm and timer functions.

Memories/Presets
The 1103 provides 256 available memories. They are named in 16 groups of 16 presets.

ME: Here's where the 1103 whips the 7600G, which only has 22 memories .

Antennas AM/MW reception is via the internal ferrite loopstick. FM and SW are received off the 36" telescoping whip antenna. There is an antenna jack provided to connect an external antenna for SW and MW.

ME: 7600G, same..

Power/Charger
The 1103 runs on 4 AA cells. My test of the radio was not long enough to ascertain battery life. The radio comes equipped with 1300 mAh rechargeable NiMH cells. These provided batteries can be recharged right in the radio with its internal recharger. The radio can also be powered via AC. The DE1103 comes with a 220 volt AC adapter, so obtaining a 110 volt step down transformer-adapter is a must.

ME: the 7600 gets about 25 hrs on 4 AAs.

I think we can log that one up to somebodies imagination.
The Only bombers that have ever been at McConnell AFB are the B 52s that they fly in to having Boeing do an upgrade or refurbish.
(Boeing and McConnell) share a common runway. It hasnt been much of a base for quite some time now, was there just last year.
It used to be many years ago a combination TAC and SAC base but the SAC planes were transports and an occaisional recon plane.
Then they got rid of the TAC side of it, then the AF reorganized and got rid of SAC. So I dont know what they have there now but it aint much.

Island,New York (I love New York) running their sewage down the streets?
Yeah,I am selfish.Sue Me!
cuhulin <

Well, that exactly makes my point. If, assuming we in the US are on a stable footing economically, can afford to help third world nations get a leg up, we might accomplish a couple of things:

(1) Make their lives better - we're good guys;
(2) Help them take pride in their own living conditions - less sewage in the streets;
(3) Make it palatable for them to stay in their own countries, helping to solve both our own border security problems and homeland overpopulation potential.

Once they reach a higher standard, we can then begin to deal with them like the humans they are instead of as a scary potential plague.

This approach has been tried in some coastal desert African nations, and so far the results have been quite positive - formerly starving people now have enough food grown by ecologically benign means, plus enough to sell or barter to others, AND they have, for the first time in their lives, free time to enjoy life a little bit instead of groveling for every cockroach every minute of the day. Cost to civilized nations footing the bill - minimal. Potential benefits in long term to entire region - enormous.

I'm not saying it will work everywhere - but every mouth fed with healthy food today is another stomach that won't be desperate tomorrow, and that can't be all bad.

I agree. Shortwave has been writhing on its deathbed for as long as I can remember. It will remain there, writhing away, for many, many generations into the future. Just wait and see. 200 years from now people will still be debating whether or not shortwave has a future.

That's the reason why I don't think the 1103 a valable option, perhaps the 1102 would be a better choice? It seems to come at a nice price too!

How the 1102 stands compared with the Sony and the Grundig?

If I cannot find a 7600G /R at a good price (even used) then I'll look for a Grundig YB400 /PE, I assume it's a good radio... but I don't know.

The synch detector included in the 7600 does it make really stand out of the croud?

I don't consider the ATS-909 because its high power requiriments.

Oh, and by the way, Cuhulin - in case you haven't noticed, many of the people on this newsgroup think you're a creep and treat you badly. In my response, except for the ribbing about calling you a "selfish bastard," I've been pretty decent and have tried to treat you like the thinking person I believe you to be. If you want to reap respect, sow a bit of the same.

I related an idea that not only suggests that we could help impoverished people with little hope of survival, but also do ourselves a big favor by making them LESS jealous and likely to "hate our guts," as well as make them want to remain in their own nations, and you dimiss it as my namby-pamby BullS..t. I didn't invent the idea, nor did I make it work, but I have the brain and eyes to recognize a potentially promising idea when I see it.

Call it what you want, but I see my country getting overcrowded with people who are desperate to leave their own - they bring with them their own customs about having massive families they can't support properly, and that makes the problem worse. I value what little elbow room I have left here in America, and I value living among insutrious people who can successfully support themselves without excessive government payouts (American industry is another story). I think you do, too. What these ideas propose is a lot cheaper than bombing the destitute to oblivion (you can feed 1,000,000 impoverished Africans or Asians or anybody forever for the price of one bomb), and it will help to improve their nations and preserve ours. That sounds like a fabulous bargain to me.

http://www.randomhouse.com/features/krakauer/

UNDER THE BANNER OF HEAVEN, he shifts his focus to extremes of religious belief within our own borders.
At the core of his book is an appalling double murder committed by two Mormon Fundamentalist brothers, Ron and Dan Lafferty, who insist they received a revelation from God commanding them to kill their blameless victims.

Beginning with a meticulously researched account of this "divinely inspired" crime, Krakauer constructs a multilayered, bone-chilling narrative of messianic delusion, savage violence, polygamy, and unyielding faith. Along the way, he uncovers a shadowy offshoot of America's fastest-growing religion, and raises provocative questions about the nature of religious belief.

I own a KA-1102, KA-1101, PL-550 and Sony 7600gr. At one time I also owned a YB-400. The 7600gr is by far the best of all of them. The 1102 is a good little radio, but it is not in the same class with the 7600gr. The sync detector on the 7600gr is a valuable feature for sw program listening, but aside from that alone, it is a great all around portable radio. The 7600gr is a also a great portable radio for MW use too. For both MW use and sw program listening, the ssb selectable am sync is idea for cutting out interference or hets from adjacent signals. It also performs very well in ssb mode. The ergonomics are good, the build is solid, memory features are very good. General performance is excellent. Its sensitive and selective. It does well off of the whip and it can handle a substantial external antenna. It is also good with power usage. I use rechargeable batteries and I can get about 25 hours of usage out of a full charge. If you had a Sony 7600gr , YB-400 and KA-1102 to test out for a few weeks but could only keep one of them, I'm willing to bet that just about everyone would take the 7600gr. If you decided to buy the KA-1102 before you had a chance to use the 7600gr, you may like the KA-1102 just fine. After you got a chance to use the 7600gr, you'd think about your KA-1102... "hey this thing sux"

Crosses vandalized at antiwar mom's Texas camp site
16 Aug 2005 19:16:58 GMT
Source: Reuters

By Caren Bohan

CRAWFORD, Texas, Aug 16 (Reuters) - Anti-war protester Cindy Sheehan tried to calm tensions on Tuesday with area residents upset by her vigil but expressed outrage after a pickup truck driver ran over crosses at her campsite near U.S. President George W. Bush's ranch.

Some 800 white wooden crosses, each bearing the names of soldiers killed in Iraq like her son, have lined the road near the area where Sheehan has pitched a tent. Witnesses said they saw a truck dragging a pipe and chains drive over some of the crosses on Monday night.

Larry Northern, 46, of nearby Waco, Texas, was arrested and charged with criminal mischief in connection with the incident, Crawford Police Chief Donnie Tidmore said.

"We're trying to be good neighbors," said Sheehan, whose soldier son was killed in combat in Iraq in April 2004. "We're trying to make everybody happy and the only thing I want is to talk to one of their neighbors. If they want us to leave, they should talk to their neighbor, George Bush, and tell him to come to us."

Sheehan is in the 10th day of her vigil on Prairie Chapel Road, which leads to Bush's 1,600-acre ranch. She calls her site "Camp Casey," after her 24-year-old son.
By Tuesday morning, many rows of crosses had been put back in the ground, where they are adorned with flowers and flags.
Sheehan's supporters view her as a hero who has re-energized the anti-war movement but her critics see her as a publicity-seeking partisan who is dishonoring her son's status as a war hero.
"It's so ironic that I'm accused of dishonoring my son's memory by doing what I'm doing, by the other side, and then somebody comes and does this," Sheehan said.

Charles Anderson, a 28-year-old Iraq war veteran from Virginia Beach, Virginia, called the vandalism of the crosses a "sacrilege."
"These crosses represent five of my comrades in my battalion who are no longer with us," he said at a news conference with Sheehan.
Sheehan, of Vacaville, California, has demanded a meeting with Bush at which she said she wants to call for the withdrawal of all U.S. troops from Iraq.

While Bush has expressed sympathy for Sheehan's grief, the White House has declined a meeting.
Sheehan previously met with Bush in 2004 but wants to talk to him face-to-face again.
White House spokeswoman Dana Perino said Bush respects Sheehan's right to speak her mind.
"He does not agree with her views but he says he respects her right to peacefully protest," Perino said.
Bush has insisted he will not pull troops out of Iraq prematurely, saying they are need to promote stability as the country works on a new constitution and prepares for elections.

Sheehan's vigil has attracted anti-war activists from across the United States -- many of them also relatives of soldiers killed in Iraq -- who arrived to offer support, share a hug with Sheehan and join in her daily media events.
Sheehan, whose husband filed for divorce last week, also has drawn attention internationally. Australian Donna Mulhearn, 37, canceled plans to attend a conference in Texas to drive to Crawford, where she slept in her car so that she could get a chance to talk to Sheehan.

But in this quiet farming town of just over 700 people many residents are unhappy about the media circus.
The residents, who have become accustomed to trips here by the president and his entourage, have seen their roads clogged by traffic as activists and reporters and television crews shuttle back and forth to Sheehan's site.
Displayed in front of one resident's house was a big sign that read, "We support our commander-in-chief."

Bush neighbor Larry Mattlage, whose property is across the street from the camp site, fired gunsshots
in the air on Sunday in an apparent expression of frustration.

if you call youreslves Christians you are supposed to love your felow man and not behave the way you two and other pple are doing. it is the way of Satan to call names and preach hate but it is the way of Jesus to give respect to all. you are acting like a bunch of muslims who are taugt hate from the time they are kids in their madrassahs. that is why tony blair wants to take all of madrassahs over in the UK and why the US should do it here to. so dont preach hate like the terorist muslims do. it makes you look realy ignorant.

God bless.

Ah yes! Ole "Slobberhead" from Conroe TX.

Ain't heard him on the air in a coon's age. Boy was he alot of fun to listen to! he was Texas' answer to Drunken Walter Barstool from Edison NJ who used to play WW-II German marshall band music. James on the other hand would rant

Dear "Teddy Bear,"

The Sony ICF-SW7600GR is my recommendation to you. It is a more up-to-date design than the others and features, as I'm sure you know, synchronous selectable sideband circuitry which functions very well on both shortwave and medium-wave (the AM band). There are a number of other advantages to this radio as well, though the two others you mention are certainly not bad radios.

The Sony radio is a superb performer on shortwave, including single-sideband reception, and is one of the best medium wave receivers around, being especially good for nighttime DXing. Its synchronous circuit eliminates the fading distortion common to long-distance AM reception. Neither of the other two receivers can do that.

Its FM performance is also quite good.

While Universal and AES do not sell the '7600 on-line (as per Sony's requirements - silly, isn't it? Plenty of other dealers sell it on-line), you can telephone either of them toll-free and order the radio.

Universal and AES also carry the AN-LP1 shortwave antenna, an excellent option for use with the '7600. (AES has the antenna more consistently than does Universal.)

If, however, for some reason, you don't wish to use the telephone, an on-line source is J&R Music World. When they have the radio in stock, they generally sell it for less than most others.

I would also not be afraid of a Yahoo!-certified store. I have purchased products from a number of those stores and have never had a problem.

I hope this is of some use to you. You will never regret the purchase of a Sony ICF-SW7600GR.

Best,

Joe

"Many countries" should have invaded. As it was, the Russians got in the game late by taking an airfield out from under our noses. Gen

You could look at it that way - if you take a perennially dark perspective. We don't have to help them - or even let them into the US. The idea is to create a win-win situation for all.

The luxury of log-periodic antennas for a comfortable American is an interesting comparison with a teaching a starving African how to grow himself a bowl full of clean food, but I digress...

On the bright side, you could look at it as helping your fellow man, and doing yourself a favor at the same time. Especially when the starving Africans are too busy starving to feel jealous to begin with - I'd bet that many of them probably don't even know that life can even be something more than constant pain and misery. Come to them cold with help and hope, and I think their chances of appreciating your help are pretty good. Call it what you want - but that's not bribery from where I sit. It's finding solutions to problems.

IMO Yes Iraq should break into 2 if not three states

I know why the US opposes it since of those states the Kurdish nroth would likely redouble thier efforts to bring their fellows kruds in turkey and Iran in the thier new state and that is a Can of worms that the US is afraid to allow opened

My perhaps poorly chosen words in response to Cuhulin's statement that they "hate our guts." Obviously, neither he nor I are in any real position to predict exactly how all of the desperate people around the world feel, but the reality is probably some combination of many emotions.

I still stand by the original concept, however, of doing something relatively inexpensive to benefit both the poor and yourself. You can pick nits about dashed-off usenet responses if you wish, but the core idea is sound.

Is Taiwan a Possession of The United States?

Behind The Lines
By Dr. Jack Wheeler
Thursday, August 11, 2005

Communist China, the People's Republic of China or PRC, never tires of denouncing Taiwan as a "renegade province" that belongs to it, and bitterly complaining that any attempt by any country anywhere in the world to treat Taiwan as a sovereign independent nation is a gross interference in China's "internal affairs."

This claim is about to be publicly exposed as baseless - for it turns out that as a matter of international law, Taiwan is legally an overseas possession of the United States of America.

Taiwan has been inhabited by a Malayo-Polynesian aboriginal people for 40,000 years. The Chinese never showed any interest in it nor attempted to colonize it all the way up to the end of the Ming Dynasty in 1644 AD. The Portuguese, the first European colonizers in Asia, made no attempt to do so either, although they named it Formosa (Beautiful).

It was the Dutch, who had begun colonizing Java and Sumatra and creating the Dutch East Indies (now Indonesia) in the early 1600s, that established a base there in 1624 and began to import Chinese men from Fujian across the Formosa Straits as laborers. A Chinese pirate named Koxinga took over the island in 1661, kicked out the Dutch and established a pirate kingdom.

In the meantime, over in China, a tribe of nomadic herders similar to the Mongols called the Manchus had conquered northeastern China, calling their kingdom Ching (or Qing), "Pure." In 1644, they overthrew the Ming Dynasty by seizing Beijing, with the last Ming Emperor, Chongzhen, hanging himself on a tree overlooking the Forbidden City.

The Manchus had to spend the next 17 years consolidating their control over all of China. After two subsequent decades of raids on their southern coast, they put an end to Koxinga's pirate kingdom and took over Taiwan in 1683. At the time there were about 7,000 Han (ethnic Chinese) on the island.

Some two hundred years later, in 1894, the Ching government of China got into a war with Japan over control of Korea, and lost. In the formal Treaty of Shimonoseki signed in April, 1985, the Chinese government formally recognized the independence of Korea, and legally ceded Taiwan to Japan. For the next 50 years, Taiwan under international law was the possession of Japan's.

The Japanese Government's control over Taiwan ceased on August 15, 1945 when it announced its surrender in World War II. The Instrument of Surrender was signed on the deck of the USS Missouri on September 2, which placed "all Japanese forces wherever situated" under the command of "the Supreme Commander of the Allied Powers," Gen. Douglas MacArthur.

That day, McArthur formed the United States Military Government (USMG) with jurisdiction over Japan, Korea, and Taiwan. General Order No. 1 of the USMG included the directive that all Japanese commanders and forces in Taiwan (called Formosa) "shall surrender to Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek," leader of the recognized legal government of China, the Republic of China (ROC). These forces then surrendered to ROC commander Chen Yi on October 25, 1945.

But the Instrument of Surrender was an armistice, not a formal peace treaty. Japan had not ceded Taiwan to the ROC. The legal authority in Taiwan remained the United States Military Government, which had delegated - delegated, not relinquished - the military occupation of Taiwan to the ROC.

This occupation conducted by Chen Yi proved impossibly corrupt and abusive, resulting in a rebellion by native Taiwanese known as the 228 Incident, as it began on February 28, 1947. Chen Yi's soldiers killed thousands of Taiwanese and instituted a tyranny called the "White Terror."

By now, Mao Tse-tung's Communists were waging full scale war against Chiang Kai-shek's ROC government. They succeeded in taking over China from April to November, 1949, during which the Generalissimo, several hundred thousand of his soldiers, and 2 million refugees crossed the Formosa Strait to Taiwan. Chiang proclaimed that the city of Taipei was now the temporary capital of the Republic of China, the sole legitimate government of mainland China.

It may have been the legitimate capital of China, but not of Taiwan, because the ROC was not the legitimate government of Taiwan - the USMG was.

Japan did not sign a formal peace treaty until September 8, 1951. Known as the Treaty of San Francisco, Article 2(b) states:

"Japan renounces all right, title and claim to Formosa and the Pescadores" (islands in the Formosa Straits).

But - the gargantuan but -- no receiving country is specified in the treaty. In other words, Japan renounced its sovereignty over Taiwan, but did not turn over that sovereignty to either the PRC in Beijing or the ROC in Taiwan. Neither the PRC nor the ROC were invited to the San Francisco treaty conference, and neither was a signatory to the treaty.

This means that the USMG remained the sovereign legal authority in Taiwan. Article 4(b) of the treaty states this in recognizing the authority of "the United States Military Government in any of the areas referred to in Articles 2 and 3," as does Article 23(a) recognizing "the United States of America as the principal occupying Power."

This treaty is still in effect. In the opinion of a number of scholars of international law, Taiwan is neither a province of China over which the PRC has legitimate sovereignty, nor is Taiwan a sovereign state of itself. It is, rather, an overseas territory of the U.S.

The practical bottom line to this is that the Communist PRC government of China has no claim to Taiwan under international law.

Further, as Taiwan is a U.S. territorial possession, the United States government is legally obliged to defend it.

This can only be changed by the United States Congress. As the historical and legal facts described here sink in to Capitol Hill, expect a number of bills to be offered in the upcoming session that will either legally turn over sovereignty of Taiwan from the U.S. to the Taipei government, or make it legally explicit that China's claim on Taiwan is fraudulent.

There's going to be a hot debate in Congress as it realizes it's been handed a sizzling hot potato. America owns Taiwan. What is it going to do with it.

Either the Sony ICF-SW7600G or ICF-SW7600GR would definitely be the way to go. The synchronous detector feature can make all the difference under certain conditions of adjacent channel interference.
It seems that J & R is out of stock with the '7600GR at the moment.
Try calling Universal Radio to see if they have the '7600GR in stock.
If it's in stock, you can order by phone, despite the fact that they don't allow online sales of Sony models.

The YB-400 (now sold as the Grundig G4000A) is supposed to offer worthy performance, as well, and is supposed to be a good radio for program listening with its above average audio quality. If you're finding that the '7600GR is simply not available and you're impatient to wait it out, then you might consider the deal that one online merchant has on refurb units of the Grundig model ($80 + a hefty $14 shipping charge + a $2 "order processing" charge).

I recall Hillary desiring a free Palistinian State and the violence

I don't see her desiring a Free Shiite State, a Free Kurdish State, or 3049. Antennas, metal objects and HF reception

I was reading the instructions that came with an LF Engineering H-800 active antenna earlier today. They caution against mounting the antenna in the vicinity of metal objects. At the same time, they say it's fine to mount the antenna on a metal mast. What's the explanation of this? If metal objects will interfere with reception, why doesn't this hold true of metal masts?

And more generally, I'm curious about the extent to which relatively small metal objects interfere with reception. In my (admittedly limited) experience, so long as an outdoor antenna is at least a few feet away from metal objects (e.g., gutters, ventilation pipes, etc.), their effects on reception are minimal. Is this correct? I don't know the physics, and other may have had experiences that differ from mine. So you tell me: Are metal objects bigger problems than I think?

The topic of standby power has been a topic in recnet weeks.
"The Electronic Goldman" <www.goldmine-elec.com> has some prime Yusa NP3-6 6.3V 3.0A/Hr for $9.95 each.
Stack 2 in series and you can power most 12V receivers for several hours. If you have a 6V, DX398/ATS909 etc, then one will work for you.
Larger is better, but these are very affordable and fairly lightwieght.

Enjoy

God knows what they're talking about..

Mess around with it !

See where it gets the best reception / least interference

then get a long peice of closet pole coat it with weather resistant paint

& mount it in that place, on the closet pole

& then take your wife out somewhere nice for dinner

And more generally, I'm curious about the extent to which relatively small metal objects interfere with reception. In my (admittedly limited) experience, so long as an outdoor antenna is at least a few feet away from metal objects (e.g., gutters, ventilation pipes, etc.), their effects on reception are minimal. Is this correct? I don't know the physics, and other may have had experiences that differ from mine.
So you tell me: Are metal objects bigger problems than I think?

Steve

That depends....

An active antenna mounted on a small metal mast, or even a Rohn 25
TV style tower will experience minimal effect from the mast.
But mounted down near aluminium siding, or near a metal awning, near metal roof will experience some effect. Well grounded metal should be OK. But metal that is more or less floating, like aluminium siding, will pick up noise(any unwanted signal) and reradiate it into the antenna.

The best rule of thumb is far from any lines, electric, telephone, or cable.
Even being over conductive pipes like water or NG can introduce noise.
I have my Amrad mounted up high on a shingled roof with a rat wire, AKA hardware cloth, ground underneath. Works great.

Same thing for loop antennas or even wire antennas.

High and clear is the best.

Some may swear the "Snake" antenna is a "great thing". While I guess it may have a place, it is about as far from a acceptable antenna as I can think of.

High and clear.

With a good ground.

If I had to choose between a less then ideal antenna, say ~30' unmatched direct feed without coax with a good ground, and a great antenna with a

"so so" ground, I would go with the marginal antenna and good ground.

Even with a great active antenna like the AmRad, you still need the best ground you can get. Improving your ground will give a better return for your time and money then anything else.

Thanks. Part of what I'm trying to do is figure out where to locate a random wire on the roof of my building. It won't be my only antenna, since I have a Wellbrook loop that I'm happy with. However, I like to experiment with wire antennas and a wire would be a nice complement to the loop.

The metal objects I'm primarily concerned with are ventilation pipes that come up through the roof of the building. Any random wire up there is going to get within at least four or five feet of at least one or two of these pipes. I've done some trial experiments with 100 ft lengths of wire, and didn't notice and detrimental effects of this, but I'm always curious about what others have found.

Another concern is the paint that coats the surface of the roof. It's the shiny aluminum paint that's used to keep buildings cool in the summer. I don't know how much of an effect that can have. I lose a lot of signal and gain a lot of noise if I let a length of wire drop down directly onto the roof, but this is probably due more to the wiring and appliances inside the building than the aluminum paint on the roof. The noise of course drops way down when the wire is up 7 or 8 feet in the air.

I would like to know how it compares to some of your other receivers with respect to overall sensitivity, interference/intermod problems, selectivity, and general sensitivity on a short wire antenna. I'm considering getting one for field trips where my R-1000 is too large and heavy to carry.

I was in Hawaii last week and went to the beach after midnight with another radio buddy and tried some MW DXing using a DX-398, a Kaito KA-1102 and a Radio Shack MW Loop. We were able to easily copy stations from Australia, New Zealand, China, Japan, and the Phillippines. It's amazing what you can hear when not interfered with by local nighttime "power houses" here in the states. The 398 perfromed better due to rejection of some local Honolulu intermod that came thru on some freqs with the Kaito. The RS loop was of immense help on most stations.

Was there for 14 days in 1996 - on the Big Island.. Kona and Hilo with little more than a couple of good handheld portables... a 7600G sony and a panasonic something or other..
Every night at about 11, Tahiti, Fiji and the Marshall Islands would appear.. by 1 AM the dial was chock-a-block with Japanese stations.. then China and Russia.. Long wave had regulars from Russia as well.. a good time.

Honestly no and I use nothing but such bulbs. I did notice some of the cheaper one do badly though in area with any Dampness

I have the L-400B LW antenna and what they mean about the metal mast is that as long as the mast is parallel to the first few inches of the antenna at the bottom where you would clamp it you will be OK. But don't let the middle to upper part of the antenna be close to metal objects. I found that even 20' proximity to lush trees had a big impact on the L-400B reception on LW. As long as I kept it in the clear of metal or wet objects it performed well. If no near objects were present, mounting any higher than about 10' made no difference.

'Google Earth' experts needed -- URL for BALAD AIR BASE + BALAD RELAY STATION (SED -- Salal El Deel)
-- AKA "Camp Anaconda"

The 2 infrastructure locations are next to each other.

I am not interested in the Balad Airbase, but its proximity to SED -- so as to prove that SED can be safely reactivated.

SED, as a relay station -- is only equalled by : Wertachtal, Allois+Issodun, Delano, Novosibirsk.

==========
Why is this observation now important?
==========

Balad has 16 x 500 kw SW transmitters and an indeterminate number of transmission antennas.
It may have been designed to target Iran, as well as the rest of the Arab-Islamic world.

Iraq has at least 20 x 500 kw transmitters.
Its transmission capacity to Iran cannot be determined at this time, as the schematics of Balad remain secretly hidden in Switzerland. Balad was a
'turnkey' subcontract to ABB, now Tomson-CSF newly named Thales.

Balad has a rotatable SW antenna, suitable for global coverage.

LF Engineering H-800 Skymatch Active Antenna

SIZE - The H-800 is just 26" Long and 1" Round.
http://www.lfengineering.com/products.htm
Monitoring Times Review of the "LF Engineering H-800 Skymatch Active Antenna"
- by Bob Grove
http://www.lfengineering.com/pdf/Monitoring%20Times%20H-800.pdf
The H-800 is intended to be mounted on a Mast and the Bottom-End is designed to be placed on / near a Metal Mast. Allowing the H-800 to be Free-Standing (Except for the Mast) in the Open Air away from all other objects be they Metal or not.
Note - Usually the a Mast or Vertical Antenna Support Structure is Grounded. A Grounded Mast (Ground Radiator) can make a Vertical Antenna like the H-800 a more effective Receptor overall.
On a Roof using a 5 - 10 Foot Metal Mast with the H-800 would be the preferred method of Mounting the H-800.
TIP - This "Extra Height helps to place the H-800 above (beyond) the Building's RF / EMF Noise Envelope.
MAST ALTERATIVES - An 'alternative would be to use an 8 - 10 Foot piece of 1" PVC Pipe as a Mast.
Mounting the H-800 "Out-in-the-Yard" - Starting at Ground Level using a 21 Foot piece of Top-Rail would make a good Mast for the H-800.

yes, it's a curtain dipole array, near exit 13 (the bethel exit, near where i live). they used to have a log periodic dipole with a ladder line feed but replaced it with the curtain array. WMLK is owned by the assemblies of yahweh, a popular church group around here in lebanon,

I'm searching for the perfect pocket radio.

* Cover AM/FM/SW
* Digital tuning
* Smaller than 4" x 3" x 1"
* Weigh less than 10oz
* Use AA batteries
* Std 3.5mm stereo headphone jack
* Offer SSB
* Excellent & rugged "build" quality
* Excellent performance on all bands
* Priced less than $100
* I'd also like weather and TV (VHF & UHF) coverage.

A few candidates that I've come across and with the exception of weather/TV for which I'd pay a little more where they fall short of my criteria are;

Grundig YB400PE -
* Expensive and big

Grundig YB550PE -
* Still too big and no SSB

Eton E100 -
* No SSB and not great performance

Yaesu VR120
* Expensive, no SSB and terrible AM/FM

And what's up with the manufactures that seem similar? Eton & Grundig & Tecsun? Kaito & Sangean?

Thanx,
Bob

Steve is quite correct on this.

You might consider inflating your budget considerably and going with either the Sony ICF-SW07 or ICF-SW100S, particularly if size is an overriding concern.

Can't think of anything of this size class that's going to have weather & TV while at the same time giving good performance on the SW bands.

"* Excellent & rugged "build" quality"

Well, the SW100S build quality, while very professional, is not something that you can bang around alot... especially with the cover open. Yes, it's probably 3 times the $100 price he's looking for...

This is one of the reasons I keep on thinking about something like the Degen DE-1105, which is $60 (incl international shipping on ebay) .
I'd miss the syncronous detection I have on my SW100S... I don't use SSB much, so I wouldn't miss that.

I own a small Westinghouse AM/FM/Shortwave shirtpocket size radio.It used to work very good for it's size.One night when I was listening to it and I got up to go to my kitchen,the radio slipped off of my couch and hit my hardwood floor.I guess it landed on the tuneing knob when it hit the floor.There is sort of a little cube block thingy the tuneing knob is associated with in the radio and a lot of tiny solder points.The assembly broke loose when the radio hit the floor,I wouldn't mind getting the radio repaired,but I dont think I can repair the radio.It is not a cheap quality radio like them Bell & Howell and similar cheap quality radios.

Pearl Harbour was an act of aggression by a sovereign state, 9/11 was an act of terrorism, defeating terrorism requires a different approach to defeating a sovereign state, which is why the British didn't invade Eire because of the IRA, and goes some way to showing how co-operation and pragmatism led to the disarmament of the IRA.

Which also incidentally shows what a wanker Tony Blair is as he knows very well the current approach to Islamic terrorism is not the way to end terrorist activity.

Apparently we will never know if that's really so. Now that Apple has become a "me too" company by moving entirely to Intel processors, it will have to face the same multitude of hardware types that Microsoft has had to face in its attempts to keep Windows functional.

And Apple has always tightly controlled the hardware on which its software was run, right up until this year. Signs are that Apple is going to attempt to maintain that tight hardware control, and that's a recipe for failure. OS X is already "in the wild" and is being run on generic beige Intel boxes, in spite of Apple's efforts to control it.

OS X has just been exposed to a much larger hardware world, and it looks right now that, thanks to Apple, it is going to sink instead of swim. In that case, OS X will never even get a chance to be a contender.

No Pocket SWR has SSB ;
- unless it's a Carpenters pants type pocket..

Degen DE1105 is supposed to be pretty good but is in early build stages.. No SSB

Poke around in GOOGLE, check out radiointel.com

- But I don't think that animals been made yet

Heck, BUY Something.. !

You can live a full, happy life with

Agreed, the SW100S would fail on the "rugged build" factor, as would the SW07. Bob will need to prioritize from among these various criteria, since he can't have it all...

Before acquiring the SW07, I used to carry a 606A around quite frequently. It's a reasonably priced radio with decent performance, although it's a tad larger (5 3/4 x 3 1/2 x 1 1/4) than what Bob is looking for and, as noted by David, lacking in SSB.

Hi all,

I was at a summer retreat in the Cascade mountains in Washington this summer for 2 weeks. It was located at the base of a valley between mountains each about 5,000-8,000 feet high. The valley's elevation was about 1,500.

Needless to say, radio reception was terrible except for AM at night. I had a Sony 7600GR with its clip on antenna.

Question: What could be done to improve reception in those conditions?

SSB,that Sangean ATS 909 radio I bought from www.ccrane.com (and I sent that no good piece of plastic JUNK back to ccrane) had SSB.I checked it out (SSB) once in a while and some guys on there were talking about cooking some eggs.I can easily do without SSB.

I have the bottom of the line one. I'm a TV engineer and I just use it to make sure my stations are on the air. It lives on my front seat. If my employer would buy it, I'd have a demod with a drop-down

Radio Shack had one, but they fell afoul of the ECPA (Electronics Communication Privacy Act). And/Or Radio Shack's cell phone marketing.

AMPS (the old analog cell phone system) was a great way to determine business ethics. Ask the salesman if the phone system was private and watch him lie his ass off. Analog cell phones used former TV channels and the same modulation as TV, so any old TV set could pick some or all of them on channels 70-83. And a UHF band TV sound receiver would, too.

It is certainly one issue. then you have the interruptions of replacing equipment, retraining and not knowing if the new software is as stable as what you are already running. Some businesses stuck with Win 95, till they had no choice because they had too many computers dying of old age. They buy a site license for their OS, and its a lot easier to keep everyone happy if all the computers appear to be the same.

The cheap imported CFLs don't have a power factor correction circuit which allows all the harmonics into the power lines. I use surplus commercial grade four tube ceiling fixtures with just two lamps (Disconnect the second ballast or put it on a separate switch to give more light with two more tubes.) in my work areas. I got a great deal on them. Nine fixtures were given to me and delivered to my house for free.
:) They were a couple years old, but in pretty good shape and they are very quiet, both electrically and mechanically because they are rated for commercial service.

He was behaving normally, and did not vault the barriers, even stopping to pick up a free newspaper.

He started running when we saw a tube at the platform. Police had agreed they would shoot a suspect if he ran.

A document describes CCTV footage, which shows Mr de Menezes entered Stockwell station at a "normal walking pace" and descended slowly on an escalator.

The document said: "At some point near the bottom he is seen to run across the concourse and enter the carriage before sitting in an available seat.

"Almost simultaneously armed officers were provided with positive identification."

A member of the surveillance team is quoted in the report. He said: "I heard shouting which included the word `police' and turned to face the male in the denim jacket.

"He immediately stood up and advanced towards me and the CO19 officers. I grabbed the male in the denim jacket by wrapping both my arms around his torso, pinning his arms to his side.

"I then pushed him back on to the seat where he had been previously sitting. I then heard a gun shot very close to my left ear and was dragged away onto the floor of the carriage."

The report also said a post mortem examination showed Mr de Menezes was shot seven times in the head and once in the shoulder, but three other bullets missed, with the casings left lying in the tube carriage

Been using those things since they first came out ca. 20 years ago.
Most are very quiet. Occasionally you'll get a noisy one. Check each bulb, one at a time.

My last RFI problem was a Linksys Router, which was horrible. I replaced it with a D-Link which makes no noise at all.

i think you're right, that Degen thing might be his best bet. it's too bad the Eton E-100 is on the substandard side. Its a smart lookin' thing (except in its Tecsun PL-200 incarnation), and it's nicely sized. Not as cheap/retarded looking as those Degen / Kaito models.

anyway i'm sure bob wants to listen to rather than look at the dern thing.

Not always the case, and definitely not so at the beginning. In fact, Windows XP attempts to handle as many devices as it can without add-in drivers, because the manufacturers' drivers are sometimes badly written and conflict with other parts of the OS. When you're dealing with devices at the interrupt level, badly written drivers can not only produce system crashes but can corrupt the contents of the hard drive. Originally, Microsoft dealt with that by letting the computer vendors tweak MS-DOS. After Windows NT came along, it was no longer a practical approach to take.

Windows has always had to deal with variations in the processors and in the motherboard hardware itself, say trying to be compatible with variations among the x86 family as well as things like AMD's variations in NMI and privelege register handling.

Those are much tougher tasks than Apple has ever had to deal with, thanks to the fact that it maintained tight control over the hardware on which its OS ran.

Interestingly, Linux has dealt with that and more, because Linux runs on a wider variety of chipsets than either Windows or OS X. I don't think you'll see OS X or Windows on the SPARC, but you'll find Linux there right now. I don't think you'll see OS X or Windows running on MIPS architecture, but you'll find Linux there right now. In fact, the distribution kernel lists the following as supported architectures:

alpha, cris, ia64, mips, parisc, ppc64, s390x, sh64, sparc64, arm, i386, m68k, mips64, ppc, s390, sh, sparc, and x86_64

Until OS X can run on a significant fraction of the platforms listed above, it is NO threat to Linux.

> Nonsense. It's already a contender. Linux has more to fear from

Until OS X can run on a significant fraction of the platforms listed above, it is NO threat to Linux. It's not even in the same league.

Yeah, my mistake. I sometimes use the RadioExplorer software that's mentioned on the EiBi site. It indicated that Radio Belarus was on in English, and RadioExplorer is supposed to read this right off of the Eibi schedule (or whatever other schedule you're using). Hello, John

Unfortunately it is most likely that anyone who told the whole truth would loose support from his or her party.

I've been working temporarily at a sheet metal shop as my pension alone doesn't really cut it. I see machines with no guards. One gal had her finger crushed yesterday in a die stop. Not a pleasant thought.

Fortunately, I've had 3 calls from different companies. I start Monday at a new permanent job paying over 3 times what I am making now. Not too bad. I liked what I saw at that place; they truly seem to care. They also don't pay sick time until you are out for 8 days. That is an excellent idea which does protect the employee from disaster whilst protecting the employer from the idiots that like to call in sick on Friday and/or Monday ;)

I have little use for those type folks (folks that want to get paid but don't want to work).

73 from Rochester, NY

Fine rhetoric, simplistic nonsense. Try looking at the tac-tics of succesful anti-terrorist campaigns like Northern Ireland where the more the British Army sunk to the levels of the terrorists the worse things got, until they woke up and smelt the coffee. It was British repression in North America that turned a tax revolt into a successful war of independence.

Osric:

I have no need than to look further then my american forefathers...

They provide warning, not only in the constitution itself, but in further writings they left as their legacy. Warning that future times would come which demanded free men would have to be willing to sacrifice life, limb and property and be forever vigilant and searching for those which are a threat to freedom, liberty and rights granted them by a Creator--which no man has a right to challenge or deny another...

... we have such an enemy today. It is a shame you see that enemy as "rhetoric, simplistic nonsense", that often might prove fatal.

I think it is a rotten idea. People will drag themselves to work when they are sick and spread it around. This results in even more people being sick and reduced productivity.

As a result of the past year, I am very sensitive to the issue of people coming around me when they are ill. You see I caught pneumonia in April 2004. Pneumonia was going around the area at the time. I may have caught it at work, from family (who may have caught it at work or school) or other public places. That dragged my resistance down and I ended up with a blood infection. The blood infection resulted in a hole being eaten in my heart valve. I had to have two surgeries, one of which resulted in another infection. I ended up spending 12 weeks on intravenous antibiotics altogether and lost over 6 months from work. When someone comes to work ill, I stay as far away as possible. With a replacement heart valve, I don't dare take any extra risks of infection.

I agree wholeheartedly with this but don't use the no sick leave to stop it. It's too hard on the rest of us. These people can be detected by behaviour patterns.

Oh I see, fair enough. We do get crossposted all over the place, I only actually contribute to talk.politic.mideast directly but the amount of crossposting makes trimming prohibitive and make the amount of contributions on google seem enormous, but it does lead to some humerous responses from people in places like soc.culture.homebrew. All part of the internet's rich tapestry and who knows I might pick up something about short wave radio in the process.

What on earth made "Concerned Citizen" think this thread would be relevant to RRS is beyond me but there you go. Hopefully when this thread dies your radio discussion group can go back to peacefully discussing bouncing radio waves off clouds all the way to Rio de Janeiro free from the unruly masses discussing butchering each other!

Jim:

Well, I think we really need to think about dropping the workday to 4 hours (or 2-1/2 eight hour days), and demanding everyone in america have a job and giving them opportunity to have one. As machines take over there will not be work for everyone, obviously we cannot have people living in poverty, staving, etc. The time to do this is NOW... the computer has already made one heck of a dent in employment!

Probably the largest group of wage earners in america are attempting to glean a living from minimum wage or close, I think I would starve at minimum wage, I can't even fathom that! It is beginning to show in the city I am living in--in many ways it is taking on a "third world flavor." With every city/county ballot there are increased taxes for water/sewer/roads/public buildings/public benefits for the poor, etc... I am afraid I will drive into a pothole one day and never be seen again...

We have been distracted and torn apart by racial, political and just trying to stereotype people. Time to focus on the fact all american citizens have to eat, have housing, medical, secure old age, etc, etc... else, one day they get dangerous and one day come to steal ours.

It is crazy in calif, vast numbers of foreign people come it to take jobs and vast ghettos of unemployed, apparently unwanted americans just sitting there and finally falling to drugs and crime to survive--then end up in our prisons surviving! A women in my neighborhood writes a column for the paper here, she says there is not enough room to list all the crime in the newspaper--it just doesn't get published...

Still we have to move towards real progress, right now we are just treading water and "sweeping the dust under the rug", a day of reckoning will come, indeed, I see it as already being here, just still ignored.

Multi-million dollar housing erupts around me; yet, when I take a weekend bike ride I pass people with children living under bridges!

I have older friends once active and engaged in important industries now working at or near minimum wage. Sometimes they are forced to decide if it will be clothing, food or medicine that month. I am putting two sons through college (barely!!), I am so strapped I can't help anyone! I just wonder where my kids will work once they get a degree--McDonalds? My friends are all getting older with a lot less "clout" in industry... my oldest son is running his own business and has climbed into the black with profits--I want to quit and go to work for him! <grin>

There is a tremendous void between the very rich and very poor, a chasm which widens daily. I "dress down" in some parts of the city here, not wanting to look like a "wallet walking down the street!"
Already, me--myself, I am not so anxious to ask for a raise--those with degrees more current than mine are knocking at the doors of industry--with a hungry look... they will take my job at maybe 1/3 or 1/4 of my salary--how secure should I feel? Probably if I didn't have seniority and friends close I might be gone! Many under me are jealous, and I don't trust in their loyalty or high moral standards, and they are younger... luckily I have an excellent work relationship with my boss, but I don't think her that secure in the corp., she shares many of my same worries.

I think other "old guys" like me may feel this pressure? I am there in spirit with you brother, you are NOT alone!

I am not a "defeatist" in my attitude, but darn man, time to do something!

(knock-on-wood)

Okay, how about a dumb question: do SW signals enter the valley but only in much thinner signal presence? Or do they simply not enter the valley at all and so you have to put a wire somewhere that will find the signals?

We do have sick leave, one day a month (with a doctors note your boss/super can approve more), you can accumulate up to 12 and no more, it is generally expected you will take them, many use them to "tack on" another week to their vacation.

Rather than "abuse" it is generally viewed as a "perk" or "benefit", it is not the same at your work? I have talked to state and federal workers here, it is generally the same for them... perhaps that is only california?

Is that how it was done in the former Yugoslavia?

Since the Clinton model of modern warfare and nation building is perfect, shouldn't we follow it?

And lessee...

The 13 Colonies had independence in 1776. The 13 Colonies ratify a Constitution in 1787 (1787 - 1776 = 11 years). Why must there be a constitutional government in Iraq this week? Shouldn't Irag be allowed the necessary amount of time to get it right?

He still monitors group activity. I got a request for, more or less, a reference from someone who had been contacted by him to buy a radio up for sale. I referred the inquirer to Google groups for a look at his history. Everything that needs to be said on the subject is there.

AOL recently removed access to USENet through it's service. He may have backed off for that reason. He may have tired of the noise, though much of it he generated, or he may have finally been given a choice by someone with more influence in his life than he.

As I understand, the sale of the radio went through, with predictably dissatisfactory results for the seller.

Imagine your surprise.

Dee, you do make a good point. Seriously. However, at Kodak, I heard from a reliable source that one gal (a member of a minority group) had used up her short term diability (26 weeks). Mostly sick on Fridays and Mondays. Amazingly, they "recharged" her sick leave and she wasn't let go. The rule was that once you exhausted your sick leave (short term disability), you were terminated.

Meanwhile, a supervisor in our group had a husband who had open heart surgery. He was also an employee at the big yellow box. They wouldn't even give him time to consider how to take his pension. He was gone.

I don't know the proper answer, but at the place I'm going, they don't pay for the 1st week (at any one time). Then they pay 60% of your check.

This may put a hurt on honest folks, but it does protect one if you are hurt in an accident and does protect the company from folks that just want to have extra "vacation".

I can see your point about folks who are sick that come to work anyways, but how does one balance the whole thing? My guess is not pay for the first two days and then pay at 60%. That might be one answer.

Not the point. He made similarites between geonocide in Bosnia and WMD in Iraq. The former was true, the latter was false.

As to your point, Bush did not say we were going in to stop the genocide in Iraq. If he truly cared about such a topic he would have made it a priority when he got into office. He didn't. So the Bush apologists have to defend the war some way by saying how were stopping some genocidial maniac. Though he was one, it was only a reason given since the real reasons we went there have turned out to be false.

Well I don't know about California and I don't know about state or federal workers or even other businesses in my area. All I can address is my job. Basically I get 10 per year (no doctor's note required however). Then normally one switches over to short term disability as it is assumed if you're sick more than 10 days, it's something more serious. But It is somewhat flexible. If I'm unfortunate to be down several times for several days due to unrelated illnesses, it can exceed 10 days (say 4 separate bouts of whatever that last 3 days each). However it is to be used only for sickness and is not accumulative. Using it as "vacation" would be grounds for dismissal.

She must have known where the skeletons were buried. At our company, they'd have picked up the pattern real fast and she'd have been out before she got to 26. The industry is too tight and competitive to carry dead wood like this.

We get long term disability for a year after the short term so at least I was in good shape then. Once you go on the long term though, you are not guaranteed the same position when you return. It may be quite a different position.

Well I don't know the answer either but where I am, no one takes any unnecessary sick leave because you rise to the top of the list at layoff time.

I took a couple of snapshots of my radio and a couple elements of the 8-element MW phased array (grown over the years to hear an ever more difficult Imus in the Morning program as various affiliates acquired and dropped him)

http://home.att.net/~rhhardin/antenna.jpg Two Elements of 8-Element MW Phased Array http://home.att.net/~rhhardin/radio.jpg Imus-Receiving Phased Array Radio

The 2 elements seen are a Wellbrook ALA-1530 and a Dymek McKay DA100E. There are two of the former and six of the latter.

The six leads can be seen in the radio picture coming in in the middle low right, with the two Wellbrook leads NE of them. They're mixed in 7 ANC-4's.

On the left is mostly a bank of all the DSP's I could get on Ebay; to the right on the bottom are two Amcominc ClearSpeech base units.

Out of sight are 3 Behringer audio mixer boards that feed audio around.

I like the yaesu vr-500. As a communications receiver, it's a jack of all trades master of none, but it still works pretty well for what it is and it offers all the coverage and modes you are after in a diminutive size. I find the biggest difficulty with this type of radio is antenna as no single antenna will fit the bill. I have a couple of rubber ducks for it and a wire on a bnc for hf listening. I still seek the perfect antenna for it. Battery life on 2 aa's is decent as well. It uses the 3.5 mm jack, but is mono and not stereo.

Ron,
How do you like the JPS NIR-10 DSP unit?

I've noticed that in NIR mode when I move the NIR level up there is a distinct poing at which you start hearing wierd oscillations - does your unit do the same/similar?

I live in a deep valley surrounded by 4,500 foot high mountains and can tell you that reception is not nearly as good as if you live on a flat plain.
The reason reception is poor in a valley is that the far off DX comes in at a very low angle, hence the mountains tend to block the far off DX signals.
This is because radio signals bounce off the ionosphere. This is known as "skip".
Close by transmitters will skip only once and the signal will come in at a relatively high angle that you will be able to receive in a valley.
Transmitters that are further away will skip twice or three times and come in at a progressively lower angle the further they are away and the lower the frequency. The lower the angle of approach to a valley the more likely they will be blocked from a valley surrounded by high mountains.

There is nothing you can do about this, except to say that improving your antenna will always improve matters slightly.
That is, particularly making it HIGHER, and of course if it is longer this will also help.

If you really want great reception, the best location of all is to be found at the seaside.

I figure that he has indoor plumbing except that it is all made of lead and this would go a long way to explaining much of his behaviour.

Whenever you hear a manufacturer talk about a distance limitation for any wireless technology -- wireless LANs, RFID, Bluetooth, anything -- assume he's wrong. If he's not wrong today, he will be in a couple of years. Assume that someone who spends some money and effort building more sensitive technology can do much better, and that it will take less money and effort over the years. Technology always gets better; it never gets worse. If something is difficult and expensive now, it will get easier and cheaper in the future.

Microsoft wanted to lock out both pirated games and unofficial games, so they built a chain of trust on the Xbox from the hardware to the execution of the game code. Only code authorized by Microsoft could run on the Xbox. The link between hardware and software in this chain of trust is the hidden "MCPX" boot ROM. The article discusses that ROM. Ask our GOOD PROFESSOR Andrew Fraser to advise us of their IQ. That may be their problem.

After 12 months service in Iraq a returning soldier described them as "a bunch of retards".

Now I'm not saying they are, but I am at a loss to understand how one of the world's oil rich nations can't make a slog of it. Yes Saddam held the country back.

He is gone now and the opportunity to progress is theirs to take.
Unfortunately, even though the vast majority are Muslim, they consist of a multicultural ethnic and religious divide and some would prefer to kill themselves and their fellow Iraqis over conflicts and disagreements thousands of years old.

Now no-one can claim that to be 'smart'.

I don't find any oscillations. There are a lot of firmware versions for the NIR-10. I use the second-to-latest. The NIR-12 seems to be superior, more than just two NIR-10's. Both do pretty well against lightning crashes.

Thanx everyone for the feedback. Seems I'm not the only one at least possibly interested in a good pocket radio.

How about if I double my budget to $200 and give a little on the size requirement to maybe 5" x 4" or thereabouts. (I'd like to use this radio while backpacking so too big or heavy and I suffer or the radio gets left behind which is also the logic behind wanting rugged build quality and weather band coverage)

I can probably live without the stereo headphone but still need std jack size. SSB would be nice but I guess this can be low on the list.

Does this create new candidates?

If I were to consider something like the Grundig YB-500PE as a possibility it appears to be the same as the Tecsun PL-230. Are "same" radios the same quality or for instance does Grundig have higher standards or slightly different technical spec? And who makes what for who? Radio Shack = Sangean? Grundig = Tecsun? Kaito? Degen?

One other "twist" is digital broadcasts... Am I going to finally buy some radio only to find nothing to listen to on a SW radio without digital receive capability?

Thanks again for all the help,
Bob

Yes, it is more than we wanted to know, but I'd be surprised if anything comes of it. Like so many other government exposes (partculary those affecting the Clinton administration), it will just quietly go away.

Example: Sandy Berger-- a mere slap on the writst.

"Digital" has familiarity with hearing doors slamming, especially right after he was kicked out of his rented duplex (he stayed in the basement) and when he tried to beg to come back home.

Most of what currently fills this newsgroup up is the work of a small group of psychopaths who for some strange reason enjoy insulting one another in a public forum (I suppose that way they have an audience as opposed to taking it to email). They do not accurately represent the 'average ham' in any way, shape, or form. While you will find a few nuts on the bands (e.g., jammers who do not identify themselves) the vast majority are friendly folks who love radio, comply with Part 97, and love a good ragchew.

I highly recommend you ignore the childish ad-hominem attacks in these groups. Most newsreaders have filtering capabilities. Use them.

Is that really true? Ie. is it:

A) A "right", enforced by laws/constitution
B) A "freedom", something which is not specifically illegal, or
C) Not yet true, a political suggestion that you are recommending?

How does/would it apply to encrypted electronic transmissions - ie. if it is a right, does that mean that US citizens also have the right to the decryption keys, or the right to hack encrypted data? Surely this contravienes the Digital Millenium laws?

In the UK, the situation is confused. IIRC, in theory it is illegal to listen to any station that does not have a broadcasting licence from the government. Therefore this makes most of SW DXing theoretically illegal. However, IIRC, there has only ever been one prosecution of this - a DJ who was caught displaying a pirate radio sticker in his car window.

However the report does confirm that he DID ignore police warnings to stop.

That would get you shot in most countries. The only reason it's such a big deal here is because the UK police don't usually carry guns.

(Almost all UK police officers have the OPTION to have firearms training and to carry a gun if they wish. Most choose not. Also note most UK armed police prefer submachine or assault rifles [specifically P90 and MP5] rather the sidearms/pistols.)

>>There's version-2, which purports a case of mistaken identity. Will there be >>any more versions?
>The point is that people with guns panicked.

True, but not before they had radioed back to HQ and got HQ to confirm that this was indeed a prime bomber suspect.

The main thing that went wrong was that the officers on the spot believed his identity was confirmed as prime suspect, when in fact he was an unrelated bystander. Now the question is: was this an error by HQ or was it an error by the officers?

Going back on topic for a moment, what would be really superb would be for a London scanning enthusiast to provide a copy of the conversations between the police officers and HQ. We'd then be able to judge whether it was the police officers or HQ that got it wrong.

Unfortunately there are two problems here:
1. It is illegal for the general public to listen in to police radio broadcasts in the UK
2. Police radio broadcasts are digitally encrypted.

The UK police digital radio system is called Tetra. Here's an overview by a rural police force (not the London Metropolitain police):

http://www.tetramou.com/catalogue/Archive/200004/english/03.asp

More details at www.tetramou.com

Never assign to incompetence that you can't also assign to regulations. I've seen in the past some really outdated software still hang around because of governmental regulations requiring the data that the software provides be accessable for XX number of years. Of course, the outdated software runs on outdated hardware, so the outdated hardware loiters around forever.

Okay, I believe you, but I'm curious - is this enshrined in your constitution (bill of rights), or is this just something which is not otherwise illegal (a "freedom")?

For instance, I have the FREEDOM to eat cornflakes, but I don't have the RIGHT to eat cornflakes. If my village shop runs out of cornflakes then I cannot take legal action against the shop.

However, I have the RIGHT to a copy of any police interview with me. If the police run out of cassette tapes or paper then I CAN take legal action against the police.

In this week's BBC World Service's "Assigment" program, the subject was the breakdown of the legal system in Guatamala.

But the interesting radio part was their discussion of the part a Evangelical Christian Pirate radio station played in the lynching of man they accused of stealing a cassette player from their station. (Spured on by the station, a crowd of 1500 took the man from police custody and beat him to death. The police chief didn't think that was a Christian thing to do).

At the time the BBC reporter was there, the station had closed down and moved so there wasn't any description of their operation. One of the locals interviewed in the program said there were a number of these stations in the country.

Anybody know what band they operate in?

Hi Dale
I am presently constructing the Amrad Active Antenna with the specified parts.
I am kind of in the Burbs but I can see a small mountain about 10 miles airline that has an FM, 93.1mhz, station, UHF tv, channel 40, station and who knows what else.
I found plans on building a MW phaser using loop and/or active antennas. I suspect the Amrad will be the better active antenna. This will bre a learning process for sure.

The UK is a lost cause....

The man was wearing a trenchcoat.... a garment that is somehow connected to anarchism, terrorism, and anti-social behavior.

Looks like I am going to wear my trenchcoat more often, maybe i'll throw in a set of combat boots and camo too. But luckily in the USA we have laws that sort of protect us from being shot SS Nazi Germany style.

Look here, Oswald. If I want unvarnished media I have to make it up in my head. All venues are subject to manipulaqtion, Psy-ops mindfucking, and general disinformation.

In fact,, the medium you trust the most is most likely the one they'll use against you.

I like International Broadcasting for the cultural aspects, not because I know the domestic media is totally corrupt. Klezmer music or Gamelan sounds a lot better on a digital link than it does after being bounced off the collapsing atmosphere.

I have a shitload of superb HF receivers I can use for backup, in case Poindexter pulls the plug on SDARS. But I doubt the mindfuckers will be that overt. They prefer to enslave us with kindness.

appears to be a list (I don't know how current) of all IBA shortwave frequencies and there's also a satellite frequency/subcarrier list but the satellite is at 75 degrees EAST of Greenwich so that's probably not going to be very useful in North America.

The PDF file was last modified: Thu, 19 May 2005 01:02:55 GMT.

I think it's not the technology or the clarity of sound that counts, but the experience of listening....
Most people in this group LIKE listening to their their music after it's bounced of the Ionosphere.

tell me the 40's-50's music Radio New Zealand broadcasts doesn't sound more interesting after a few hops

It's just Cool listening to music broadcast from 6,000 miles away..

Then it's 4 times as cool from 23,000 miles away? I find the flanging and the static preclude listening with others.

I understand the romance. RNZI is especially romantic as their POS transmitter is probably only putting out 10 or 15 kW on a good day.

But Tahiti was way more challenging...

Nobody appreciates a nice HF broadcast more than me when I'm hiking with a water bottle and a little radio.

But I also appreciate being able to punch-up a nice clean broadcast on demand.

My shortwaves listen for airplanes with bad hydraulic pumps or sinkinjg fishing boats. I love listening to thunderstorms 500 miles away. And the chirpsounder makes my day.

But if I want to listen to Israel/Palestine coming unglued, I'm going for the satellite.

They don't accurately represent the CBers either. I use both Ham and CB. One thing is for sure, No one is being attracted to either hobby by those actions. Pretty soon, people may also start turning away from the news groups as well - due to it. I know one ISP who refused to carry them - partially for just that reason. It is a shame.

Is the point. The former is true in both cases. If it was good enough

Actually, you don't, cuhulin.

Newer radio scanners for the public are required by law not to be capable of eavesdropping on cellular phone frequencies. Many states have outlawed radar detectors (which, of course, do nothing but listen for an electronic transmission).

So, the reality is: "Every American citizen SHOULD have the right to listen to any and all electronic transmissions, period."

HH&E typed, "Hi! I don't think Iraq is going to be as democratic as we think it might be."

I consulted my crystal-ball, it just said, "... stay tuned ..."

I drug out the tea leaves, brewed a cup, examined the leavings, the cryptic message, "$ OIL!" seemed to be represented by the leaves--strange...

So I emailed Sylvia Browne, maybe she can shed some light on this mystery...

Need some advice from someone who has used either/both of these receivers. I am about to buy one of the two radios and am having a configuration:

JRC NRD 545 D - Stock - ~ $1800.00

AOR 7030+ (Standard Filters 2.4, 4, 5.5, 9.5)
+ Noise Blanker and Notch Upgrade
+ 500hz Collins Mechanical filter

Hello,

I cannot comment on the Japan Radio NRD-545D, never having operated one, only reading about it in PASSPORT TO WORLD BAND RADIO and WRTH. (WRTH is much more positive about this radio than is PASSPORT.)

But I do own an AOR AR7030 Plus receiver which has the NB/Notch option (the notch filter is excellent, the noise blanker less so), the daughter board on which I have mounted a 2.4 kHz (nominal) crystal filter (it's just great!) and the 6.5 kHz (nominal) filter which was used in the original AR7030. (I am basically a program listener.)

I highly recommend this receiver as it is very sensitive, very selective, very stable, VERY quiet, and VERY flexible in its operating parameters. It is the finest receiver I have ever owned in well-over forty years of shortwave listening. I like the fact that nothing is "mode-dependent;" in other words any function is available with any operating parameter. (For example, according to PASSPORT's review, the AGC action CANNOT be adjusted on the NRD-545D when in AM or Sync mode. This is certainly not the case with the AR7030 Plus.)

There is a "learning curve" for both radios; the AR7030 Plus' operating manual can be downloaded (free) from http://www.aoruk.com/Default.htm so you can see its operation for yourself. Unfortunately there is no downloadable manual for the NRD-545D of which I am aware.

I personally found the AR7030 Plus quite easy to operate, "mastering" its most common functions in about a half-hour.

Unlike PASSPORT, I like the fact that the AC power supply is external on the AR7030 Plus; should it be necessary for you to perform any internal adjustments, you can do so while the radio is powered - there is only 15 Volts inside! (I had to adjust the Sync circuit for my climate which is much different than that of England; the whole process took about fifteen minutes.)

Note that the entire service manual and procedures are available online and can, in fact, be downloaded and kept on your computer for reference.

Should you have any specific questions about the radio that cannot be answered by your dealer or AOR UK's website, feel free to ask me or you can also telephone (or e-mail) Richard Hillier at AOR UK. His telephone number is on the website. (Remember the time difference.)

By the way, there is a FREE computer control program available called RxWings should you desire to go that route. It is superb. This program can operate either of your two prospective radios. Thus there is no need to buy the manufacturers' proprietary (and expensive) computer programs. It is available at http://home.wxs.nl/~jarkest/swl/swl.html

Best of luck with whichever radio you purchase. I know you will derive many, many hours of pleasure from either.

Joe

There seems to be two main groups of shortwave listeners: the dx'ers who do marvellous feats of hearing weak stations, and the program listener who wants to listen to the program material on a clear station with good reception. My comments are directed to those listeners who can't find any of their old favourite commentators anywhere on the shortwave bands. People like Chuck Harder, Bo Gritz, and Robby Noel.
Because of a sprained knee, I was bedridden for a few days with only my bedside (dx 394) short-wave radio (and two vintage laptops: an IBM 380 ED and a Macintosh Powerbook 3400c.
Radio reception was terrible: selective fading, auroral garbling, weak signals, and lack of programs to listen to. For some reason (divine?) most of the stations that were clear were religious with EWTN rock solid. After Brother Stair had taught me how to spell Walterborough several times, I gave up and turned to the laptops to see what I could find.
The two laptops had similar speeds(180 mhz), memories (50 mb), and operating systems (win 98se and OS 8.5). To make a long story short, the Mac was essentially useless, being unable to decode any audio site. Nothing pointed out Apple's plan of planned obsolescence as much as trying to load any Mac programs that would run on OS 8.5. Even the old browser, IE 5.1 had to be supplied by Microsoft, Apple having nothing to offer. No wonder they are moving to an Intel CPU. Kudos to Microsoft for letting old machines run on new software and old software run on new machines.
The old IBM, came through with flying colors, (if a little slowly) and loaded everything I wanted. When installed, every program ran properly. For the benefit of others with vintage machines, these were the programs I loaded:
Winamp 9, Shoutcast, Quicktime (the Mac wouldn't even load its own program),real player RP7U-S~L.exe (to avoid all the spybots and popups in later versions) (get it from jmcanneyscience.com website), winmedia 9, IE6, Netscape 7.2 (to avoid most of the virii). It had about a 2 gig hard drive and all these programs used up about 40%.
This whole effort was triggered by the disappearance of Robby Noel from Genesis and its transmitters just as I hit the sack. I like to listen to Robby: his view that we are all going to hell in a handbasket seems quite reasonable to me and I like to have my prejudices refreshed. I enjoyed finding his website and the blogs and streaming audio, and later on, Chuck Harder's mellifluous tones were heard once again as he touted his new satellite system. The session ended with the infamous Bo Gritz who now lives in the southwest, rarely visiting his real estate development in Idaho, "Almost Heaven"
To find a lost pundit, go to Google and type in the name. The pundits are all out there doing something with microphones, it is the nature of the beast. I find Shoutcast to be quite convenient and it integrates nicely with winmedia.

Although there were some buffering gaps with winmedia, in general the IBM could handle a 32 bit stream and gave much clearer audio than did the short wave radio. Some sites where you can find pundits:
-Shoutcast (in talk)
-rbn
-Americanewsnet.com
-patriot radio newshour
-eaglesup.com
-talk star radio network
-republic broadcasting network

I think the rising cost of energy is making powerful short wave stations too expensive and the trend to the internet will continue. I was surprised to find so many of the old pundits still holding forth and that I was able to listen to them so clearly, and it made the four days in bed pass very pleasantly. For those who have difficulty hearing Coast to Coast, they are on the net as is Imus.

I'm not much into conspiracy theories, but I've got to call -bullshit- on this statement:

"The BBC has also learned the shooting was not captured on Stockwell Tube's CCTV because police officers had removed the cameras' disks for their investigation into the suicide bomb suspects who boarded the train at the same station the previous day. "

So, they pull the disks out and don't replace them, effectively denying themselves an obviously useful tool in the event of a second attack? Look at the info gleaned from the disks, and then tell me that they didn't bother replacing them. That just stinks of cover-up. It's beyond incompetence, and so I ain't buying it.

Come on, jd...-seven- rounds to the head, from about as close as you can get? At the very least, it's wasteful. IMO somebody had trouble with their nerve.

I've got a 7030+

I added milspec crystal filters that read 2.9 and 6.1khz. With them, the audio quality is quite nice.

One of the reasons I decided to try it was a few years back, on the premium-rx list, they did a poll of what folks were using for "portables". About half of them (including me) were using the Racal 6790/gm on dxpeditions, and about half were using the 7030+.

Since the 7030+ was highly regarded, considerably smaller, and more practical to run on batteries I decided to give it a shot. Frankly, even if I wasn't using it as a portable, I'd like it better than the 6790/gm.

It's very easy on the ears, and has scads of dynamic range.

Mine is installed in a slightly larger case that holds two sets of 14.4v nimh battery packs, a rapid charger, and an avantek 30db preamp. I use it with a 3 meter whip antenna, and it performs almost as well as my Harris on the 65' "Doty style" antenna at home.

I second Joe's recommendation of the 7030+. Excellent performance. The menu system isn't complicated, but you have to pay attention to what you're doing. If I'm sitting in front of the Drake receiver I have, my fingers can just sort of do their own thing, turning knobs and pushing buttons, and everything comes off without a hitch. With the 7030+, if my fingers begin to do their own thing and I'm in the wrong menu, it's going to cause a problem. So you have to stay alert to where you are in the menu system. It's not something you can ignore. That said, I don't mind it. Very rarely is it a problem, and it makes possible a sparse looking, very sharp-looking receiver.

I wish a little more power was going to the external speaker jack. It can't power an external speaker anywhere near as well as my Drake receiver. The sync detector is good. Not the best in my opinion, but it's very good.

If you get a 7030+ I recommend that you never, ever use headphones with it. There's a mixer inside that's very delicate, and easily blown from static electricity. I speak from experience on this one, and the AOR website will tell you that problems with this mixer are not uncommon.

Joe touched on what is probably my favorite thing about the 7030+: It's extremely quiet, with audio having a sort of 'transparent' quality about it.

I've never used the NRD-545D, but it looks very interesting to me. If you end up buying it, please post a review.

I submit that there is no ethnic group called "kruds", despite Colonel Morgan's best efforts to introduce them. I find your indignity over a non-existent ethnic group to be very amusing.

How does one insult a group of non-existent people?

http://www.iba.org.il/reception is the new Kol Israel frequency page, for both domestic MW/FM and shortwave. The page was just created last week and is much clearer than the old one.

For some reason, this evening, I'm getting HTTP 403 (Forbidden) errors on that website. I emailed them about it. Hopefully it'll be fixed tomorrow.

As mentioned, http://www.israelradio.org also has the schedule
Besides shortwave:
As others have mentioned, there are also live and recorded webfeeds available off of http://www.iba.org.il

The REKA, foreign (non-Hebrew) language station website is http://reka.iba.org.il

REKA broadcasts three out of the four daily English broadcasts. The fourth one is on Reshet Hey.... the International network.
The website has English news and other information, as well as access to the live feed.

Other Kol Israel information and more feeds, including a live Reshet Hey feed to pick up the missing 1900 UTC broadcast:
http://www.israelradio.org

There are links from there, to Kol Israel audio on wrn.org - ie:
http://www.wrn.org/ondemand/israel.html

You can listen to Kol Israel English on demand, or via the WRN stream, using your cellphone and dialing in to the Mobile Broadcast Network.
The service is free, but it'll cost you cellphone time. Details are available at:
http://www.mymbn.com/

...and yes, the WRN feed on Sirius... or WRN feed on the wrn.org website...etc
The ways of receiving WRN in North America are listed here:

At least. I don't rapid fire, especially since it's frowned on in every gun range I've ever been to, but I can double that estimate. Accuracy is a different question. <g>

That's admittedly true. But I think four would have sufficed. And what about the cop that grabbed the guy? I get the feeling (and that's all it is) that he didn't expect his partner to be squeezing off rounds. I wonder how his ears are doing right about now.

I'm afraid to say now. I wouldn't want to offend an entire ethnic

I submit that there is no ethnic group called "kruds", despite Colonel Morgan's best efforts to introduce them. I find your indignity over a non-existent ethnic group to be very amusing.

How does one insult a group of non-existent people?

Liberals are bred to be super sensitive to minority groups, whether real or

Many kruds (note no use of caps) seem to hail from the costal regions. Many live sheltered lives, work in academia or the media and are entirely clueless. There is likewise quite a generous smattering of kruds in the Democrat party.

We should initiate an effort to design an "adopt a krud" week. Ted "the swimmer" Kennedy will most likely throw his considerable weight (no pun) behind this effort. Toss in a case of Vodka and he will most likely try to make a national holiday of it.

They don't seem to have the same model now. It's a "folding" antenna with shock cord holding the elements together for travel- kind of like the poles for "dome tents". It was made for the PRC-25 and PRC-77.

I made a base out of some PVC plumbing parts, and put an impedance matching transformer in it, and a BNC connector sticks out the side. The bottom of the base is threaded with a 1/4-20 thread so I can put it on one of my tripods.

I have a 30 foot run of RG-316e to connect the radio and antenna.

It takes about 2 minutes to set up or take down.

PRC-77? That is one radio I never want to see again. I did QA on them at Cincinnati Electronics. It was an early '60s design finally being built in the late '70s with specially made runs of obsolete Motorola RF transistors. We would order 10,000 parts and they would ship 12,500 and tell use to test and use the best ones. It was a real PITA germanium front end to try to get through the module interchangability tests.

I've been trying to find "Lucky" who purchased one of these receivers some time ago. Have any of you had experience with this receiver in terms of sensitivity, selectivity, intermod problems, etc. I'm looking for something for my field outings that is small but offers better performance characteristics than the typical portables like the ATS909/DX-398 and/or the Grundig/Sony/Kaito stuff. I am familiar with its tuning and control characteristics but any comments by an experienced user would be appreciated.

Well, in the UK we pay 91p a litre (US$6.17 per gallon) and our economy is doing just fine. Then again, our biggest island is only 700 miles long, so you run out of land to drive on after two tanks of petrol (gasoline).

Going back on-topic, being on an island only 700 miles long makes radio transmissions a lot easier - for instance, we can have one transmitter covering the entire nation (eg. BBC Radio 4 on 198kHz AM Long Wave). It must be quite odd living somewhere where you have to re-tune AM depending on where you are. Then again, I guess the US sees itself as more of a federation of states rather than one big country, so maybe you don't see that as odd. Out of interest, does the US have the RDS system whereby FM radios retune themselves automatically as you drive around different areas? Does such a system exist for AM when you drive really long distances? In the UK that obviously isn't a requirement... ;-)

Thanks for that, really insightful and confirms what I've also observed here in the UK after coming back to SW DXing after ten years.

I wonder how much of the reception problem is due to the current high solar activity, and how much is due to reduced investment in shortwave broadcasting?

For instance, in my recent visit in January to Boston MA and LA/San Francisco CA, I was completely unable to find the BBC World Service on shortwave at all. On inspecting the BBC WS website, it appears that they have completely stopped all shortwave transmissions to the USA and are insted relying on Internet audio and overnight FM relays by co-operative local stations. In the end, like yourself, I ended up listening on my laptop in the hotels where there was broadband available. When I stopped over at rural motels, this wasn't an option
- so no BBC at all, hardly "World Service", is it?

As regards content quality and presenters, for me as a Brit, obviously the BBC World Service is my mainstay and I have to say, unlike your experience, the BBC WS seems to be MUCH better these days than it was ten years ago. I hear familiar big-name UK presenters and the news coverage is superb, exactly the same high quality as our rolling news TV channels. I'm actually quite glad that the news content of the BBC WS seems to have increased at the cost of the magazine, drama and music programmes since I never really saw the point of drama and music on shortwave, and the magazine programmes were invariably Z-list celeb interview filler or dreary consumber ramblings anyway.

It was interesting to hear that you got what you wanted from audio streams over the Internet. Out of interest, do you have a solution for listening to your PC output whilst in bed, or do you just keep your laptop near your bedside?

My solution, and this was really irritating, was to purchase an FM transmitter whilst in the USA and take it back to the UK with me. In theory it is illegal to use an FM transmitter in the UK, but since these little models are so short-range I can't really see what the harm is. So now I plug in the FM transmitter to the headphone sockets of my PC, or the audio output of my digital terrestrial TV receiver, and listen from my bed in the next room using a regular FM bedside radio.

About S5 here, a slight delay from 15190. Australia is booming in on 9580.

I personally like mine, but it was my third SW radio after some years spent evaluating my likes and dislikes. If you're interested in a less expensive radio that will do the job until you're ready to upgrade, stick with the 7600GR.

For one thing, the Sat 800 is big. BIG. As in 80's boom box big. Another item is that the initial runs were inconsistent in quality, so having the radio sent to RL Drake for tweaking was almost mandatory if you had a dud. There are also numerous birdies around on the receiver, but that probably wouldn't bug you too much if you're a casual listener. The balance on that is that the sound is nice, and with the sync on the Sat 800 you can eliminate (not completely, but a good chunk of) a good portion of the problems that make SW listening less than perfect, like heterodynes and interference from adjacent stations.

My thinking is that it's a good radio for the price, but if you're just getting into SW, it's not the one you want to start with. I cut my teeth on a Realistic DX-440 (the Sangean ATS-803A that was sold by Radio Shack), and for the bang for the buck, a DX-440 or a 7600GR is a good value. My sister in law uses a Sangean 606 for listening to spanish language programming, and that's another good buy for the money.

If you're getting into shortwave, you could do much worse (or spend much more money) than a Sony 7600GR.

I'll verify that - 20 over 9 at 13:10 UTC, also in SW Michigan.

The ''Guardian'' article above says that Scotland Yard provided those

There's also differences as far as public transportation usage as well. As the suburbs developed with the help of the car, it's become harder to backfill the suburbs with public transportation like light rail. The suburbs were designed with the car in mind, not with rail or other forms of mass transportation.

Depends on who's doing the thinking. The ACW got rid of a lot of the federation of states' idea.

RDS here is more of a cutsie thing, where the station's id or some other message pops up on screen. You can use ye olde scan and seek functions to find new stations as you travel, however. For travelling long distances, people I know tend to bring CDs/MP3s, or use videos or DVDs to placate the little ones. I'm still holding out on the latter two, because I had to watch out the window if I was bored, and I'm not going to blow several hundred dollars just to install a video unit in my car.

There is none in a perfect world. That being said, ''freedom'' is a relative concept. A right is something you are born with.

I've had both a 7600GR and a Sat 800, at the same time. Get the 7600GR. Performance-wise, they are in the same ballpark, but the Sat 800 is built like the cheapest boombox you've ever seen, while the GR packs the same performance or slightly better in a smaller, well-designed and extremely well-built package. If you need a larger speaker, just use an external speaker.

The prices of gasoline in U.S.A.is artificially set by the big oil/gas companies.The prices are not directly tied to the price per barrel of crude oil.Oil which is pumped from oil wells in U.S.A.is lower in price than oil which comes from foreign countries.I dont really want to shut down America,but I say folks should park their gasoline and diesel engine vehicles at least one day,same day each week untill the prices of gasoline and diesel fuel come down,wayyyyyy down.

Most of us don't really need large radio like the Grundig. It really isn't portable in the same sense as a Sony 7600 or Degen De1103, but more luggable or movable. It's strong point is good sound out the speakers. I would expect that you will hear the same stations on the Grundig that you will hear on the little Sony. Just plug a set of headphones into the 7600, enjoy the good sound and start tuning the bands.

In either case that is a LOT of money for a shortwave receiver. Are you really sure your listening habits require you to spend almost $2,000 on one HF radio? Given that there are many high-end used radios selling for a fraction of those prices, why not go that way. Chances are you will hear exactly the same stations.

This wouldn't be the first time the BBC and other British media have jumped the gun. The Beeb were recently found guilty of making false accusations against the UK government's reasons for entering the second Iraq war, which may have contributed to the suicide of a government defense consultant. In particular the BBC was criticised for allowing a major story to air UNCHECKED.

http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Hutton_inquiry

I do find it a rather laughable situation, after all the BBC are just another government-run broadcaster, no matter how much people would like to play this down by calling their funding a "licence fee" rather than a tax (there's a 10-quid a month "licence fee" for having a television in your house; sounds like a tax to me). Essentially what happened was that one division of the government took another division of the government to court for libel (but they called it a "judicial enquiry"), which is plainly daft and an indicator of just how overburdened with bureaucracy the UK has become.

Whilst the UK news media are more serious in their political coverage than their US cousins, there is nevertheless the same hunger to be "first with the news", and the Sky/Fox corporation battle it out with the BBC to be the first to break any news item. The BBC is also particularly fond of digging, digging and digging some more to find dirt on politicians and politics; this has been backfiring frequently in recent years as the desperation to beat Sky/Fox to a news story often means that stories go out unchecked.

If an Sky or BBC reporter got an eyewitness spinning them a complete yarn about a major story, they WOULD broadcast it, because they're too busy racing to beat their competitors to the scoop rather than stopping to coroborate the evidence.

So I reckon you've got it absolutely correct on about a reporter swallowing an initial eyewitness report without verifying it, and it spiralling out of control.

Well, yes, I'd certainly agree that the UK police have been ineffectual with several recent major events. However, you've got to give them credit for arresting all four of the recent bomb suspects within a week of the failed bomb attack. Four years on and there's only been one person arrested over 9/11 and he got released!

>just like all of them other >limeyland Cowards over there.

Now that's just blatant childish namecalling, unncessary and unintelligent. If you have a logical argument, fine, let's discuss it (ideally on a political newsgroup) but there's no need for prejudice. What on earth have you got against Brits? We always back you Americans up, even when you occasionally have some ill-considered moments, let's have a bit of support coming back our way too, please?

As for cowardice, may I remind you that we entered WWII in 1939 even though we hadn't yet been attacked, two years before the USA who only entered when their naval bases were bombed. I'm not saying that our actions were particularly intelligent, but you certainly can't accuse the UK of being cowards. If anything, I'd say we're rather feisty - never shy of a good scrap!

The first round of reports were good, in that they gave the source of the "padded jacket" as a witness, in this story the witness is named:

http://news.bbc.co.uk/1/hi/uk/4706913.stm

A different eyewitness in the same story says the guy "appeared to have a bomb belt and wires coming out". Oh, well.

The confusion came later, and oftentimes just hours later. News columnists were among those most eager to jumble the few known facts with unreliable eyewitness accounts and jump to their conclusions.

That's the liberal media for ya.

The reporters don't have to verify a story. They ought to verify their source. Such as -- was the eyewitness really at the station? Does the source seem given to fantasy? Nearly all journalism is some sort of story retelling.

But, in this case, it seems the "opinion makers" were the worst offenders in taking the babblings of shocked eyewitnesses as God's Honest Truth.

3633. E1 Vs SW77

From what I've read about the new E1 I doubt if Sony will be missed too much in the SW market. The E1 seems to do everything the SW77 does and much more. I think the SW77 AC adapter was nearly $100 from Sony. Hopefully Eton won't be as greedy. I've also read that the E1 Sync is outstanding.

Hmm, let me rewind my cassette recorders...

From up here in Seattle, the 13:00 UTC tape (Global Business) was OK, a bit more 5 kHz het than usual, so it was probably a weak signal, but should be listenable. The 14:30 tape (World Business/Analysis/Science in Action) was just fine.

And now (16:57 UTC) 9740 was there in some South Asian language and 7160 was in English an a listenable S-4.

Check your antenna, maybe the ground squirrels (or Burr) ate it.

I'm convinced that the 800 is definitely the better receiver, but I'm equally convinced that the 7600 is the better value.

If you want the best (so-called) portable that is currently being manufactured, get the 800. If you want the most bang for the buck, get the 7600.

It's too bad that Sony doesn't make the SW77 anymore.

If you're willing to buy a used receiver off ebay, that opens up a whole new world of possibilities--and risks.

Sony is greedy...there's no doubt about that. The E1 has many more features than the SW77 and I hope, but will be a bit surprised, if the E1 is equal to the SW77.

The Sony is a great little radio indeed. The SAT 800 just makes it more enjoyable listening. With the 800 you can tune stations more precisely to find that 'sweet spot', which IMO is very important. And the Sync is much easier to use on the 800. I love my 800, but it cost much more than my 7600GR. For the money I don't think you can beat the 7600GR. But I also think the 800 is well worth the price.

There was also the trick of feeding a 45 MHz signal into a TV set to add a pseudo-carrier into the IF amp, so that you could use the fine tuning (and the inter-carrier sound system) to pick up most everything.

I did that a couple of times and found that your typical cell-phone call makes the Voice of (North) Korea sound interesting in comparison.

If you go to www.radiointel.com, there's a review of the E1. The review is very positive, but a bit strange. The reviewer seems to prefer the E1, overall, to the Sat 800. However, he doesn't seem to think that it's a knockout and in the closing paragraph he even describes the E1 as "a compact Sat 800 with numerous extra goodies".

Even though the tone of the review is very positive, I don't think this is the sort of think thing Eton was hoping to hear.

The reviewer also plays up the connection with Drake....the same connection that everyone seems to play up.....except--curiously--Drake.

I am sick and tired of you little cowards, parasites on freedom's ass talking BS that is now picked up by the "insurgents' so they can renew their attacks on our troops over here. Maybe if me and my Vietnam buddies gave you a taste of the irresponsibility you display and its results on your person and your families, you shit your ignorant mouths....America love it or leave it losers....I saw the crowd around Cindy...what a pack of derelects...sad that her son volunteered for the military...maybe to get away from his freaky mother, or for the wrong reasons....but in any case, every one in uniform takes the chance to lose life or limb in the line of duty...if you cannot acdept the harsh reality of the profession, then he and some of you slackers should have stayed at home with mommy.

And if I meet any of you Jane Fonda lovers, you better run before I give a taste of what she contributed to the torture of our men over there.....Jane needed capping, and her followers do too.....try working and living overseas but then you have no guts and no skills that even these countries pay for do you?????

Since being here, I saw a weak President cave into a global view that cut America to her knees...thanks Bill Clonton and your homone-guided female following. The fight is on, and they mean to spread Islam worldwide....how do I know...reading is a part, but I work alonside the peaceful types here as well as those who dispise America not for Iraq, but simply for being Christian.

And if someone tells you that the Koran is peaceful, well tell them that they are blind or dumb or both....besides it is the Hadiths that threaten us most....there is no freedom for men or women here.....fools...the price is a holy war, and not some lost UN cause again. If it were not for the strength shown by the REAL AMERICANS OVER HERE IN UNIFORM OR NOT, there would have been more bombs or worse back there. Maybe 9-11 was not enough for you?????? If you had to see the true face of death as I have, and be denied freedom of worship for starters as we do over here, then maybe you would find the courage to fight and defend the precious values that only America defends and safeguards.

CINDY (PLEASE PASS THIS ON TO HERE).....you are not only a disgrace to motherhood, but need your citizenship revoked immmediately. And if any of these lads or my close associates suffer from your ignorant, self-centered views that are lies and abetting the enemy of western civlization, then we need to bring you here, and drop you off at the local trouble spots, and film your humiliation and torture live for the other freaks back there that have enjoined you back there. Pray that some soldier or citizen here does not look you up back there upon our return to the USA......woman or not, you needs a serious ass-kicking from a real American...I find you a disgrace to the memory of your son (he volunteered, right), and you need your citizenship revoked for inciting seditious remarks. What have you done to deserve the freedom and title of AMERICAN...NOTHING....if we have to fight and die for the likes of you, then we should have a say in your health and welfare via our Senators. Keep your mouth rapping away and the nest instance of your words broadcast over the terrorist web sites, or insurgents connections with the local Arab media, and I intend to pursue you to the fullest extend of the federal law, and a few hundred of us might just appear on your doorstep for some payback.

Pack your bags bitch and get out of America...you do not deserve it...you need to be one of the animals over here, and fully covered and treated like a dog or slave, and watch your sons taken to indoctrination at the mosque to hate all non-Muslims...you make me sick, and after the 'Nam, I swore with my mates never to let another Jane run amuck without pain and suffering of some kind while she endangered our men and women in uniform.

And if any of you traitors want to join Cindy, then please do so we can get the lot of you out of our country.....a country you do not deserve...and a country better without you to dishonor its name, values, and the memory of those fallen.....

There are also a number of families that have lost loved ones over here that we are trying to mobilize to present your names, professionas, and prior political views to the American public at large...this is not George W. Bush's war...this is the war that you lethargic losers lossed on us with that idiotic Clinton mob.....the fight is on, and unless you want to be beaten 5 times a day to pray to "God" then you best reconsider what is truth and what is fantasy. A bullet in your head is fact, as well as, the daily political or ritual killings and torture allowed under the guise of Islam. CNN is not going to tell you the truth as the controlling financial interest is who.....volunteer and come over here and see with your own eyes what is at stake here people....volunteer...that is an American value, not protest and fear......

How do 9580 and 9590 compare? Usually I get a bit stronger signal on 9590, but the audio has some digital crap in it.

I think 9580 is one of RA's transmitters at Sheperton (sp?), and 9590 is one of the Christian operated ones at Darwin.

No, radio broadcasting came into existance at a point where the government philosophy was much more Federal. (Largely to keep the Navy from running it all). Radio waves cross state boundries, so regulation is on the national level. (There are many places where large population centers are on state boundries).

>the RDS system whereby FM radios retune themselves automatically as

Unlike, as I understand it, the UK where you have multiple transmitters for nationawide and regional "channels" or "programmes" or whatever you call them, the stucture here is "independent" stations with one transmitter on one frequency with unique call letters. Programs can be provided to each station by a network, but most stations are only a franchise, not owned by the network. (Until about 15-20 years ago when they allowed large operations to consolidate the industry). So there was little or no reason to have the radio switch to another transmitter with the same program, but most likely owned by a competitor.

At night time, there are the clear channel stations, with maximum power (50 kW) and only one or two stations on that frequency in the country.

Now there are the two satellite operations, XM and Sirius, running in the 1.5? GHz band.

SEATTLE, WA, Aug 19, 2005--Not much solar activity occurred over the past week. A few days ago Earth entered a solar wind stream which raised geomagnetic activity, but not to the level of a storm.

Sunspot numbers and solar flux are expected to remain low but rise moderately again around August 26 and through the end of the month. Geomagnetic conditions should stay mild, with unsettled conditions returning around August 23-26.

Frank Donovan, W3LPL, of Glenwood, Maryland sent in some interesting Web links (1) (2) regarding 6 meters and sporadic E propagation. On the k1six.com link, the dates may be a bit confusing, because the title says the graph covers the period from 1995 to present, but the dates along the X axis run from early May to the present. This graph shows cumulative activity during May through August over the past decade, so the data isn't just from this year. It illustrates when sporadic E propagation across the Atlantic is the most common--in late June and early July.

We get reports of TV and FM DX during sporadic E season and sometimes mention them in the bulletin. Doug Allen, W0AH, of Woodland Park, Colorado, wrote to say that receiving FM and TV stations from more than 1000 miles away via sporadic E is fairly common in the summer. He has personally logged more than 3000 FM broadcast stations via sporadic E, and a few hundred of those were 1450-1500 miles distant.

For more information concerning radio propagation and an explanation of the numbers used in this bulletin see the ARRL Technical Information Service Propagation page. An archive of past bulletins is on the ARRL Web site.

Sunspot numbers for August 11 through 17 were 35, 47, 33, 34, 49, 48 and 42, with a mean of 41.1. The 10.7 cm flux was 75.9, 76.2, 75.4, 74.8, 75.8, 75.8 and 77, with a mean of 75.8.
Estimated planetary A indices were 6, 6, 16, 10, 8, 19 and 18, with a mean of 11.9. Estimated mid-latitude A indices were 2, 3, 14, 6, 6, 12 and 11, with a mean of 7.7.

I used a webtv for a few years and found it to be very good. It decoded audio through the tv speaker with its built-in program. In those days, you just typed the station callsign and then clicked on the "listen now" icon. Now, with money being so important, many stations want money to hear their programs. Most notable among these is "Coast to Coast am" which is a real money machine. Despite this, you can still hear it for free: Look it up on <shoutcast.com>
If you want to hear Chuck Harder, just type "Chuck Harder" in Google to get his site. Or you can just type in various radio call signs and see what other stations you can hear.
The webtv I had was a Sony and it had a pentium II at 266 mhz, which was good value for those days. I had just finished an expensive year with Tandy/RS computers where nothing worked and Tandy couldn't give a damn, and was amazed that this little machine worked right out of the box. The webtv computer was the most underrated computer in history and I hope that the newer ones have upgrades in programs and CPU.

I started listening to Chuck Harder back around the 1980's when he first came on the air here in the Jackson area.At that time,he was either on WPBQ 1240 AM or WJNT 1180 AM (AM radio band) and then he went to shortwave radio so I would listen to him on shortwave radio and I used to listen to Bo Gritz on Shortwave radio too.There isn't much in the way of online radio AM and FM and Shortwave radio stations that can be picked up on webtv nowdays.I use my computer or my Linksys Wireless B Music System internet radio which I can use wirelessly up to 100 feet from my computer,of course if I bought a longer range router,I suppose I could use my internet radio further away from my computer.My shortwave radios I own are nothing to crow about,most of them are Goodwill thrift store radios and junk shop radios,but they mostly work good enough to suit me anyway.If I was going to spend a lot of money on a shortwave radio,I would save up and look around for a good second hand Watkins-Johnson shortwave radio.I dont think Wakins-Johnson shortwave radios are being made anymore.

Hi all,

Radio: Tecsun P230. Problem with AM reception (spurious signal?).
There is a strong AM station 50 kW with frequency 1530 kHz within 10 miles.
Tecsun P230 detects this station when it is tuned to 620 kHz.
No other radio detects this station at 620 kHz.
Actually, other radios detect weak distant stations at this frequency.
Obviously, there is something with heterodyne 1530 - 455*2 = 620

Could you explain what is wrong with radio or just point to the useful web pages that describe the physical/electrical background of this phenomena. Probably, I am not interested how to fix the problem,
I just want to understand why it happens.

Thanks a lot in advance,

-Alex

Cops aren't supposed to behave like that. That's going over the line.

A free society has inherent risk.. That's the price we pay.

The cops cannot be that loose with lethal force. There is a flaw in

Hi all,

Radio: Tecsun P230. Problem with AM reception (spurious signal?).
There is a strong AM station 50 kW with frequency 1530 kHz within 10 miles.
Tecsun P230 detects this station when it is tuned to 620 kHz.
No other radio detects this station at 620 kHz.
Actually, other radios detect weak distant stations at this frequency.
Obviously, there is something with heterodyne 1530 - 455*2 = 620

Could you explain what is wrong with radio or just point to the useful web pages that describe the physical/electrical background of this phenomena. Probably, I am not interested how to fix the problem,
I just want to understand why it happens.

Thanks a lot in advance,

Simplest answer, your radio converts the incoming RF signal down to a lowr freqeuncy for improved selectivity. In your radio this is 455KHz.
See: <http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Image_response>
See:<http://www.radio-electronics.com/info/receivers/image_response/image.php>
The <http://www.radio-electronics.co.uk/info/receivers/> is a prettt good place for beginers to start learning some of the terms and concepts in radio reception.

Nothing wrong with it. That's how single conversion superhet radios work.

I used to tune 7415 on my Magnavox AE-3805 by tuning to 6515 (450 kHz IF).

A great book. It focuses on the Mormons and their particular brand of fundamentalism. The only problem with it is that the Mormon fundies are even less relevant than the mainstream Mormon church. However, Evangelical fundies are very relevant, since they have one of their own in the White House, and they're actively trying to take over America and turn it into a Christian Iran. The Mormon fundies mostly want to be left alone. But the same impulse that drives the extreme Mormons drives the Evangelicals-the desire for a pure world in which the only thoughts and actions allowed are previously approved as having met the religious purity acid test. In fact, that's what drives the Taliban/Al Qaeda and the Iranian mullahs. All want people to be religiously pure and uncompromisingly doctrinaire. That sort of devotion is impossible for most of humanity, and can only be enforced by a brutal dictatorship.

Basically it's due to bad design. All radios have an IF that reduces all incoming signals to a single frequency that then is used for audio output. If you're hearing an internally produced harmonic, then it usually means that your radio is suffering from a design flaw, or that there's some bad parts. Considering how cheaply these Chinese radios are made, it's not surprising that some would have such poor design and/or build quality that internal harmonics or "birdies" would be all over the place. If your radio can't properly handle the IF, then it follows that SW signals will have images too. Such a radio is practically useless for DX.

I have no idea. I worked there a long time ago, during the mid '70s.
The place was a Crosley machine shop during WWII. The facilities and most of the office equipment was still owned by the US government and leased to Crosley. After that, Avco (The Aviation Company) which is now Avco Financial services took over from Crosley. When AVCO got out of the defense business Cincinnati Electronics was formed. They didn't own anything except parts left over from the Crosley days. They did subcontract work for other companies who fought for, and won the contracts. It was a hot, nasty place to work. I did my eight hours in either a screened booth full of hot test equipment and no AC, or in the SATE booth which was "Semi-Automated Test Equipment" that told you where to set the controls as it ran test after test with a noisy high speed drum printer that literally shook the aluminum computer room. I was surprised to hear that they were still in business because of the way they used to treat the employees. You weren't hired long term, you were hired to work on one product, or contract. When it ended you had to wait to see if you would be rehired for the next product or contract. The only way to describe it? It was a lousy sweat shop.

Society? Good one.

LookPal, the way I see it ''society'' gave up a long time ago. We Westerners are raised as half-awake autonomic producer/consumers; fucking dairy cattle at best.

What you call ''Islamic terrorists'' are people who don't want us to infect them and who want us to go the fuck away.

The best way to prevent attacks on our home soil would be for us to quit attacking their home soil. Your remote control Robocop ain't

Not a ''bad design'', just a cheap one.

There are probably close to a billion single-conversion radios with untuned front-ends out there, providing lots of enjoyment.

The fact is, we're losing in Iraq, and we're losing because of Bush's actions. Even if we didn't have wacky liberals talking about how worthless America supposedly is, even if we didn't have washed up hippies sporting "Peace Is The Answer" T shirts, even if somehow we could wipe out all dissent in the US and turn people into robopatriots, we would still be losing in Iraq. Iraq was the wrong war at the wrong time. Saddam had ZERO ties to Al Qaeda. No WMD. No nukes. No threat to Israel or the US. But Bush marched in and toppled him with visions of greatness in his eyes. A simple little war, right? Well, nothing is simple in the Middle East, you should know that from your time there. Bush created a terrorist training ground to replace Afghanistan, raised the hatred of Muslims everywhere, and thus made it LESS likely that we will win the bigger war on terror. If this is what fighting the enemy there so we don't have to fight them here looks like, then we're doomed to lose there and have them come here. You can spew righteous indignation and quasipatriotic prattle all day long, but that doesn't change the fact that Bush's actions are DIRECTLY responsible for making us less safe. On top of that, he's killed 1800 Americans and 100,000 Iraqis, and for what? A new terrorist state in the middle of the Middle East, one with a fifth of the world's oil reserves? Thanks to Bush, that oil will not be extracted from the ground for the foreseeable future, in a world that needs it more than ever. Your glorious leader has come perilously close to losing the war on terror after four years of fighting. And yet you still think he's God. He's not. He's not freedom's last hope, he's not freedom's greatest defender, he's a dumb dunce whose bungling has undermined western civilization permanently and perhaps fatally. Until all you blind patriots stop screaming and start demanding that we really get serious about fighting the war on terror, we'll continue to lose.

While I don't think Drake has an exclusive on the phasing detector and Drake doesn't indicate that they have had any involvement in the design of the radio, you need to also look at the positive things in the review.

The review has a significant amount of quantative content(numbers). Too many review are of the "my new radio is the best radio ever" nature. Other radio reviews focus too much on the touchy-feely stuff with nothing of substance to back it up.

The reviewer has gone to the effort to get or find the numeric data presented. He has also made comparions to other high-end portable radios in addition to the company's previous high end radio. (I'm referring to high-end portables and not implying a comparison to much more expensive table-top radios.)

The reviewer has also given us the best description of the features of the radio that I have seen. This is much better than re-hashing all the same stuff we have seen before.

The review contains references the things that some might find as shortcomings. Many reviewers will only present positive comments.

The review does not answer all my questions about the radio but it does tell me the radio is worth looking at.

My thanks go to the reviewer.

That's right. Sirius is the great corporate Leader. If any shortwave listeners refuse to subscribe, Sirius will roast their stomachs in hell.

I am not afraid, and neither should you be!

Shortwave listeners do not even have control over themselves! Do not believe them! Sirius and its great forces will give shortwave listeners a lesson which will not be forgotten by history. Truly.

Assuming the radio is a Tecsun PL-230...

It may not be a bad design, it may just be a characteristic of the design. Alex is describing an image rejection problem on the AM broadcast band.

In this case it is caused by a very close 50 kW station.

He does not describe what his other radios are, so we don't know what it is being compared against.

Many AM receivers with a single tuned front end only show 30-40 dB of image rejection. So, with this portable radio, he may be seeing the expected results.

Given that the PL-230 is a low end portable, there should be little expectation for good strong signal performance. I would guess that the radio is not broken or flawed. It is probably acting as it should. (Which may or may not be what Alex expected.)

Alex,

An image signal is a signal found at 2x the IF frequency away from its proper frequency. The radio has a local ocsillator that mixes with the signals from the antenna. The goal is to change the frequency of the incoming signal to the frequency of the IF where it is filtered and and amplified.

The mixing of two signals produces an additional two signals that are at the sum and difference of the two frequencies. The difference frequency is what the IF uses.

When tuned to 620 kHz, the oscillator runs at 1075 kHz. The IF is the difference, or 455 kHz. But signals at 1530 kHz also result in the difference being 455 kHz. The mixer converts both 620 kHz and 1530 kHz to the IF frequency.

It is up to the radio to filter out the unwanted frequency before it gets to the mixer. If it is successful, then you will only hear the desired 620 kHz signal.

However, you have a very strong signal at 1530 kHz. Even if the radio eliminates 99% of the signal before it gets to the mixer, the remaining 1% may be strong enough to hear and may prevent you from hearing a weaker station on 620 kHz.

Images can be a problem on any radio. You will see it as a common spec that is frequently measured by manufacturers and reviewers. Methods to reduce the problem include more filtering before the mixer to reduce the unwanted signals, or the use of a higher IF frequency. The higher IF helps because the image is further away from the desired signal so it is easier to filter out. With a high IF, multiple IF frequencies (additional mixers and IF stages) are used to provide the selectivity that is harder to get at the high frequencies.

Only you can decide if this is a problem for you. If you see images from AM stations that are much weaker where you are at, then you may have a problem with the radio, but if it is just from very strong station, then you may have to live with it or use a different radio.

Hope this helps,

craigm

We have a similar 50 kW station here in Tucson on 1550 kHz and all of my single conversion radios with a 455 kHz IF will pick it up at 640 kHz. This is typical for single conversion and a local strong station on the high end of the band.

That's not what they say.

''WHAT THE CIAï¿½S BIN LADEN EXPERT SAYS

The Commissionï¿½s analysis may have drawn on the writings of Michael Scheuer, who served in the CIA for 22 years, and who headed the CIA Counter-Terrorism Centreï¿½s bin Laden task force (1996-1999). Scheuer, who retired in Nov. 2004, wrote two recent books as ï¿½Anonymousï¿½:
Through Our Enemiesï¿½ Eyes and Imperial Hubris: Why the West Is Losing the War on Terror. (He was unmasked in the Boston Phoenix.)

Scheuer contests the view put forward by George W. Bush and Tony Blair: ï¿½We in the United States and the West make a mistake when we argue, as has [New York Times columnist] Thomas L. Friedman, that bin Ladenï¿½s attacks are ï¿½not aimed at reversing any specific U.S. foreign policy,ï¿½ or, as Steve Simon and Daniel Benjamin did in Survival in early 2002, that bin Laden has ï¿½no discrete set of negotiatiable political demandsï¿½.ï¿½ (Through Our Enemiesï¿½ Eyes, p. 256)

Scheuer argues that Osama bin Laden has ï¿½clear, focused, limited and widely popular foreign policy goalsï¿½, including:

ï¿½the end of U.S. aid to Israel and the ultimate elimination of that state; the removal of U.S. and Western forces from Iraq, Afghanistan, and other Muslim lands; the end of U.S. support for the oppression of Muslims by Russia, China, and India; the end of U.S. protection for repressive, apostate regimes in Saudi Arabia, Kuwait, Egypt, Jordan, et cetera; and the conservation of the Muslim worldï¿½s energy resources and their sale at higher prices.ï¿½

Scheuer observes that, ï¿½Bin Laden is out to drastically alter U.S. and Western policies toward the Islamic world, not necessarily to destroy America, much less its freedoms and liberties. He is a practical warrior, not an apocalyptic terrorist in search of Armageddon.ï¿½

(Imperial Hubris, p. xviii)

Scheuer wrote, while still a serving CIA officer, ï¿½Bin Laden has been precise in telling America the reasons he is waging war on us. None of the reasons have anything to do with our freedom, liberty and democracy, but have everything to do with U.S. policies and actions in the Muslim world.ï¿½ (Imperial Hubris, p. x) Scheuer goes further, arguing that ï¿½the United States, and its policies and actions, are bin Ladenï¿½s only indispensable alliesï¿½. (Imperial Hubris, p. xi)''

Go to a Fireing Range and see/hear for yourself if you dont believe me.Anybody who has been in the U.S.Military and on the Fireing Range before will tell you the same thing.It is almost as though the Rifle has a Silencer on it.In fact,the U.S.Navy was actually experimenting with a Silenced Shotgun not many years ago,but that is a whole different story.

My Shakespeare is very rusty but I believe that in Macbeth there is the line "Throw physic to the dogs! I'll have none of it!". Just call him "physic" and the rest will be..... No need to say anything further.

3714. RTTY on 4293 & 8451 ... KODIAK ???

I'm hearing some RTTY on 4293 and 8451. I think these may be NOAA reports coming from Kodiak Alaska. There is supposed to be a NOAA station with carriers on 4298 and 8459.

When I use my receiver in USB to try to decode these using MMTTY, as you would expect, I have to tune off the carrier to 4293 and 8451 to get the mark where I need it to be. These signals have a shift of 850 as is with the NOAA RTTY reports. The strange thing is, these dont seem to be in the clear. I cant decode them as I can decode other NOAA reports.

Does anyone have any idea if these are the Kodiak NOAA reports or something else ???

I'll state the obvious and say it also depends on the kind of bullet that one uses. As in Soft Point versus Full Metal Jacket. Just as a hunch, firing 7 soft points will look a bit messier than 7 full metal jackets.....

Hello your Porky Pigitude!

Learn how to use Google and you will see that I have made on-topic postings. This is the second time that you've "plonked" me which makes me think that you don't know how to killfile at all.

Make me think that you get all excited about "plonking" people. Is that the only way that you can get off? Most guys would brag about a weekend's score but you have to brag about "plonking". Go see a mental health professional!

It was a big advance, but it was practically contemporary to the crystal radio. Howard Armstrong received the patent for the regenerative receiver in 1914. He received the patent for the superheterodyne receiver in 1920. His superregenerative receiver patent was issued in 1922. His FM patent came significantly later.

19 years after Marconi spans the Atlantic, and there's a patent for the superheterodyne receiver. Considering that wasn't a way station towards future innovation, unlike the regenerative receiver, it came about a pretty long time ago. Broadcasting as we know it hadn't come about, if we listen to KDKA's claim of being the first.

Unless you build a receiver using some early concept, you basically can't use a receiver without benefitting from Armstrong's work.

What you are running to is a characteristic, not a flaw of superheterodyne receivers. This radio uses high-side local oscillator injection, which in this case means that the LO is operating 455kHz above the received frequency.
As an example, if your receiver is tuned to 1000kHz, that means that your LO is operating at 1455kHz. Since your mixer has two sidebands at its I.F. output, it can also respond to (1455 + 455kHz), or 1910kHz.
It is up the the tuned circuits ahead of the mixer to provide rejection of that upper sideband. This is a big reason that double conversion circuits are used.
If you have a 1st I.F. of 45MHz, for instance, your image response will be 90MHz away from your desired signal. A properly designed low-pass filter ahead of the 1st mixer provides adequate rejection of this image frequency, since the image response will be quite far down on the filter slope.
As Mr. Terrel suggested, a notch filter at the offending frequency would help quite a bit.

That third link is especially good. The second link appears to be a part of the third link.
Anyway, it gives a good graphical representation of the signals that appear at the output of a mixer. Once this is visualized, it makes it easier to understand what is happening. Thanks for the links!

Topic: An American Apology for Oppression

http://www.aussieseek.com

AM SORRY: An American Apology for Oppression

When my telephone rang on Tuesday night, September 11, 2001, I was a happily ignorant American-Australian. The most pressing issue on my mind, as I prepared to go to bed with my husband, was my planned trip at Christmas to visit my mother, who lives north of New York.

I picked up the phone and heard my mother's frightened screams, "Wanda, they're attacking us!" She called at the start of the attacks, and consequently I was one of the millions of people around the world who watched in disbelief as the second airliner slammed into the second tower. It seemed like a surreal dream as I watched "live" what happened yesterday as I sat in Australia's tomorrow time zone.

Like everyone, I was terrified and angry. How could anyone do this? What is happening here? Why? Who did this terrible thing? Was someone remotely controlling those airliners? These questions ravaged my mind, and bred more questions. I called a good friend in the middle of the night, another American-Australian, and broke the news to her.

After we both cried, she cautioned me, "Don't believe everything you see and hear in the next few days. There will be many unanswered questions." Then she said something very strange, "Thousands of Americans died today and I grieve for them. But I am used to grief. For many years, I have been grieving for the millions of people who have died because of American greed."

My friend's accusation rocked me. What did she mean? Aren't we "the good guys"? The next day my friend began to email me links to some alternative news sites. I read an Alternet story about returning karma, and how the United States was reaping what it had sown.

The journalist in me pursued more information, more history and more analyses of what really happened on September 11, 2001. My investigative mind prickled with questions. This story doesn't make sense. The official "facts" weren't adding up. I began to read some of the alternative views presented by new age thinkers like Noam Chomsky and David Icke. I began to study about the events leading up to September 11, the CIA, the Pentagon's openly published Defense Plan, and the election scandal that questioned the legitimacy of Bush's presidency. I began to read about the history of the United States in southwestern Asia for 50 years. I began to look at the connection of other world events such as the Israel/ Palestine conflict, the growing movement against the global corporations and the World Trade Organization. I began to see how the oppressing nations have terrorized the planet and the poor people for centuries.

As I gradually lifted the many veils of brainwashing that had clouded my perspective, my shame grew to almost unbearable proportions. I was raised in the Philippines in a patriotic American family with strong military ties. I was part of the US colonization and exploitation that has bred terrorism. But of course, I never looked at it that way. Somehow I just accepted that I had the right to be served by Filipinos because I was a white American. Somehow I became used to the sight of beggars and maimed children in the streets of Manila as my chauffeur drove me to the Army Navy Club, an exclusive military club to which only whites could belong and where Filipinos served us. Somehow I accepted that our maids were "happy" sleeping on boards in a small cell at the back of the house, starting their day at 5am, finishing only after all the whites had retired. Somehow I had felt stirred by the American patriotic music as I marched into school. Somehow I accepted that my first allegiance should be to the stars and stripes, a benevolent Uncle Sam, and the American way of life. Somehow I actually believed that the order of things was right. Right for me.

When I came to Australia thirty years ago, I still believed I was with the "good guys". I was proud to be an American, and even prouder to become an Australian citizen. I successfully pursued a corporate career firstly with the Public Service, then with Telstra. I was proud to rub shoulders with other executives from other corporations, and always regarded protestors and dissidents as "fringe", students who had nothing better to do, and being somehow linked with that evil of all evils, "communism".

Since September 11, my beliefs have been challenged. Since September 11, I have become painfully aware of the humanitarian crimes that my American government has committed. Since September 11, I have begun to seriously question "who are the good guys" in this war against terrorism. My mother's phone call that night opened the door to my personal nightmare of reality. It is painful to face that reality. It is also lonely and dangerous. My fellow Americans, including my family, do not want to hear about international injustice. My fellow Americans are angry about those attacks, but do not understand WHY those attacks happened. Last week when I tried to gently share with my mother my concerns about millions of innocent Iraqis threatened with murder and destruction because Americans want control of the oil, she became angry and said, "Candy, zip your lips when you come over here. I don't want to visit you in jail".

This advice came from my 80 year mother who lives in the country that has proudly claimed "freedom of speech" to be a birthright.

I know I can speak freely in Australia (for now), and I know that many readers of this newspaper are likely to be more open to these facts about history and questions surrounding September 11. As my friend and I have intensively been researching the various events leading up to that day in September and the many alternative theories about what might really be happening, I have been continuously shocked by new revelations, buried facts, and the criminal misrepresentation of facts by the western governments and mainstream media.

Let me share a few insights with you now, and encourage each of you to go away seeking your own answers to the many questions that have been raised by our research.

Question 1:

Is the slaughter of more than a million people through starvation justified because 5,000 well fed citizens of the United States and other countries were killed on September 11?

That is precisely what probably happened, but the truth won't come out for many years yet. . The United Nations estimated that there were eight million Afghan citizens requiring emergency aid at the start of the American invasion that bombed a defenseless nation, and dropped yellow cluster bombs that were easily confused with the yellow food parcels. On September 16 the New York Times reported that the US was demanding that Pakistan stop the truck convoys that provide much of the food and other supplies to Afghanistan's 7 to 8 million people who were on the verge of starvation. What we have witnessed with that war and are facing with the impending war, is the terrorist attacks of New York multiplied many times. Where are the condolence motions for the million who died and the millions yet to die? Where is the outrage, the insistence that justice be achieved? Or does the right to retribution belong exclusively to the wealthy western powers?

Question 2:

Is it right to kill more innocent civilians in a war against terrorism, when that terrorism was created and trained by the same country that leads the fight?

The same country that led the attack against Afghanistan, and is now forcing its allies into supporting an unjust war against Iraq, has been a key player in creating the regimes they now are determined to topple. In 1979, after the Soviet invasion of Afghanistan, the CIA and Pakistan's ISI launched the largest covert operation in the history of the CIA. Their purpose was to promote resistance to the Soviets through a holy war, an Islamic jihad, which would turn Muslim countries within the Soviet Union against the communist regime and eventually destabilize it. Osama Bin Laden and his terrorist group were not only supported, but also trained, by the CIA. Over the years, through the ISI, the CIA funded and recruited almost 100,000 radical mojahedin from 40 Islamic countries as soldiers for America's proxy war. The United States created its own enemy, and continues to use war to build its power base supported by its armaments industry and fuelled by its insatiable need for oil.

Question 3:

How can the United States wage a war on terrorism without waging war on itself? Who is really in the "axis of evil"?

Let's look at some of the effects of US international terrorism, starting with 500,000 Iraqi children who died because of US sanctions preventing life saving medicine from entering the country. We can add to that the 200,000 Iraqis slaughtered under Daddy Bush's time in office. Perhaps it was not presented on television for the world to view, but the infamous "highway of death" during this campaign had US pilots literally shooting the backs of retreating civilians and soldiers. Space and time do not permit a complete listing of the travesties committed by what is nicely termed "US foreign policy". But if you are interested in a more balanced view of history, I recommend you investigate the human toll that US intervention has had in dozens of countries, including Iraq, Iran, Afghanistan, Libya, Indonesia, Africa, El Salvador, Granada, Nicaragua and Vietnam. A staggering total of more than eight million people have been killed by US-backed terrorist regimes and military action since World War II. That is more than the estimated number of Jews who were killed under the Nazi regime, but where are the court cases, the moral condemnation, the insistence that this criminal genocide be stopped and the perpetrators punished?

Before September 11, I did not know that the United States is the only nation state on record, which has both been condemned by the World Court for international terrorism and has vetoed a Security Council resolution calling on states to observe international law. I did not know that President Reagan had sanctioned a war against Nicaragua that left tens of thousands of people dead, the country ruined, perhaps beyond recovery. Instead of setting off bombs in Washington, Nicaragua responded by taking the case to the World Court who ruled in their favor and condemned what they called the "unlawful use of force". The World Court ordered the United States to terminate the crime and pay massive reparations. The United States dismissed the court judgment with contempt and announced that it would not accept the jurisdiction of that court.

Yet that same nation now forces the rest of the world, through bribery or political pressure, to join the United States in an illegal, ill-defined, and global war against terrorism. Is Australia really sending troops to help out the "good guys"?

Question 4:

Why did the United States attack Afghanistan and why is it so determined to attack Iraq?

In 1997, the western economic press carried a story about a consortium between six international companies and the Government of Turkmenistan that was forming a company called the Central Asia Gas Pipeline. It was reported that "the 48-inch diameter pipeline will extend 790 miles (1,271 kilometers) from the Afghanistan-Turkmenistan border, generally follow the Heart-to-Kandahar Road through Afghanistan, cross the Pakistan border in the vicinity of Quetta, and terminate in Multan, Pakistan, where it will tie into existing pipeline system."

In addition to the gas reserves, there is the carrot of a vast reserve of untapped oil in the Caspian Sea, enough oil to meet the world's requirements, at present consumption rates, for the next 500 years. Similarly, Iraq has long been the crown jewel amongst the oil rich Arabic nations, the most difficult for the United States to control.

Surely the history and hindsight of other wars have taught us that noble war cries often mask less noble economic motives. If the Russians were prepared to fight Afghanistan for nine years to gain control of that oil and the Americans created a terrorist network to stop Russia, why wouldn't the Americans promote another war to gain control of that country?

The Afghanistan "interim" government is already rolling out the red carpet for the oil consortia that have direct links with the United States and the President's family. The imminent war on Iraq is as much about controlling the oil as "weapons of mass destruction". Indeed if the entire world were to agree to force disarmament on a single country with the greatest capability of "mass destruction", then surely the target would have to be the United States? We have seen this story happen time and again in Iran, in Nicaragua, in the Honduras, in South Africa, in Haiti, in Columbia, in Turkey, and even with our closest neighbor Indonesia. Indeed the latest atrocity is likely to win Bush some more support for a war that up until the latest alleged terrorist attack was becoming increasingly unpopular. Many Australians are probably unaware of the fact that well over half of the voting Americans do not want Bush to go to war. Despite very loud protests from their constituents, Congress voted to support that war.

Question 5.

Should the perpetrators of those terrible attacks in New York and Washington be found and punished?

This is the easiest question to answer with a resounding yes. But the next question that comes up is "who did this". Usually the quickest way to find out who is guilty is to also find out who benefits.

There are many unanswered questions around the events of September 11, and despite the fact that this is the biggest story to have broken for the western media since World War II, obvious questions are not being asked. Journalists who would normally analyse the ins and outs of a duck's ass are strangely silent about obvious inconsistencies coming out of the CIA/FBI investigation.

Let me share with you some of the observations and questions that ravaged through my mind in the aftermath of those terrorist attacks.

The western media's reluctance to ask in-depth questions about the biggest event in American history since the revolution. Why?

Nineteen fanatical terrorists kill themselves and 5,000 other people in the name of Allah (so the CIA would have us believe). Where is the message that is usually clearly left for the media? Why wouldn't Osama Bin Laden be claiming credit - he has done so in the past.

President Bush and Prime Minister Blair surprised the world and their citizens with their incredibly well polished speeches about crusades, new world order, and righting wrongs. Yet up until the attacks, both leaders were suffering from criticism and domestic political scandals. Is it simply coincidence that a few days prior to the attacks, 60 Minutes was launching an expose on Bush, proving that certain drug lords supported his campaign funds? Is it simply coincidence that certain American media groups had commissioned a multi-million dollar study into the Florida vote count, and were ready to launch a story that would question the legitimacy of Bush' presidency? That story, by the way, was buried in the interests of "national security" following the terrorist attacks.

What is the statistical probability of a 100% strike rate in the hijacking of four commercial jets within one hour by 19 men armed only with cardboard cutters, and no one lived to tell the tale? What is the statistical probability of the hijacker's passport surviving an inferno that brought down 110 stories and left no bodies, no black box, and no other evidence? How credible is it that a hijacker takes flying lessons at a puddle jumping Cessna flying school in the back blocks of Florida and is then able to fly a huge commercial airliner like a trained jet pilot? Why aren't more journalists investigating the possibility that these airliners were remotely hijacked using Global Hawk technology that the US and Australian defense forces have already developed? And where is the evidence now if anyone were to dare to attempt an in-depth forensic investigation into how 220 stories of steel could "melt down" with jet fuel from two airliners? Within nine months of 9-11, the United States had sold and distributed all the rubble and steel from the towers to various third world countries. The evidence has already been scattered all over the planet.

Where did all that live coverage come from? Certainly the attacks on the World Trade Center are well documented with live footage and cameras amazingly positioned at vantage points as it was happening. How many of us thought at the time, "this isn't really happening, it must be a movie." Well, perhaps it was. The result has been interesting - the shocking and live pictures of destruction and mayhem immediately traumatized 270 million Americans. Those same traumatized Americans are not asking questions, Instead they are happily handing over their rights and freedoms to the Office of Homeland Security, ironically the same name used in Orwell's 1984. Traumatized people do not ask questions. Traumatized people are easier to rule. You simply have to keep feeding the fear.

Yes, of course, the perpetrators of this crime must be found and punished. Personally I am yet to be convinced that Osama Bin Laden was responsible for this. Undoubtedly he would like to be regarded as responsible, surely from his perspective this terrible crime would have been a great victory. But anyone who has reviewed Tony Blair's so-called proof would admit, as Blair himself conceded, that the proof would not hold up in court.

And if we are going to point accusing fingers based on circumstantial evidence, why wouldn't we have a very good look at President Bush and the CIA? Why wouldn't we believe that the corrupt leaders of the world's greatest power could be capable of this injustice, if in fact they were capable of murdering millions of people in the third world to sustain the American way of life? Why wouldn't we give some credence to the conspiracy theories of Illuminati, a few banks controlling the world, and the possibility that these attacks were staged to provide the crisis required to implement a long planned "new world order".

These are shocking questions. And even more shocking suggestions. I feel sickened every time some new bit of research leads me to question the truth of what might have really happened on September 11. But I feel more sickened by the realization that my native born country has in fact been practicing international terrorism for decades, and getting away with it.

I want to encourage a new awareness and some honest introspection. Every American needs to enter this nightmare of reality so that we can began to right the wrongs. Bombs will only create more wrongs, more oppression and more terrorism. Perhaps the real solution needs to begin with one American saying I'm sorry.

On behalf of my fellow Americans.... I am sorry.

Hi Frank

OK, this is truly a beginners radio. In my opinion, I don't recommend it except as a simple MW/SW radio. SSB is OK on good signals but all it has is a BFO "clarify" dial that is too sensitive it seems at times or doesn't help a lot in others.

It cannot do ECSS by ANY means. You must use the internal speaker unless you get the HF3/P where it has a line out. Mine is Nav-fax 100 with a Sitex label even though it said "HP3/P" It's just a HF3 period. If you want the one with a output you'll have to get it off Ebay or the U.K. I have seen them on Ebay recently. Unless you cough up the money for the Nav fax 200 that lots more money.

All it has is an attenuator that does work alright. It's very prone to EMI and RFI. Lots of static. It's prone to splatter on the too wide SSB filter. Doesn't sound loud enough for me. I think I killed one using a pre amp on it. At least Pete from RSS told me it probably was that. I got a replacement though.

Now if all you want to hear is some SW or Hams in the sticks where it's quiet with no garbage in the area, you're OK. It is well made though and the knob is fun to spin but overload may be a problem too.

I paid $150 for it. If it had an speaker output I would use it more. But it is fun to play with and does have separate USB and LSB. MW/SW is what's it's mainly for though.

I feel it's worth $100 no more. Hope this helps.

"AS SEEN ON OPRAH"
PAYPAL WEBSITE:
www.paypal.com

All the posts in regard to sending $1 to 6 people do work. Follow the instructions and be honest. $$ IT WON'T GET ANY EASIER $$ Money Making System $$ Network Together To Make Money Fast!!
I'm sure you've read these letters asking you to send $1 to 6 different addresses. Putting your home address on the internet can be risky, but through PayPal all you have to provide is your email address. It's safe and easy just go to www.paypal.com and set up your account!!!! I am not a gullible person and have never trusted things like this, but I gave it a try, hey its only $6, I figured at least 6 people would respond out of the millions of people that use the internet. You should give it a try too! You have nothing to lose, and thousands to gain! Read on for the letter that I found ... $$ HOW TO TURN $6 INTO $6,000+!!! THIS REALLY CAN MAKE YOU EASY MONEY!! IT WORKS!!! BUT YOU HAVE TO FOLLOW IT TO THE LETTER FOR IT TO WORK!!!! $$
A little while back, I was browsing through newsgroup, just like you are now and came across an article similar to this that said you could make thousands dollars within weeks with only an initial investment of $6.00! So I thought, "Yeah, right, this must be a scam", but like most of us, I was curious, so I kept reading. Anyway, it said that you send $1.00 though PayPal to each of the emails stated in the article. You then place your own email address in the bottom of the list at #6, and post the article in at least 200 news groups. (There are thousands) No catch that was it. So after thinking it over, and talking to few people first, I thought about trying it. I figured what have I got to lose except $6.00, right? Like most of us I was a little skeptical and a little worried about the legal aspects of it. It follows the same regulations as the "mailed chain letters, which according to the U.S. Post Office (1-800-725-2161) is indeed legal! Then I invested the measly $6.00. Well GUESS WHAT!!? Within 7 days, I started getting money in my PayPal account! I was shocked! I figured it would end soon, but the money just kept coming in. In my first week, I made about $20.00. By the end second week I had made a total over $1,200.00!!! In the third week I had over $10,000.00 and it's still growing. This is now my fourth week and I have made a total of just over $36,000.00 and it's still coming in rapidly. It's Certainly worth $6.00. I have spent more than that on the lottery!! Let me tell you how this works and most importantly, why it works? Also, make sure you print a copy of this article NOW, so you can get the information off of it as you need it.

$$ REQUIREMENTS: You must have a verified PayPal account. If you do not have an account you can go to www.paypal.com and follow the instructions to set up a free account. In order to place the initial $6 into your account, you will have to verify your bank account with PayPal (which may take a few days). PayPal is 100% secure and is used by millions of people world wide. STEP 1: Send, through PayPal, $1.00 to each email on the below list. Make the subject of the payment "Email List" and in the comments, write "PLEASE PUT ME ON YOUR EMAIL LIST." What you are doing is creating a service by this and best of all you are not giving your address to anyone you do not know ... THIS IS ABSOLUTELY LEGAL!
The email list:
#1) bizzman008@hotmail.com
#2) denaro117@yahoo.com
#3) mg152004@hotmail.com
#4) Familyartrep@hotmail.com
#5) lilmikey0008@aol.com
#6) tina_mj@yahoo.com

STEP 2: Now take the #1 email off the list that you see above, move the other addresses up (6 becomes 5, 5 becomes 4, etc) and add YOUR email address (the one used on the PayPal account) as number 6 on the list. STEP 3: Change anything you need to, but try to keep this article as close to original as possible. Now, post your amended article to at least 200 newsgroups, message board. (I think there are close to 32,000 groups) All you need is 200, but remember, the more you post, the more money you make - as well as everyone else on the list!
$$ DIRECTIONS $$ HOW TO POST TO NEWSGROUPS + MESSAGE BOARDS $$
Step #1) You do not need to re-type this entire letter to do your own posting. Simply put your CURSOR at the beginning of this letter and drag your CURSOR to the bottom of this do*censored*ent, and select 'copy' from the edit menu. This will copy the entire letter into the computer memory.
Step #2) Open a blank 'notepad' file and place your cursor at the top of the blank page. From the 'edit' menu select 'paste'. This will paste a copy of the letter into notepad so that you can add your name to the list.
Step #3) save your new notepad file as a .txt file. If you want to do your postings in different sittings, you'll always have this file to go back to. Step #4) Use Netscape or Internet Explorer and try searching for various newsgroups, on-line forums, message boards, bulletin boards, chat sites, discussions, discussion groups, online communities, etc. For example: you log on to any search engine like yahoo.com, google.com, altavista.com, excite.com then you search with subject like? Millionaire message board? Or ? Money making message board? Or ? Employment message board? Or ? Money making discussions? Or ? Money making forum? Or ? Business message board? Etc. You will find thousands & thousands of message boards. Click them one by one then you will find the option to post a new message. Step #5) Visit these message boards and post this article as a new message by highlighting the text of this letter and selecting paste from the Edit menu. Fill in the Subject, this will be the header that everyone sees as they scroll thru the list of postings in a particular group, click the post message button. You're done with your first one! Congratulations? THAT'S IT!! All you have to do is jump to different newsgroups and post away, after you get the hang of it, it will take about 30 seconds for each newsgroup! $$ REMEMBER, THE MORE NEWSGROUPS AND/OR MESSAGE BOARDS YOU POST IN, THE MORE MONEY YOU WILL MAKE!! BUT YOU HAVE TO POST A MINIMUM OF 200 That's it! You will begin receiving money within days! $$ $$ JUST MAKE SURE THE EMAIL YOU SUPPLY IS EXACTLY AS IT APPEARS ON PAYPAL. $$ Now the WHY part: Out of 200 postings, say I receive only 5 replies (a very low example). So then I Made $5.00 with my name at #6 on the letter. Now, each of the 5 persons who just sent me $1.00 make the MINIMUM 200 postings, each with my name at #5 and only 5 persons respond to each of the original 5, that is another $25.00 for me, now those 25 each make 200 MINIMUM posts with my name at #4 and only 5 replies each, I will bring in an additional $125.00! Now, those 125 persons turn around and post the MINIMUM 200 with my name at #3 and only receive 5 replies each, I will make an additional $625.00! OK, now here is the fun part, each of those 625 persons post a MINIMUM 200 letters with my name at #2 and they only receive 5 replies that just made me $3,125.00!!! Those 3,125 persons will all deliver this message to 200 newsgroups with my name at #1 and if still 5 persons per 200 newsgroups react I will receive $15,625.00! With an original investment of only $6.00! A - M - A - Z - I - N - G - $$ $$ When your name is no longer on the list, you just take latest posting in the newsgroups, and send out another $6.00 to names on the list, putting your name at number 6 again. And start posting again. The thing to remember is...realizing thousands of people all over the world are joining the internet and reading these articles everyday, JUST LIKE YOU are now!! So can you afford $6?? And see if it really works?? I think so? People have said, "what if the plan is played out and no one sends you the money?" So what are the chances of that happening when there are tons of new honest users and new honest people who are joining the internet and newsgroups everyday and are willing to give it a try? Estimates are at 20,000 to 50,000 new users, every day, with thousands of those joining the actual Internet. Remember, play FAIRLY and HONESTLY and this will work. Seriously, most people think this is a scam, but you actually do get thousands of dollars out of it, it is NOT another crazy stupid scam, if people follow through with sending out $6, it works!!!!!

$$ REMEMBER, IT IS 100% LEGAL! DON'T PASS THIS UP! $$ Look at what PayPal had to say about it! (Or ask them for yourself) Dear * Thank you for contacting PayPal. We apologize for the delay in responding to your service request. It has come to our attention that there is a PayPal scheme floating around at the moment you may have heard or seen the $5 scheme. You may have even taken part in it well we have been asked a lot of questions about this scheme the answer is yes it does work and yes it is safe to use providing you follow the rules it is legal and has made a big hit on the internet this year. Thank you for using PayPal! Sincerely, PayPal Community Support. There's no use trying to cheat for only $6.00  $$ Have fun! $$ Don't forget to visit: https://www.paypal.com

Ah, now I understand where I'm having trouble understanding this conversation. Am I right in now thinking that Cuhilin and yourself see this as a religious issue?

In the UK there is a theoretical seperation of church and state (although strictly speaking the Church of England is part of the government, and funded through taxes). Therefore the concept of any right being "god-given" would be an abuse of politics, since it is generally frowned upon to mix religion and democratic politics (we do have a meritocratic parliamentary body called the House of Lords which does include Church of England Bishops though).

Religion aside - is there actually a section in the US constitution that states that a person has a LEGAL right to listen to any transmission?

That's what I though Cuhilin was talking about, and that struck me as odd; it would have all kinds of consequences regarding the legalisation of hacking.

Thank-you! That's what I was trying to determine. Looks like the US laws are pretty much the same as the UK ones; you're only allowed to listen to specifically designated bands.

Maybe. Would have some pretty drastic implications on hacking and privacy law until use of encryption becomes defacto.

>rail or other forms of mass transportation.

Yeah. Our main problem isn't suburbs (which in our case were generally built in the early 1900s when rail was the most common mass transport), but historic towns. Pretty much anywhere you build in a town, there's at least a thousand years of historic buildings you've got to bulldoze; sometimes two thousand years.

For towns such as London or Cirencester which were built by the Romans around 200AD, the Romans put in a pretty good trunk road network, with roads hundreds of miles long and straight as a die. These Roman roads have remained pretty much unbuilt-on and these routes form several trunk road / motorway (expressway/interstate) and rail lines today.

For towns such as Birmingham or Bristol, which were built mainly during the Industrial revolution of the 1600-1800s, it's a mess. New road and rail links have to go in via tortuorous winding routes in order to preserve historic buildings or parkland.

There's also a problem that a lot of towns were built in the Medieval and Dark Ages periods, for defensive capability, such as upon steep hills. These towns are almost impossible to plan around (you can't just move six hills) and many of them are depopulating due to lack of good transport links.

In the 1960s and 1970s we did have a go at building new towns such as Milton Keynes and Telford. Milton Keynes (1960s) was considered a failure because of overuse of concrete and loss of countryside, despite good road and rail links. Telford (1970s) was more of a success because it incorporated several spread-out villages mixing with countryside - kind of like a collection of small suburbs linked via trunk roads / expressways, rather than a solid town, with plenty of space for new roads and rail. However even this was considered a waste of green countryside, and with land being a scarce resource on a 700-mile long island, these kinds of projects were abandoned in favour of "filling in" disused gaps in existing towns, called "brown field sites". That new policy of "brown field sites" is also now coming under attack since many of these sites are old industrial sites which are heavily polluted.

Basically we've run out of land in the South East of England and people are too scared to build on the rest of the country in case it all gets swallowed up too.

>> Going back on-topic, being on an island only 700 miles long makes >> radio transmissions a lot easier - for instance, we can have one

>What about FM?? Is it strictly local, or do some BBC stations >occupy the same part of the dial all over the place??

Generally it works like this:

87.5-88MHz - Commercial event stations
88 - 95MHz - BBC national stations (Radio 2, Radio 3, Radio 4)
95 - 98MHz - Mostly BBC local, some Commercial local 98 - 99MHz - BBC national station (Radio 1)
100-102MHz - "Classic FM" national commercial radio station 102-104MHz - Mostly Commercial local, some BBC local 104-105MHz - Mostly BBC local, some Commercial local 106-108MHz - Mostly Commercial regional and event stations

In large cities with more stations, especially London, these rules are frequently not observed.

Typically the national stations will have twenty or thirty different transmitters and frequencies within their band. Using RDS your car radio retunes automatically (and usually unnoticably) as you drive around. For instance, I drive 25 miles to work down a valley; listening to BBC Radio 4, my RDS car radio retunes three times (92.7 / 93.4 / 93.0 MHz). You have to remember that most of the UK is a pretty hilly place, but well populated enough to make the transmitter infrastructure worth the money.

BBC local stations are generally based on counties and may have several studios with one main studio in the county capital (usually the "cathedral city", ie. administrative town, often only 50-100k residents). Commercial local stations are generally based on large urban cities and usually only have one studio, although there are a handful of rural stations which have been set up by enthusiasts (often more an eccentric ego trip than a profitable business, but they make for truly fascinating listening). Some commercial stations join together at various times of day for regional output, notably overnight, but this isn't as common as it is in the US. Overnight on BBC local radio stations there is either regional output for speciality music (eg. Folk, Jazz, South Asian music) or a stereo rebroadcast of the otherwise mono MW station BBC Radio 5 (a rolling news/sport station).

In general there is more local news on the BBC than on commercial radio. Also you are more likely to get live outside broadcasts on the BBC than on commercial; although commercial local stations are well known for providing huge mobile trucks which act as both stage and mobile studio for large events such as fireworks, exhibitions etc, whereas the BBC generally have several smaller LandRover/Jeep type vehicles.

Examples of BBC and commercial stations covering the same area:

http://www.bbc.co.uk/england/radioshropshire/
-- very obvious community/news link to rural county of Shropshire
-- "fill-in" FM transmitters on seperate frequencies for areas with poor reception such as Ludlow which is behind a huge hill

http://beaconshropshire.musicradio.com/homepage.jsp
-- much more music oriented, tied to the more urban town of Telford
-- does not even attempt to cover poor reception areas, ignores Ludlow

"Event" stations are things like a radio station covering the Cheltenham Gold Cup horse race, Silverstone Formula 1 motor racing - typically these stations broadcast for only one or two weeks per year and have a range of only 1-2 miles (although they are pretty easy to pick up from further afield using a decent directional antenna). The kit for these can be rented as a complete package, with mobile studio, transmitter, engineers, delivery etc. included.

"Regional" stations are a pretty new idea. The first one is Kerrang!, a heavy metal radio station from the industrial city of Birmingham which has an extremely powerful transmitter and a very well positioned antenna, covering the whole of the centre of England (the "Midlands") with one frequency (105.7MHz).

There is also commercial local radio on AM-MW but this is increasingly rare. BBC local radio on AM-MW has almost died out entirely - I can only think of one BBC local station still on MW in my area, and this is to fill a specific FM reception blackspot. Generally the commercial MW stations are "goldien oldies" stations.

What I found really different about radio in the UK to the US is that US MW stations seem to be mostly single-point-of-view politics. In the UK you are not allowed to present a political show from only one point of view, you have to provide "balance" or you loose your licence. The problem is that a lot of UK political shows become very bland as a result, I actually found the US political radio shows much more interesting listening because they actually discussed one point of view in depth, rather than having to cut over to the other side all the time. Most UK political shows degenerate into a shouting match between the two sides within a few minutes, whereas US political presenters have the power to just cut troublemakers off.

I forgot to ask - What's with 75-87.5MHz being able to hear TV audio in the US?

When I visited New York on honeymoon last month, I bought myself a Sony ICF-35 as a second SW radio. It covered FM down to 75MHz which was completely new to me. Also I discovered that I could hear TV stations on this lower band!

Do some TV stations specifically rebroadcast their audio for radio listeners in this frequency, or is this just a happy side-effect of still using the VHF band for TV? (All UK terrestrial TV is UHF nowadays IIRC).

It's a rather lovely feature and a shame we don't do it in the UK.

I do seem to remember something on Oprah about pyramid schemes - it was about a woman who had lost mucho bucks in one. Maybe it was the "women empowering women" scam that has popped up in a number of countries.

Paypal seems to think your chain letter is an illegal scam.

http://www.paypal.com/cgi-bin/webscr?cmd=p/gen/ua/use/index_frame-outside&ed=rich_quick

Pyramid Schemes
Pyramid schemes, including Gifting Clubs and Ponzi schemes, involve the exchange of money in relation to the process of enrolling other people into the scheme. PayPal includes in its definition of "pyramid schemes" any system in which a hierarchy is created by people joining under others who joined previously, and in which those who join make payments to those above them in the hierarchy ("upline"). Pyramid schemes are prohibited as a form of investment fraud by federal laws and by the laws of each of the fifty individual states. PayPal considers online payment randomizers to be a type of pyramid scheme because the majority of commissions are paid for recruitment of new members, and typically operate by random placement within the program.

Dear Mr. Andrew Oakley:

TV Channels 5 and 6 broadcast in the 76-88 MHz band. 75 MHz exactly is an aircraft beacon frequency and some land mobile is distributed either side of 75 MHz. TV channels 2-4 extend from 54 MHz to 72 MHz. TV channel 1 does not exist.

The sound channel for a broadcast TV is at the upper end of its 6 MHz wide allocation. Thus most FM broadcast receivers are able to hear channel 6's audio.

Thanks for the extensive review of how broadcast frequencies are distributed in UK.

Being a Midwesterner, it is a mystery why one would wish to have a honeymoon in NYC. Next time, see the real USA.

You have fallen into the trap of dismissing the messenger when the message doesn't conform to your mistaken beliefs.

Bin Laden's message has been consistent. He reiterates the same points on all his tapes. Here's the original deal:

Text of Fatwah Urging Jihad Against Americans
Published in Al-Quds al-'Arabi on Febuary 23, 1998

Statement signed by Sheikh Usamah Bin-Muhammad Bin-Ladin; Ayman al-Zawahiri, leader of the Jihad Group in Egypt; Abu- Yasir Rifa'i Ahmad Taha, a leader of the Islamic Group; Sheikh Mir Hamzah, secretary of the Jamiat-ul-Ulema-e-Pakistan; and Fazlul Rahman, leader of the Jihad Movement in Bangladesh

Praise be to God, who revealed the Book, controls the clouds, defeats factionalism, and says in His Book "But when the forbidden months are past, then fight and slay the pagans wherever ye find them, seize them, beleaguer them, and lie in wait for them in every stratagem (of war)"; and peace be upon our Prophet, Muhammad Bin-'Abdallah, who said
"I have been sent with the sword between my hands to ensure that no one but God is worshipped, God who put my livelihood under the shadow of my spear and who inflicts humiliation and scorn on those who disobey my orders." The Arabian Peninsula has never--since God made it flat, created its desert, and encircled it with seas--been stormed by any forces like the crusader armies now spreading in it like locusts, consuming its riches and destroying its plantations. All this is happening at a time when nations are attacking Muslims like people fighting over a plate of food. In the light of the grave situation and the lack of support, we and you are obliged to discuss current events, and we should all agree on how to settle the matter.

No one argues today about three facts that are known to everyone; we will list them, in order to remind everyone:

First, for over seven years the United States has been occupying the lands of Islam in the holiest of places, the Arabian Peninsula, plundering its riches, dictating to its rulers, humiliating its people, terrorizing its neighbors, and turning its bases in the Peninsula into a spearhead through which to fight the neighboring Muslim peoples.

If some people have formerly debated the fact of the occupation, all the people of the Peninsula have now acknowledged it.

The best proof of this is the Americans' continuing aggression against the Iraqi people using the Peninsula as a staging post, even though all its rulers are against their territories being used to that end, still they are helpless. Second, despite the great devastation inflicted on the Iraqi people by the crusader-Zionist alliance, and despite the huge number of those killed, in excess of 1 million... despite all this, the Americans are once against trying to repeat the horrific massacres, as though they are not content with the protracted blockade imposed after the ferocious war or the fragmentation and devastation.

So now they come to annihilate what is left of this people and to humiliate their Muslim neighbors.

Third, if the Americans' aims behind these wars are religious and economic, the aim is also to serve the Jews' petty state and divert attention from its occupation of Jerusalem and murder of Muslims there.

The best proof of this is their eagerness to destroy Iraq, the strongest neighboring Arab state, and their endeavor to fragment all the states of the region such as Iraq, Saudi Arabia, Egypt, and Sudan into paper statelets and through their disunion and weakness to guarantee Israel's survival and the continuation of the brutal crusade occupation of the Peninsula.

All these crimes and sins committed by the Americans are a clear declaration of war on God, his messenger, and Muslims. And ulema have throughout Islamic history unanimously agreed that the jihad is an individual duty if the enemy destroys the Muslim countries. This was revealed by Imam Bin-Qadamah in "Al- Mughni," Imam al-Kisa'i in "Al-Bada'i," al-Qurtubi in his interpretation, and the shaykh of al-Islam in his books, where he said "As for the militant struggle, it is aimed at defending sanctity and religion, and it is a duty as agreed. Nothing is more sacred than belief except repulsing an enemy who is attacking religion and life."

On that basis, and in compliance with God's order, we issue the following fatwa to all Muslims
The ruling to kill the Americans and their allies--civilians and military--is an individual duty for every Muslim who can do it in any country in which it is possible to do it, in order to liberate the al-Aqsa Mosque and the holy mosque from their grip, and in order for their armies to move out of all the lands of Islam, defeated and unable to threaten any Muslim. This is in accordance with the words of Almighty God, "and fight the pagans all together as they fight you all together," and "fight them until there is no more tumult or oppression, and there prevail justice and faith in God."

This is in addition to the words of Almighty God "And why should ye not fight in the cause of God and of those who, being weak, are ill-treated and oppressed--women and children, whose cry is 'Our Lord, rescue us from this town, whose people are oppressors; and raise for us from thee one who will help!'"

We -- with God's help -- call on every Muslim who believes in God and wishes to be rewarded to comply with God's order to kill the Americans and plunder their money wherever and whenever they find it. We also call on Muslim ulema, leaders, youths, and soldiers to launch the raid on Satan's U.S. troops and the devil's supporters allying with them, and to displace those who are behind them so that they may learn a lesson.

Almighty God said "O ye who believe, give your response to God and His Apostle, when He calleth you to that which will give you life. And know that God cometh between a man and his heart, and that it is He to whom ye shall all be gathered."

Almighty God also says "O ye who believe, what is the matter with you, that when ye are asked to go forth in the cause of God, ye cling so heavily to the earth! Do ye prefer the life of this world to the hereafter? But little is the comfort of this life, as compared with the hereafter. Unless ye go forth, He will punish you with a grievous penalty, and put others in your place; but Him ye would not harm in the least. For God hath power over all things."

Almighty God also says "So lose no heart, nor fall into despair. For ye must gain mastery if ye are true in faith."

You wish that these people were insane, but they are merely operating in self-defense.

Not that it's going to receive low power DX catches but there's a 9 band analog Bell and Howell radio which is available, from various sources, for as low as U.S. $9.95 + shipping including earphones. It's good if you're going someplace where you just want to hear high power international stations and don't want to worry about your radio being lost, damaged or stolen.

Going waaaay off topic, being a humanist (sort of like an atheist, but with morals) I have a problem with the whole "supreme being" thing.

I got stopped by a Christian preacher in the street earlier this year, in Glastonbury [1] of all places, asking me whether I believed in God.

I said "You define God, and I'll tell you whether I believe in it or not."

The stupid thing was - he couldn't define God. This guy had devoted his entire life to something he couldn't even define. If he'd had said "Well, God is a metaphor that I use to describe the emergent patterns [2] of human behaviour that assist with our species' survival, such as philanthropy [3]" then I'd have bought in to it. But the chap obviously hadn't actually considered what a god was.

[1] A town closely associated with pre-Christian native North European religions and their "new age" revivals. Hippy central. Makes San Francisco look very conservative.

[2] Emergent patterns are part of Chaos theory, they are larger effects caused by a combination of huge numbers of very small effects. For instance, there are more people who like babies than there are who dislike babies, and this small effect produces a larger effect of most babies being protected from harm.

[3] The act of being nice to people without expecting a reward.

You are coming from a very emotional, faith-based perspective and it is really pointless to talk to you.

Personally, my gut tells me that the Bush people enjoy this kind of anarchy because it helps them rake in the cash.

If you are willing to give up freedom for safety you are a traitor and a coward.

So a $20 radio (that always works perfectly) and a $143 annual sub (+ $15 activation fee) makes no fiscal sense, but buying a $1,400 radio that only works certain times of the day does?

Wife's choice, and not a bad one really. NY was sort of like Paris but much more conservative.

I also spent a week's holiday (vacation) driving through California in January, sticking to the rural areas and avoiding SF/LA. Drove through the central valley and headed up through the hills towards Leavitt Peak which was breathtaking. Was also nice to chat to people who, like me, were country folk. Mind you, they do like their Christianity there, don't they?

See

The ALA 1530 is also a great antenna, but to match the performance of the DX-1 it would have to be mounted on a rotator.
If you did that, it might also be better at suppressing urban RFI.

The closest I've ever come to ''believing'' is when I'm ''heaving'', aka praying at the porcelain altar.

The 1530 is a great antenna. Here's a review of the ala 330, which is basically the same antenna, with more gain through the shortwave bands:

The majority can not determine the rights of a minority. Because the fucking brain-dead idiots who watch TV ''News'' are scared is no reason to trash the Constitution and the Bill of Rights. In fact, these are the times when our Liberties and Freedoms should be most closely adhered to.

You are on the side of the despots.

LOL! So what are you smoking?

If you really tried it, I doubt you would post something like the above.

Well worth the 13 bucks a month just to keep from having to listen to the same crap played over and over and over again on the local stations owned by only two companies. Not to mention one of them has an admitted distortion on the right channel that drives me and a bunch of other people nuts, and their crack engineering staff can't seem to put two and two together and realize that it only happens when a certain piece of equipmnet is used, basically it's every other song that has it.

Figures that it's an oldies station, and I can tolerate what they play..

Borrow a Person' in a Swedish Library?
Written by Warner Todd Huston
Friday, August 19, 2005

We are so constantly inundated with examples illuminating how filled to overflowing with pop psyche nonsense and correspondingly little substance multiculturalism is that it seems almost superfluous to keep bringing the subject up anymore. And just when we thought the multicultural gurus couldn't get any more ridiculous, the Swedes come along and show us that they can one-up everyone in the center ring of the circus of "feels good"!

Dateline: Stockholm, Sweden (I always wanted to say that)

In Stockholm, like other big cities, you can go to the local library to find a book on plants, read the latest newspapers, borrow a nice CD to listen to, or find an entertaining DVD to watch. But in Stockholm you can do so much more than that at your local library. Yes, so much more. Now you can also "borrow" a person. That's right, folks, you can have your very own person for a wonderful, instructive, meaningful 45 minutes.

So, here's the deal: You can get your very own Muslim Imam, homosexual, gypsy, or even a journalist all to yourself for a heart-to-heart chat so that this person can dispel all your "prejudices" and "preconceived notions." You can happily shed those ignorant notions that you've had the misfortune to have been saddled with all these many years, all in an effort to make society nicer.

Yes, you can "borrow" a person and see that you have been an idiot since birth and that homosexuals and Muslims are "real people" too!

Amazing isn't it?

It's amazing that anyone believes it at all. I cringe at this hogwash.

Of course, it remains to be seen how someone who truly does hate homosexuals or Muslims could find that a mere 45 minutes would serve to dispel such emotional, illogical notions. One wonders if a Jew-hater would suddenly see the light if he could only spend 45 minutes with a local rabbi. Or someone who hates Muslims could only spend a bit of "quality time" with one, oh how that woolen cloak would be ripped miraculously from his/her eyes. One also wonders why anyone would believe that bigots would even bother to avail themselves of this opportunity, or would they rather stay happily distanced from their objects of hatred, as is more likely?

It's also amazing that people don't see how this idea is really just a simple minded paean to multiculturalism meant only to make the library authorities "feel" good that they are being multicultural as opposed to actually offering a sensible solution to hate and prejudice in society.

After all, it isn't too hard to imagine that both the "borrower" and the "borrowed" would be on their best behavior and that not a single thing of substance would truly be learned by either party about the realities of the lives of either of them. Sociologists study other cultures for decades without ever fully grasping their subjects, but here are the Swedes to show us that we can truly come to appreciate another person's life in just 45 minutes! It's like they have created the McDonald's of sociology. I wonder if you can "borrow" that Muslim woman or that gypsy at the drive through window? (And I wonder if they keep asking you if you want a Jackie Collins book with that, or some other such author that would represent the "french fires" of literature?)

Further, the "borrowing" list of personages to encounter is somewhat limited. According to the report from USA Today (go here) by way of Agence France-Presse you can "borrow" a Muslim imam, A Muslim woman, a gypsy, a journalist, and a homosexual. Where are the Nazis, bigots, or otherwise extreme people that one might "borrow" in order to "understand" them better? If we are to show society how to better understand people, shouldn't we experiment with all sorts of people, bad as well as good, so that we can have a fully fleshed-out curriculum of human types to examine? I suppose that wouldn't be PC enough of them, though.

Granted, a Nazi could probably see his way clear to seem like a quite a nice fellow for as short a time as 45 minutes. Even a mass murderer or sex offender could be expected to really pour on the charm when the need presents itself it must be remembered. So to expect that this Muslim imam could be any different in that single respect is probably a bad assumption to make. I mean, I am sure that a radical imam, for instance, can dispense with all the "Kill the infidel" talk to make his ideology seem harmless for a mere 45 minutes as he is given the opportunity to dispense his own personal propaganda. Don't you agree?

Seriously, what could one possibly learn about another's entire life's experience in just 45 minutes that might dispel deep-seated hatreds, bigotry and misconceptions? And just how can the "borrower" be sure he is seeing the "real" person in that same period of time and not some nicely scrubbed and handsomely dressed facsimile of a "type"? Also, isn't it a bit suspicious that these "borrowed" people are getting paid by the library to do this? Can't we expect that to influence how they interact with the library customers and how that might tend to present a slanted, self-serving image to people so that they won't lose this stipend? Haven't you gotten that hollow "May I help you," or that empty "Have a nice day" from a retail worker who blankly intones the store line because he or she wants to keep his job? Or do you REALLY believe that he or she cares about your day?

But, the biggest mistake of all with this program is in the offering of the journalist. I mean, who could ever believe that journalists are people too?

Now even Universal Radio is under siege. We are hitting it from the north, east, south and west. We chase the shortwave listeners here and they chase us there. But at the end we are the people who are laying siege to them. And it is not them who are besieging us.

Our estimates are that none of them will come out alive unless they surrender to us quickly

They fled. The shortwave listeners fled. Indeed, concerning the fighting waged by the heroes of the Sirius yesterday, one amazing thing really is the cowardice of the shortwave listeners. We had not anticipated this

work."

Do nothing to illuminate the solution or why the problem exists.

And for the terminally 'tard, such as David Rickets, 13865 is not, repeat NOT a satellite receiver channel.

No opinion, just fact. Look at the names.

These people have been plundering the planet for decades. They are crazed gangsters. The Saudis (including Bin Laden) , the Bush Crime Family, and a handful of others are working together to rob you and me blind. If 9-11 wasn't actually perpetrated by them, it was certainly the luckiest thing that ever happened to a criminal enterprise.

I generally don't like the reviews on the radiointel site. I have found the reviews of other radios to have odd things observations and conclusions. The idea of reading the review is to get someone's opinion of a radio but when an observation is obviously incorrect or oddly they expect the radio to do something it can't and give a negative comment on it the value of the review is damaged.

The problem may be that the reviewers don't get feedback and realize their errors in order to update their reviews. Most publications have at the least an editor review articles before publication but the Internet has no such requirements.

34 degrees North 118 degrees West is L.A.

I'm actually 30 miles North of there but too lazy to fractionalize the coordinates. Close enough for a 20 megaton air burst.

I think DRM will do little to give SW radio more mainstream appeal. I suppose most people dislike the selective fading and crummy audio oftentimes heard on SW radio. DRM is designed to fix that, and maybe it does, I don't know. But sync detectors are also designed to reduce those problems, but people still seem to choose standard detector radios most of the time. So, whatever the dislike people may have for typical SW audio, they don't often seem willing to pay the extra money for the radios which are designed for better audio.

DRM can't fix the most annoying problems with SW propagation. The fade outs will become jarring drop outs and the no signal days will remain no signal days.

I think DRM's improvements will be marginal. It might turn very good, reliable reception into excellent reception. DRM might be most useful with the cross border European broadcasters, assuming people start buying large numbers of radios and the governments still want to pay for all that SW broadcasting.

Sony will go on to some other SW radios long before analog broadcasting is gone.

So if the reviewer does not get things right how does one know what to believe without prior knowledge of the radio?

If you have prior knowledge then you are left with the reviewers opinion on what he thinks is good or bad about the radio but then how much can you value that opinion when there are factual problems with the review?

The value of the information in the review is lessened and so is the value of the opinion... in my opinion.

Thanks for the interesting response: it is nice to know that somebody actually reads my stuff. I too have hooked up small FM transmitters to permit listening around the house and yard. I have a Ramsey electronics FM-10 hooked up to my desktop and it puts out a solid signal. There are many tweaks available at its website, the easiest of which is to replace the little antenna with a 48" screw-in whip. I also have a smaller FM unit hooked to the television so that I can watch TV and listen to it wirelessly with FM earphones. I remember that there were many websites in Britain dealing with little FM transmitters should the desire for bigger-better-louder take hold. In bed, I usually use $10 earphones with a thin tapered shape in case I nod off.
In Canada, we get good coverage of the BBC, it is available on the Canadian satellite services, and a full hour on the trans-Canada network. That is more than enough for me, but I realize that it is good to be able to get news from home. When I travelled in the USA, I looked for CBC International on my Sony 7600G to hear what was going on, as there was absolutely no Canadian news on the US stations. I can hear BBC World Service on shortwave in the Great Lakes area, probably from the Caribbean, but with continuous service from the satellite, there is no point in putting up with fading and distortion. I must give the BBC more attention, given their improvements in content.

What I object to in programming is the amount of spin that many stations put on their news and I like to seek out commentators who do their own research and don't rely on government and corporate handouts. This eliminates most US networks and to a lesser extent, the CBC and the BBC. The recent spins on the BBC, now exposed, re the shocking killing of that poor fellow from Brazil, is a current example.
The main purpose of my post was to show that the wealth of program material on the internet was available to old machines. My old IMB is probably only worth $30 but it does the job.....73.....ken.....

I still think it is a pretty good value for the dollar, but am a little disappointed by the performance of this radio, It seems to be a bit numb (compared to my Radio Shack DX390) in the MW and SW bands + awfully sensitive to any noise from nearby wall warts or electrical devices nearby. I did find that if I get it off the same electrical circuit (by going to another wall plug, for example) as a noisemaker that the noise situation improves dramatically.

Anybody have any ideas what I could do to improve this little radio? I've searched the net far and wide and have found nothing. : (

I have an urge to tinker but have no idea where to start.

I find that I'm willing to accept the numbers the reviewer provides at face value. I might not accept the reviewer's interpretation of those numbers or any overall conclusions he draws about the receiver, though.

Whatever the value of this particular reviewers observations, it is just plain weird that he never mentioned the manufacturer of the E1 even once, while mentioning Drake four times. Someone totally new to shortwave would walk away from this review thinking the E1 is in fact the "Drake E1". In that respect it is misleading.

All DRM is doing is crapping up the bands. Dam thing takes out at least 3 channels a shot. Stupid lame over hyped technology. There is a right way to introduce / adapt digital modulation to SW but this is not it.

Mark do you have the + version. Mine has a three position antenna switch on the back with a whip amplifier as one position so no transformer needed. Maybe you found the whip still works better with the transformer?

1. SO-239 socket 50 ohms.
2. SO-239 socket whip amp.
3. connect to the high impedance terminals.

They are two different types of radios. The Sony you can hold in one hand and carry it around and listen to it. The Grundig is much to big for that and you would have it sitting on a table to use it. That aside the Grundig would be a better radio but you have to get a good one that does not have any of the QC problems. The Grundig is more money but you get more radio for the money.

Did you know that if you listen to a SW radio you can hear a station far beyond the rainbow? I was listening to OZ last night but currently they are not coming in to well on 21,740.

Hunter S. Thompson: Ready for Blastoff on Saturday

By E&P Staff

Published: August 19, 2005 5:00 PM ET

NEW YORK Hunter S. Thompson, gonzo journalist, appears ready for his final flight of fancy. Plans appear set for his launch into space, in a grand fireworks display at his Owl Farm near Aspen, Colo., on Saturday, financed largely by actor Johnny Depp.

His ashes returned to Colorado today via armored truck,, from Pennsyvlania, where they had been packed into canisters to be sent aloft as part of a fireworks display. Thompson fans have already started gathering, though few will make it to the ceremony.

It is invitation only, with 250 expected to attend, including Thompson art collaborator Ralph Steadman (who drew E&Pï¿½s election cover last November). The Nitty Gritty Dirt Band, a Japanese drum group, and possibly Lyle Lovett will perform. Depp, Sean Penn and other notables are invited.

One local wag dubbed it Hunterpalooza. Or perhaps a Depp Poetry Jam will break out.

Liquor and food will be served. A makeshift bar has been constructed with framed photos of Thompsonï¿½s eight literary heroes to be placed nearby: Mark Twain, Samuel Coleridge, Joseph Conrad, William Faulkner, F. Scott Fitzgerald, Ernest Hemingway, Henry Miller, and John Steinbeck. According to Thompson's widow Anita, Twain was perhaps his favorite, since he, too, was considered an ï¿½outlawï¿½ writer early in his career.

Thompson killed himself in his kitchen with a gunshot to the head on Feb. 20. It was reminiscent of the way his hero, Hemingway, went out.

The journoï¿½s ashes will be shot out of a 150-tall-monument, packed in fireworks shells. The monument, made largely in Los Angeles, is in the shape of the "gonzo fist," complete with a peyote button. Now covered with tarps, it will not be unveiled until Saturday.

When I got into shortwave listeniing around 1973, it wasn't popular then. People around me preferred a solid 24/7 AM or FM signal to the fading in and out of SW and formats that were just a general 1-3 hour service. SW was added as an after thought to most cheap portables.
Telescopic antennas and dial slider tuning that would whisk past 6 bands in one sweep.

Anyone really into the hobby wanted a longwire and a "serious" $150+ rig, something anyone in any country saturated with AM/FM stations of any format did not care for.

While it may have popular in the 1930s to 1960s, magazines like Popular Electronics started dropping their SW columns as the computing hobby gained steam.

The growth of the Internet has cut into SWBC. Most can stream their signals to such users and they want to leave SW to outlying regions that still use it as a means of contact. Times just change.

SWBC is not going away completely, just as newspapers won't.

Hi

I have the plus version with the noise blanker and notch filter.

I have my radio set for the normal 50 ohm input because I've also added the Avantek 30db amp. Frankly, if I find a nice quiet 15-20db amp that'll fit I may switch it out, as I end up dialing in some attenuation below 5mhz.

I didn't try the antenna without the transformer because I bought a box of 100 ferrite cores a while back, and given how much they've helped with my home antennas, I just automatically include one on every antenna I make.

In any event, the whip works incredibly well, so there's not much incentive to change it.

I've done a fair amount of experimenting with portable antennas, as vacations and camping trips are a great time for me to listen to shortwave - and this one outperforms everything else I've tried, and it's at least as portable as the LF engineering Skymatch it replaced.

Every time anything exciting happens anywhere in the world the servers FAIL. They just can't handle the number of interested people. Even the BBC servers can't keep up and at the NORMAL connection rate the sound sucks due to the dismally low audio sampling rate. SW sounds much better.
I stopped listening to their computer audio feed because it sounded so bad.

I've been into SW since I was a teenager and my computer interests have not supplanted SW radio at all. I am usually listening to SW on the SW radio while on the computer and connection is plenty fast to stream audio and do several other things at the same time. I was listening to Australia on 21,740 and now 17,715. I was listening to Japan and Netherlands earlier this morning on the SW radio.

Dear Mr. Andrew Oakley:
It was a pleasure.
It seems to me that in Japan the FM broadcast band extends down towards 75 MHz.
Please file away in your mind the fact that you have experienced two atypical areas of the Republic. I have lived in, or visited, many places - especially in my early days when I was working in radio astronomy. SW was important during those travels. Consider a vacation to coincide with the great Dayton, Ohio radio show in the Spring. Drive on into Indiana and see some of the most productive farms in the world. Take the long drive north to Michigan's UP with lots to see on the way - a state with as much coastline as the island of Great Britain. You could return through Canada on the east side of the lakes.

There are areas where one religion predominates. However, within six miles of where I live, on an antenna farm well into the country, there is a Mosque, at least two Synagogues, a couple of temples of Indian religions, and many, very-different-from-each-other Christian churches.

Come visit the Hartland. Bring a radio. If you have a radio amateur license, it will be even more fun and interesting. If you do not have a license, take the very easy exam and get one while at Dayton.

Warm regards, Mac

Hi Telemon

I havn't tried my DSL connection under those conditions, but I'm just looking at the SWBC'ers logic of cutting SW programming for streaming audio. Personally I don't want to be at my laptop all the time and I keep the YB400 by my side.

Right, a lot of good signals out there. Radio Australia and Radio New Zealand (15720) are my favorites. I just don't chase the DX like I used to. I'm up the road in Berkeley.

Coming into cent.Tx. at 20 over tonight on an E-W T2FD cut for 7Mz. 10 Db. less on a N-S 100' of random wire,transformed and grounded. I'd have guessed the opposite. I try to catch this 1:30 to 2:30 UTC broadcast when I can. The news and views are usually interesting, (if no less biased than our own,) and there's a bit of vaguely British, 1950's, martial sounding music between segments that usually brings a smile for the images it evokes. This is the thing I love about short wave that I would wish for my countrymen; the chance to get to know our neighbors on this planet a little. Most of them are every bit as civilized, decent, and intellegent as we, (somewhat less of a stretch these days.) Especially since the game plan seems to be to kill a few tens of thousands of them on the off chance that we can install a government will be more responsive to U.S. wishes and hard cheese for the Iranians, again. Best Regards, Steve

I was never big on DXing, just a program listener here. I just like this SW radio technology where I can cut out the middle man. I have spent to much of my life reading news papers and magazines where some reporter tells me what people in other countries are thinking.

It definitely helps clean out the mind Tel and get a little closer to understanding the bigger picture around the globe. I myself love to DX anything i.e. domestic, clandestine, pirates, utility, mil ops, hams etc... You name it. I remember going camping and hunting with the family up in the Sierra Nevada's and I would go listen to the am radio in dads truck and what got my DXing started was late one night, I imagine it was 12:00? or so I got a station in Chicago and I can't remember what station but I told Dad- hey what's up with this and he explained in simple terms why and he said if your into this you should check out shortwave. Been hooked ever since. I'll be very bummed if shortwave ever did KO. I'd almost rather die on the very last day of the last great skip carrying the last program. Write it on my tombstone. :)

Good reception tonight but something strange here. African music coming in faint but steady on the R-8. A web lookaround reveals Zim. broadcasting on 3.306 but not even a faint het.is audible there. Is this the second harmonic from the transmitter or could this be an image generated within the receiver? TIA

I just read about a time signal station at the Real Instituto y Observatorio de la Armada in San Fernando, Cadiz, Spain. This station is supposed to be active, I believe, and I wonder if anyone's had any luck receiving it. It broadcasts on 15006 kHz, though I'm not sure what its broadcast schedule is.

By the way, a few moments ago Armed Forces Radio had a nice signal on 10320 usb out of Pearl Harbor.

The radio's manufacturer was mentioned twice on the radiointel page that links to the radio. So to get to the review one reads the paragraph that has the manufacturer's name.

If it is so much an issue why not bring up the same point about the subject of this thread?

Receiving distant stations is always exciting it's just that I'm not into the verifications and scoring how many countries I have heard.
Keeping score was not a interest but improving reception was a goal.
Better antennas and radios are the answer.

There are a number of radios that have been built that support FM from 76-108 Mhz, so they will work anywyhere in the world. You have one.

In some parts of the world (like Japan), the FM band is roughly 76-90Mhz. In most of the world, the space between 75 and 88 Mhz is assigned to VHF television.

VHF channel 5 is 76-82Mhz, and VHF channel 6 is 82-88 Mhz.

Not even sure if they're still on, but last sked was supposedly 1000-1100 M-F on hi Henk...

I use the 330, and once i'm free of this chemo, i'll be ordering the 1530.
i got the 330s because i'm more into SW than MW/LW. i'm on top of a mountain in w.pa. 6 acres, lots of room for all kinds of ant. you can mount the loop a number of ways. read the reports from a number of web sites and you will see what i mean. on SW you can turn the loop for qrm or to cut out a boomer to find that low power station you have not heard before. check the loop groups on yahoo
for some great info. and, RHF, will be along with some good info for you also.
i love to play with all kinds of loops. i have 7 different types. great fun. and,
Joe A. will be along with some great info for you. he has his 330s in his attic on a rotor. my 330s hung in my dining room, for about 6 months last winter, from a bungee cord to a large ceiling fan. worked great, and i could rotate it by turning the fan. right now it's off my rear deck, on a 10 ft. mask, i can turn by hand. these loops are first rate. you can email wellbrook with any questions you may have. after i get the second loop, both will be mounted in my attic like
Joe's. like i said, these loops are first rate...Good DX...

SCHEUER: Well, at firstï¿½I only tracked him for the last 10 years, maï¿½am. I tracked him for as long as the U.S. government has been tracking him. Heï¿½s an existential threat, as they say, to the United States. He can detonate probably a weapon of mass destruction inside of the United States, be it a suitcase nuclear weapon or a chemical or biological weapon. And weï¿½ve done really very little to stop him from proceeding along that course.

Oï¿½DONNELL: Do you think that he is in Afghanistan?

SCHEUER: I think he is along the border. I think the general judgment that he is on the Pak-Afghan border hiding or at least living is very accurate. He is very comfortable there. He is protected by the tribes that live on the border. And the one thing we would hate to say but it is perfectly true is that he is the most important leader and hero in the Muslim world today. There are very few Muslims who would ever think of turning him over to the Americans.

Oï¿½DONNELL: And, finally, the president has made the case that winning the war in Iraq is central to winning the war on terror and making sure that Osama bin Laden and al Qaeda cannot takeï¿½harm the United States. Is that true, if we win there, will that help?

SCHEUER: No, maï¿½am. The war in Iraq has broken the back of our counterterrorism effort. Iï¿½m not an expert on the threat posed by Saddam Hussein, but the invasion of Iraq has made sure this war will last decades ahead and it has transferred bin Laden and al Qaeda from being man and an organization into being a philosophy and a movement. Weï¿½ve really made sure that the war against us is going to be a long and very bloody one. Iraq was an absolutely disastrous decision.

Oï¿½DONNELL: All right. Well, thank you, Michael Scheuer. ï¿½Inside 9/11ï¿½ airs Sunday, August 21st, and Monday, August 22nd at 9:00 p.m. Eastern time on the National Geographic Channel. Join us again tomorrow night at 7:00 Eastern for more HARDBALL.

Always pay close attention to what Propaganda Dr. David and his Neo-Komm ilk DOES NOT tell you.

Four months after President Clinton refused a Sudanese offer to have Osama bin Laden arrested, the State Department warned the White House that the blunder would have disastrous consequences.
Though Clinton administration officials have repeatedly denied any responsibility for bin Laden's escape, the ex-president himself admitted he played a key role the blunder in a February 2002 speech recorded here http://www.newsmax.com/audio/BILLVH.mp3

State Dept. Says It Warned About bin Laden in 1996
Tom Fitton, president of Judicial Watch, said the declassified material released to his group "says to me that the Clinton administration knew the broad outlines in 1996 of bin Laden's capabilities and his intent, and unfortunately, almost nothing was done about it."

Judicial Watch, a conservative legal group, was highly critical of Impeached clinton during his two terms in office. The group has also been critical of some President Bush administration actions after the Sept. 11 attacks, releasing documents in March that detailed government efforts to facilitate flights out of the United States for dozens of well-connected Saudis just days after the attacks.

Michael F. Scheuer, who from 1996 to 1999 led the Central Intelligence Agency unit that tracked Mr. bin Laden, said the State Department documents reflected a KEEN AWARENESS of the danger posed by Mr. bin Laden's relocation.

"The analytical side of the State Department had it exactly right - that's genius analysis," he said in an interview when told of the declassified documents. But Mr. Scheuer, who wrote a book in 2004 titled "Imperial Hubris," under the pseudonym "Anonymous," that was highly critical of American counterterrorism strategies, said many officials in the C.I.A.'s operational side thought they would have a better chance to kill Mr. bin Laden in Afghanistan than they did in Sudan because the Sudan government protected him.

[Protected him? Sudan had offered to hand him over to the U.S.!]

"The thinking was that he was in Afghanistan, and he was dangerous, but because he was there, we had a better chance to kill him," Mr. Scheuer said. "But at the end of the day, we settled for the worst possibility - he was there and we didn't do anything."

http://www.nytimes.com/2005/08/17/international/asia/17osama.html?ei=5065&en=8abb945bc6bab23d&ex=1124942400&partner=MYWAY&pagewanted=print

A military intelligence team repeatedly contacted the F.B.I. in 2000 to warn about the existence of an American-based terrorist cell that included the ringleader of the Sept. 11 attacks, according to a veteran Army intelligence officer who said he had now decided to risk his career by discussing the information publicly.

The officer, Lt. Col. Anthony Shaffer, said military lawyers later blocked the team from sharing any of its information with the bureau.

Colonel Shaffer said in an interview on Monday night that the small, highly classified intelligence program, known as Able Danger, had identified the terrorist ringleader, Mohamed Atta, and three other future hijackers by name by mid-2000, and tried to arrange a meeting that summer with agents of the Washington field office of the Federal Bureau of Investigation to share its information.

But he said military lawyers forced members of the intelligence program to cancel three scheduled meetings with the F.B.I. at the last minute, which left the bureau without information that Colonel Shaffer said might have led to Mr. Atta and the other terrorists while the Sept. 11 attacks were still being planned.

"I was at the point of near insubordination over the fact that this was something important, that this was something that should have been pursued," Colonel Shaffer said of his efforts to get the evidence from the intelligence program to the F.B.I. in 2000 and early 2001.

He said he learned later that lawyers associated with the Special Operations Command of the Defense Department had canceled the F.B.I. meetings because they feared controversy if Able Danger was portrayed as a military operation that had violated the privacy of civilians who were legally in the United States.

http://www.nytimes.com/2005/08/17/politics/17intel.html?ei=5065&en=2aeff500108cbed3&ex=1124942400&partner=MYWAY&pagewanted=print

Read the book called "Chatter" by Patrick Radden Keefe http://www.wnyc.org/books/44536 and learn how the Neo-Komm Global Leftist Network in essence impelled IMPEACHED clinton to virtually shut down U.S. global intelligence efforts.

Quote:
"In the July/August 2001 issue of the Atlantic Monthly, just weeks before the terrorist attacks of September 11, a former CIA officer named Reuel Marc Gerecht published an article deploring a total absence of effective on-the-ground human intelligence in the Middle East. He concluded, "Unless one of Bin Laden's foot soldiers walks through the door of a U.S. consulate or embassy, the odds that a CIA counterterrorist officer will ever see one are extremely poor."

"When the [Leftist] press reported in 1998 that American intelligence was intercepting the satellite-telephone conversations of Osama Bin Laden, he promptly stopped using that phone. The lesson is clear: when your quarry knows you can break his code, he will devise a new one. Worse yet is the whole string of possibilities for deliberate deception."

How many "points" have you earned so far Dr. David?

Regulation, to be introduced on August 20, will provide guidelines for the rating of reporters' remuneration based on the "credits" they receive on each article they write.

Most Communist mainland reporters receive payments for their articles on top of their basic salaries. Some newspapers weigh the price of articles by their quality, while others go by their length.

According to Li Datong's letter, reports would gain 50 credit points for being among the top three most-read articles, while 80 credit points would be given to those praised by the secretariat of the Communist Youth League.

Stories praised by state government bodies and provincial leaders would gain 100 points, while acclaim from the Communist Party Publicity Department would be worth 120 points.

Cindy Sheehan & Neo-Komm, Inc. to meet Communist Chinese President while they both visit Washington D.C. & Crawford, TX in September.

...while conceding the enormity of China's trade surplus with the U.S., the veteran Chinese diplomat contended that the only way to redress the balance was for Washington to relax restrictions over the export of American hi-tech products, including those that might have military applications. ...he appealed to the U.S. corporate community not to lose this opportunity.
Beijing has offered Washington its services[?] in the premier foreign-policy concern of the Bush administration: fighting global terrorism. Apart from North Korea, which is to some extent a Chinese client state, Beijing has extensive influence over Iran.
"The recent terrorist activities in Britain and Egypt, not to mention posturing by North Korea and Iran, have again played up the fact that the U.S. cannot do without Chinese cooperation in this crucial area."
...
In return, Beijing hopes Washington would rethink its "containment" policy toward China.
...
The CCP leadership is also nervous about alleged attempts by the U.S. to promote "velvet revolutions" in Central Asian states close to China such as Kyrgyzstan. It is owing to Beijing's fear of U.S. "peaceful evolution" tactics " a reference to alleged covert attempts by U.S. forces to turn socialist China into a Western-style capitalist democracy " that security and media departments have (since the spring) imposed strict control over units ranging from NGOs to newspapers. Read http://www.dragoninthedark.com/
While Beijing is jittery over growing American clout in Central Asia, many in Washington have fingered Chinese influence behind the decision by the Uzbek government to ask for the departure of American troops from that country in six months" time. And the massive Sino-Russian war games along China's eastern and northeastern coast this week are bound to aggravate the "China threat" theory owing to widespread perception in Washington that the exercises are a calculated show of force by Beijing's hard-line elements just before Hu's American tour.

Maybe it's just the idle signal that they use between fax signals.
I havn't poked around with weather fax for 20 years, do they have some sort of content coding now, so that the receiver only prints what the user wants?

I though that pretty much everything public used 170 or 425 Hz shift.
At least those were the shifts that worked best for me getting copy.

I think perhaps you should look in a different direction.
That is at the Winradio series of radio's and the sophisticated software that goes with them.
See http://www.winradio.com/index.htm
There are also Winradio Yahoo groups that exchange a lot of info on the sort of thing you are interested in.
You should place your requests there.

Utah County mass gathering ordinance prohibits the gathering of two hundred and fifty or more persons without a permit, bond, and Utah County Commission approval.

Research was conducted and no mass gathering permit had been obtained for this incident. However, a health department permit had been obtained and EMS personnel were contracted to be on scene for first aide.

>From several previous experiences with Rave parties of this size, a large amount of drug use and underage consumption of alcohol occur. In addition reports of sexual assaults, overdoses, firearm violations, vehicle burglaries, and numerous individuals drive from the party under the influence of alcohol and or drugs.

" Utah County Sheriff's Office Detectives interviewed several females that had attended a prior rave party in the Utah county area in the past month that had been sexual assaulted. These females stated that the combination of drugs and alcohol made them fear for their safety due to the groping and sexual assaults that occurred during the Rave party. In the last year alone one near fatal shooting was investigated by Utah County Sheriff's Office at a similar party.

Not fact.

The SW8 preceded the SW1 (which, with the addition of selectable sideband synchronous detection, became the SW2) by two years. The SW1 and 2 constituted Drake's budget line. But your central observation that the E1 is a knock-on from the 800 and the 2nd version of the SW8 is my understanding as well. The three are to my mind repackagings of the same core receiver, varying in quality of execution and the quantity of air included for the purchase price. The E1 adds welcome memory capabilities, superior display, and pbs.

So you don't like the tables turned? Big deal. I have been screwed over by more Republicans than i care to remember, and lost a home once because one wouldn't pay his bills.

I don't belong to either party because I vote issues, not party lines. I am sick and tired of the lies by the Republicans I see at every turn. Let me tell you about what happened last Saturday morning. After several years of hard work to for the local veterans to raise the money and wait while the contractors upgraded the Marion County Veteran's Memorial Park in Ocala there were supposed to be four letters written by VIPs and read at the re-dedication. I'll give you one guess as to who's letter didn't show up after months of nervous waiting because he is on vacation. What an insult to the local veterans. Then, he had the nerve to blame the post office for it not arriving on time. This has been the type of most of the Republicans that I have had the misfortune to meet for most of my life. I know that not all are like this, but the liars and thieves are all to common in that crowd.

To put it mildly, I wouldn't piss on a Republican to put the fire out, but I would look for a full gas can if they were one of the ones who had screwed me in the past.

Face it: You never even thought about the fact that at least eight (8) different host names resolve to the same IP address as the NIM Busters board. In fact, you have no idea how to find out that kind of thing, do you?

Here's the forward DNS lookup on four of them:

Host ------------------ IP address

the-forum.us ----------- 64.21.87.27
Brettcampbellcpa.com --- 64.21.87.27
Bsumbdytraining.com ---- 64.21.87.27
Claudediehl.com -------- 64.21.87.27

There are a total of eight or nine hosts at IP address 64.21.87.27, depending upon how you choose to count them. That fact makes it clear that the person who owns the domain "the-forum.us" probably doesn't own the machine which hosts it, and that leaves you no one to run to with a terms of service complaint. Can you say "virtual hosting?"

NIM Busters keeps its board up and running, and you remain left out in the cold. Oh, Boo hoo hoo.

In the future, the next NIM Buster's owner ought to register a different domain through GoDaddy while using the Domains by Proxy service to keep his name and phone number private. That would give you even more grief when you attempt your next TOSing.

<< Hi Rufus

What do you mean? Take HBO for example. The only "ads" are for their upcoming and new shows >>

Okay, you seem to have been referring to "premium" channnels only then? True that most of them show coming attractions, but even some premiums have taken to showing, albeit lesser amounts, ads between movies or feature programming.

But the rest of cable is overrun with commercials, just like broadcast..

<< I dunno, some people like to enjoy their lives and don't see a corporate agenda or other personal gripes that prevent them from ordering a pay service. >>

It's not that at all, I'm just a cheap bastard and would rather spend the money on other things. Radio gear, guitars/amps/effects, records and compact discs, etc. I got no problems with other doing what they want with their money, or what or where they watch on TV.

<< I enjoy cable TV >>

there was a lot I liked on cable as well, just not enough to make it worth what the cable company, in ever increasing monthly amounts, wanted to charge me for the usage

<< To each his own.... >> exactly. I'm just relating how I feel about it. I get most my news from the daily paper, still read it from front page to last section daily, and of course from ye olde internet. Get that free so I can live with that, LOL

Besides, the numb nut treats Usenet as a 'write only' medium. You don't think he reads these posts, do you?

Finally, I'm disappointed that eBay won't take action against him. They say that since his email address isn't the address they have on file for his account they can't do anything about the postings, even though they are against eBay's AUP. How stupid is that?

4008. Tivoli Audio Model 2

I bought The Tivoli Audio Model 2 last week. It came with an additional speaker. I also bought the Tivoli Audio subwoofer speaker.

However the subwoofer speaker is not very loud. Before I bought the subwoofer, I thought it will work well giving nice deep tones, but I can not hear it very much even when I have the vol. all the way up.

Also their is no tone button. I learned that a tone button is good to use when trying to hear stations that might have a near by interference.

I do not like buttons and the phone hole in the rear of the radio. They should all be in front. The bass vol. should be on the radio and not on the subwoofer speaker. And the dial spread is too dark to read!

But I must say the wood on this radio is nice. I haven't had a wooden radio in years.

* Is their a way to add a tone button? What device do I need?
* Is their a way to make the subwoofer louder?
* Can I add another speaker in the rec. hole?
* What could I use for an AM antenna with this radio?

The radio sounds nice but a little flat without a stronger bass.
>From a scale from 1-10 I give it a 7. Maybe a 8+ without these problems.

If I had a big old trunk-sized Hammarlund,
I'd probably do my SWL/MWL-ing at a table or desk.

It just seems so wimpy trying to manipulate a pocket-book-sized receiver.

No hand-full tuning knobs, no toggle switches, no glow of the 6.3v dial lamps.

...and try straining to the audio of a 2.5" speaker for 4 or 5 hours.....

I do my late night MW listening in bed now.
Only problem is that when I nod off to sleep,
I tend to "toss the radio"...
(find it all over the bedroom in the morning)

I will say this... no tube radio would survive the punishment.

Do any SW/MW listeners still have a "shrine" where their rig is set up ?

....end of general rambling....

Take a look at the Sangean equivalent - I've heard the audio is pretty good for a little radio.

Yeah, bad shit happens at raves, a lot of kids overdose on ecstasy and there's various weird shit that happens. But the reaction sounds like EXTREME overkill. All that was needed was to send a few sheriff's deputies out there in cars, flash their revolvers, and tell everybody to leave. The kids would have left without any problems. E doesn't make you violent, it's sort of like being stoned. Helicopters and machine gun toting troops with dogs kicking and beating and attacking people and threatening to kill them is way out of line to break up a rave. They really don't need to play Rambo with a bunch of drug addled teenagers. Next time they'll just round the kids up and open fire until they're all dead, then dump the bodies in the desert.

As I expected, you don't even have the guts to take a guess at the VIP in question. As far as responsibility, I have sued and won cases against two of them for "Conversion of Property" which means the thief who stole from you was in office at the time. Otherwise it would have just been two cases of car theft, and they would have spent time in jail. The lawsuit caused one of the bastards to not be re-elected, and his sleazy partner in crime to lose a 20 year streak of screwing people and getting away with it. Tell me, if you can, why a man would spend the time and money to get a law degree just to run a used car lot and junkyard?

I have no personal issues, but you are bent on creating something to satisfy yourself. Guess what? No one cares.

On the other hand, I have finally started getting involved in local politics. I had a small part in getting a new elementary school named after a local medal of honor winner who died while saving a number of other soldiers in his unit.

Now it looks like a group of us will have to do our best to get rid of two people on the school board at election time because they are making comments behind the scenes that the local veterans groups forced them to the vote for the new school's name, and then trying to stop the school from being built so they can change the name when construction resumes.

What do you do other than post nasty, off topic messages. Do you try to improve things, or do you just drag your knuckles down the sidewalk as you spew mind numbing political crap?

I think you might be right. Though, I still cant hear any Sitor B on those frequencies. I only hear the Sitor B on 518

No... Not with the weather fax. It sends a signal to sync/start the image process but as far as I know, there is no way to distinguish the content of the respective fax images. I know on NAVTEX you can set your decoder to record only the types of reports that you want, but not on weather fax.

All the RTTY that I have seen over the past five years on the NOAA reports have been 850 shift. I've never seen it as any other.

This IS a major global conflict. The only reason why the casualty count is so low right now is because this isn't your grandpa's war. The enemy views their struggle as lasting 500 years. With that sort of time on your hands, why rush? All they need is a big casualty event every few years in a major Western country and the rest of the time they can sit back and watch the West tear itself to pieces over the fear of a major attack. And you know what, it's working! All the half assed "security" measures we've taken over the last four years are meaningless to them, they can always find a way around them, and all it does is beat down our morale while boosting theirs. Whatever happened to "we have nothing to fear but fear itself"? Instead, the President SPREADS fear, even runs an election campaign on fear-and gets overwhelmingly reelected. What a bunch of pathetic sad sacks we Americans have become. If the average American exhibited a quarter of the bravery that you have shown in a long military career, we would be winning. We wouldn't have the disaster in Iraq, which was a "preventive war" based on fear. Americans need to get off the couch, get out of their sedentary lifestyles, lose the fear, get some spine for god's sake, and go out and kick ass. Our army is so bureaucratic and slow that a bunch of suicide bombers are running circles around it. We have no idea if there's another terrorist attack in the works because all the intercepts sit untranslated. Americans are lazy and fearful, and that goes for our government too.

Anyone else tried one of these? Can someone explain what the dial on the side of the battery/control unit does? It obviously sharpens the reception but I'm curious what exactly it does and if I'm using it right. Rolling the dial back and forth over a station makes the reception clearer. It's that simple? Any other tips for use?

Yea, it's a real miracle of science, isn't it? ;~) The dial on the side matches it to the frequency you have the radio tuned to. It is VERY touchy at the bottom end of the spectrum. Less so at the upper end but touchy, nonetheless. Don't expect much from it. It is a step up from the external wire antenna that comes with most new Chinese radio. For the price, you can't go wrong but the Sony ANLP-1 is much better. The Wellbrooke is supposed to be the "Holy Grail" but it's cost is up there with the price of a good used tabletop receiver...

He whined to the admin of the board to have his daily asskickings

But what a double standard, like when Davies posts under two dozen different names and spams as the shit can man on the board those posts fact is, Roger wins because you have to cheat by hiding posts and editing posts to "win."

Oh, and Roger wouldn't have to post "200"? posts (or so you say, mainly

Pretty good bet this is all by design.

First, the Tivoli/Kloss radios use some pretty heavy audio equalization to get "big" sound out of small speakers. Allowing any degree of manual control would allow the user to defeat the intentions of the designer, and so it's probably omitted as part of the design.

Second, the AM section on these radios is perfunctory at best. The antenna is a simple spool of wire inside the cabinet, sensitivity is mediocre, and selectivity pedestrian.

This is a program listener's radio, not a DX machine ... and one whose design is heavily weighted towards FM performance.

Be skeptical by all means.. but it is also prudent to not discard the account out of hand. As you said, let us wait and see. If even most of the things asserted did happen, it was overkill at the very least... they didn't even get that way at Woodstock (though they did have military aircraft purportedly doing flyovers).

And this would be better in an audio related newsgroup.

Subwoofers don't make bass louder. They just better reproduce what's there.

If you've got no bass from the source, then a subwoofer can't do a thing.

If a speaker can't reproduce low frequencies well, then of course those frequencies will be attenuated. A subwoofer covers those lower frequencies.
But their purpose is not to make the bass "louder", it's to ensure that the bass frequencies are there in the proportion to the rest of the signal that was the original case. Bass frequencies aren't "loud" in a simple speaker setup not because there's not enough amplification, but because the speaker can't reproduce those frequencies.

Before you can claim that a subwoofer isn't loud enough, you need to know whether there is much low frequency signal in the audio to begin with. And when fiddling with level controls, you don't want an exagferated amplification, you want to set the level so it simply reproduces the low frequencies to the extent that they would be in a decent speaker.

Take note of two things. One is that a real subwoofer is about reproducing really low frequencies. They are not about making a mediocre speaker better, but about extending the range of good speakers to reproduce frequencies that you may feel as much as hear. You can get away with a single subwoofer because at those frequencies there is no directionality, so stereo makes no sense. But they have to be used with speakers that can properly reproduce frequencies down to the point where a subwoofer adds something.

The other thing to note is that most "subwoofers" aren't. They are there to try to make up for crummy speakers that can't reproduce bass frequencies.
So you get a tweeter like speaker in the main speakers, and then a single maybe larger speaker to handle bass. But by then it's supposed to handle a much wider range of bass frequenecies, and above the point where the signals become directional. And the reality is that many of these "subwoofers" aren't really capable of dealing with low frequencies, because they are smaller than a "bookshelf" speaker that can do a better job at low frequencies.

'99 was pretty brutal. But that was probably a reaction to the

The only way to adjust the tone on a purist hi-fi is to change the speaker's relationship to the room. Move the boxes around. A big table top gives more bass than on top of a stool. Closer to the wall also increases bass. Keep all the speakers within a feet o of each other for ''mutual coupling'' which also reinforces the lows.

Oops. I made a typo. But once again, you put your foot in your own mouth...the word is spelled grammar, chowderhead, and the first letter should be in lower-case. So...who's got what coming? Does that kind of idiotic mistake make you a tard? No...that'd be much too great an elevation in your case. I won't even pick on you for your misuse of the word grammar, but here's a hint on how I could: it doesn't apply in this instance. You see, it's not my grammar that you're faulting. It's my spelling. Alright, I lied. I -will- pick on you for it. You're stupid on a multitude of levels.

Oh, wait. You're going to claim that was an intentional mistake to see if I'd catch it. Maybe I should start letting them go, just to make your day. Naw.

Pay more attention to your punctuation and capitalization before you take on the role of spelling-cop.

I think you claim title to that role. I seem to remember that you

Do you remember his claim that "God told me to run for president"?
Well it looks like it is a good thing that he didn't get the votes

I agree with you, it is not a Christian view. I wonder how it will

I'll bet you remember a lot of things. Of course, that has nothing to do with reality.

Then drop it.

Once again, you show yourself to be a fool. You just got done telling us that you never see any radio posts from me; either you were lying, or you've just spent a fair amount of time researching my past posts. Are you fixated on me, bierbarrel? Forget about me writing material for you; I couldn't possibly touch what you do to yourself. (That works on so many levels, doesn't it?)

Oooooh...attack my wallet. That hurts. Next you'll be teasing that I drive an old clunker and live in a mobile home. Still in third grade, are we?

It wasn't a question of money, it was a question of performance. I'm not surprised it went over your head.

So now you're saying Hallicrafter is a Chinese company?

Uh, now you're confusing me with your brother in arms, cuhulin. Try to keep up.

Well, that's terrible run of luck. Hopefully you will be able to do some portable listening to the big guns at least until your shack is back together.

Pretty much. But if enough people keep complaining, even EBay will yank him.

That's funny. You managed to actually make the thug alter his outside real world actions because of his incompetence in this ng. The internet magnifies peoples' idiocy, as he shows.
